MYSTERY MAN WINS MILLION

A Victoria wage-earner has become an instant millionaire through the Provincial Lottery which was drawn Feb. 28, the Times learned today.

The man, about 40, instantly quit his job and left Victoria to plan his future.

A spokesman for The Provincial in Toronto said a Victoria lawyer is acting as an intermediary for the millionaire to preserve his anonymity.

The Times has learned the man was earning only a moderate income and immediately decided never to work another day in his life, following confirmation that he has won one of the five $1 million prizes.

Lottery officials say the man indicated he plans to invest most of the money but will spend a large portion living in a grand manner.

"He was so excited about the win that he said he just had to leave Victoria for at least two weeks to think things over and plan for his new future," the official said.

He said he believed the man to be about 38 or 40, a family man and a wage earner.

The Victoria win means two of the five $1 million prizes have come to B.C.

PM Orders CBC Probe

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau asked the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission today to conduct an inquiry into allegations of separatist bias within the CBC.

In a letter to CRTC chairman Harry Boyle, Trudeau asked the federal broadcasting regulatory body to investigate whether the publicly-owned CBC is fulfilling its mandate to protect and promote national unity.

Officials in Trudeau's office indicated that both the CRTC and CBC top management are ready to go along with the inquiry.

The officials said Trudeau discused the proposal with Boyle on Thursday and again early today and has also discussed it with CBC presdient A. W. Johnson.

Both Boyle and Johnson were in meetings with their senior staff to discuss the Trudeau request and were not immediately available for comment.

Trudeau's letter asked Boyle to present a report by July 1 "given the profound significance of this situation."

"Doubts have been expressed as to whether the English and French television networks of the corporation generally, and in particular their public affairs, information and news programming, are fulfilling the mandate of the corporation," the letter said.

These doubts merited examination by the CRTC because the agency has the ability "to make as objective a determination as possible concerning them."

Trudeau and several senior cabinet members have criticized Radio-Canada, the French-language arm of the CBC, and have said that the majority of Radio-Canada employees are separatists

Trudeau told a news conference Thursday that he favored a CRTC investigation of whether Radio-Canada employees have allowed their separatist views to influence their work. He said the CRTC was better suited to conduct such an inquiry than a parliamentary committee.

Smith Wins Vote Aided by Blacks

SALISBURY (UPI) — With the help of black legislators and two whites summoned from sickbeds, Prime Minister Ian Smith today rammed through Parliament a bill drastically reducing the extent of all-white land in this predominantly black country.

The victory, with not a vote to spare, gave the government the "vital element" it requested in its bid to achieve an "internal" majority rule settlement excluding the left-leaning, recognized black nationalist leaders.

The bill passed the 66-member House of Assembly with exactly the two-thirds majority it required. It was the first time Smith has depended on black votes for a parliamentary victory.

The bill now goes to the 23-member Senate, where its approval is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

The government summoned two supporters from their sickbeds for the vote — Minister of Mines Ian Dillon and backbencher Jack Christie, who were both recovering from heart attacks.

The bells summoning members were rung and the lawmakers were asked to step to the right of the central bench to indicate a "yes" and to the left to signal a "no."

Of the 16 black members in the house, six voted for the bill, marking the first time Smith's white-minority government depended on them for passage of legislation. Ten blacks abstained.

Both the United States and Britain — the two countries most deeply involved in negotiations to end Rhodesia's growing racial conflict — have rejected concept of an internal solution.

Bennett Would Benefit

A company in which Premier Bill Bennett owns shares would stand to benefit if an attempt to remove property from the farmland freeze is successful, opposition MLA Gary Lauk said Thursday.

Lauk, former NDP economic development minister, raised the issue in the legislature during debate on the spending estimates of Environment Minister Jim Neilsen.

He told reporters he is making no charge of conflict or wrongdoing on Bennett's part, but said the public "has the right to know."

The premier, who was not in the House when the comments were made, said later he had made a full disclosure of his interests when he first became an MLA. He said Lauk's remarks were "typical."

During debate, Lauk said the Lieuwan farm near Houston in the Bulkley Valley lies close to a subdivision containing a shopping centre owned by Okanagan Holdings, a company in which Bennett owns shares.

Lauk claimed Okanagan Holdings stands to gain if the land-freeze exemption application succeeds, but did not enlarge on that statement.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips has said the B.C. Development Corporation is trying to purchase the Lieuwan property for use as a sawmill to provide badly-needed jobs in the area.

House records indicate that Bennett listed common shares in Okanagan Holdings when he filed his official statement of financial interests Jan. 17 this year.

On Wednesday, Liberal leader Gordon Gibson had told the House that Houston municipal council last year recommended the release of 300 acres of the Lieuwan farm from the agricultural freeze.

$50 ALLOWANCE BOOST

Gov't Gives Way On Handicapped

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Allowances for handicapped people in B.C. will increase about $50 a month effective July 1, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm announced today.

The about 10,000 single handicapped people will receive a new shelter allowance up to a maximum of $57 per month. The basic rate of $265 a month for single recipients does not change.

The between 500 and 700 families receiving handicapped allowances will get an extra $50 on the basic rates which are tied to the number of people in the family.

For example, a handicapped person with two dependents will receive a basic rate of $585 a month, up from $535.

Vander Zalm also announced the formation of a homemaker program for handicapped families, designed to encourage the spouse of a handicapped person to work.

The new program also places handicapped people in a separate category under the Guaranteed Available Income for Need legislation so future consideration can be given to handicapped rates independent of other income assistance programs.

The shelter allowance for single handicapped people is the biggest change in the new program, Vander Zalm said.

Under the new program, the ministry of human resources will pick up 75 per cent of rental costs above $75 per month up to a maximum of $57.

Initial reaction to Vander Zalm's announcement was that the increases are not enough.

Jean Swanson of the Downtown Eastside Residents Association in Vancouver, one of the groups lobbying for changes in assistance rates, said the shelter allowance for single handicapped people is "totally inadequate."

She said the average price of an apartment in Vancouver is now $192 per month and the $57 won't help much.

Vander Zalm's announcement completely ignores other recipients of income assistance, she said.

The residents' association and other low income and handicapped groups, in a brief to the government earlier this week asked that the basic allowance for a single handicapped recipient be increased to $284 and that the ministry of human resources pick up the full cost of rent.

Vander Zalm said the shelter allowance program will benefit only about half of the 10,000 single handicapped recipients.

People living with relatives or in government subsidized housing are not faced with the financial burden of those trying to live independently, Vander Zalm said, so the increase in the shelter allowance is geared to help those trying to live alone.

Vander Zalm said homemaker policies for handicapped people have in the past acted as a deterrent towards the spouses of handicapped persons working.

The homemaker service was tied to the family's income from outside work and people often found they were better off not to work because the cost of homemaker service ate up their entire income.

The new homemaker service, also effective July 1, is not tied to family income.

The cost of the programs announced by Vander Zalm totals $6.3 million of which the province will pay $4.5 million with the federal government paying the rest.

The increase in handicapped rates will be shared on a 50-50 basis with the federal government, but the provincial government must pay the total cost of the homemaker service program.

Medium Smith and King's crystal

King Psyched Out

OTTAWA (CP) — An "interview" with the late prime minister Mackenzie King came to an abrupt end Wednesday night because of the "disruptive psychic energy" emanating from an uninvited reporter at the seance.

Spiritualist Geraldine Smith, who claimed to have made contact with King—he died in 1949—said he only wanted to be questioned by representatives of the CBC, which had paid her travel expenses from Brampton, Ont.

The proceedings, recorded in the shadowy, oak-panelled library of Laurier House, King's former residence, will be broadcast in CBC's Sunday Morning program.

It was produced by Angus McClellan who put most of the questions to King through the 24-year-old spiritualist, who said she summoned the ghost of King after entering a trance.

King, said to have staged seances in the old mansion himself, wasn't terribly forthcoming in the abbreviated interview.

He spoke vaguely—through Miss Smith—about his own writing, about the late prime minister Lester Pearson and about the problems of Quebec separation.

The spiritualist said that if the proceedings had not been disrupted by the presence of the unwanted reporter she would have gone into a second stage of the trance, in which she would assume King's facial characteristics and his voice mannerisms.

A number of reporters and photographers were invited to the seance but when others left, Brian Gory of the Ottawa Journal said he hid behind a sofa.

A commotion developed when he was discovered and he finally left, he said, but Miss Smith complained that by that time King's spirit had also departed.

Extra Guards for Hockey

Times News Services

Eight uniformed city police officers and four security guards have been hired by the Moose Jaw Canucks for the hockey team's game tonight with the Melville Millionaires in Moose Jaw.

Civic Centre manager Jim Chadwick said today they have been hired to maintain order at the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League game following a Thursday night fight in Melville between rival fans.

Maureen Mayer, 20, of Moose Jaw, was taken to hospital after being kicked in the back Thursday night but she was later released.

A police spokesman said charges were not laid following the Thursday night scuffles. He said he thought both teams' fans were equally to blame for the trouble.

In Lethbridge, meanwhile, Doug Lecuyer, 18, of the Calgary Centennials, has been charged with common assault following a brawl during a Western Canada Hockey League game with the Lethbridge Broncos last week, city police said today.

Fast Talk Keeps B.C. Firms Corralled

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

The attractive business development climate of Washington State has caught the eye of many B.C. businessmen, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Thursday.

Only some fast-talking by the B.C. Development Corp. (BCDC) has kept the firms from roaming Phillips said.

The minister was commenting on ads placed recently in Vancouver newspapers touting the advantages of establishing a business in Whatcom County which lies along the border in northwestern Washington.

The ads are placed by the Whatcom County Development Council and offer free research information on such things as sites, regulations, assistance programs, and financing to companies wishing to relocate or develop new businesses in the county.

Roy Gillespie, the executive director of the development council, said the ads are designed to lure Canadian businessmen to the U.S.

He said Canadian businessmen no longer have confidence in the government because of all the problems in the country and because labor is dictating government policy.

Phillips said his ministry has been aware of similar-type ads for almost a year.

"There have been many businesses in B.C. I know have looked into the State of Washington with a view to relocating their business there or putting in a new business."

Either the ministry of economic development or the B.C. Development Corp., the Crown corporation set up to encourage the development of B.C. industries, has heard about some of the roving businessmen and "talked them out of it," the minister said.

But it's been close a couple of times.

Phillips said a major new B.C. industry was "almost lost" to the lures of Washington State.

He did not want to identify the industry.

The problem, says Phillips, is red tape and lots of it.

"I'm not attacking any of the groups involved, but there is too much red tape in B.C.

Holdup No. 24

"Is that all?" the bandit asked Shell service station attendant Lori Kenney, 17, after being handed the cash.

Assured it was, the bandit, who wore a dark blue ski mask and carried a handgun, fled north on Foul Bay Road from the station at Fort and Foul Bay.

Police said the bandit walked in to the station about 9:30 p.m. and asked Miss Kenney: "How much you got?"

She then handed him all the money in the till.

Police describe the suspect as about five feet 10 inches tall, with dark brown collar-length hair. He was wearing beige cord pants and possibly a dark leather jacket.

The robbery was the second this week. On Wednesday night a lone robber held up Ron's Chevron station, 2200 Quadra, and escaped with $70.

Boeing Inquiry Launched

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau is now working through U.S. diplomatic channels, and is prepared to use "whatever means necessary" to determine if any Canadians accepted improper payments from the Boeing Aircraft Co.

At his weekly news conference Thursday, Trudeau said he has asked the U.S. ambassador to Ottawa, Thomas Enders to obtain through diplomatic channels information not available from the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

It is more difficult to get information from the SEC than it was from the congressional committee which investigated international bribery by Lockheed Aircraft Corp. several years ago, Trudeau said.

"There is no hard evidence any Canadians either inside or outside government have received anything, so for the time being the benefit of the doubt still lies with innocence," he said.

He also said Canadian ambassador to Washington Jake Warren had also been asked "to find out more about it from the U.S. and Justice

ESKIMO FINDS FROZEN SUB

OTTAWA (CP) — — RCMP are investigating a report today that a submarine has been found frozen in the sea ice off the Arctic Coast near the tiny settlement of Coppermine, N.W.T.

An RCMP spokesman said the force's headquarters in the Northwest Territories have been asked to provide more information on the report.

The story in Coppermine is that an Eskimo hunter found an antenna sticking through the ice. Chiping away at the ice, he discovered the top of a submarine.

and it's a deterrent to economic development."

He said Washington State has developed a system which amounts to all the participating groups in a development — such as municipalities, environmental agencies, regulatory bodies — being "locked in a room and told not to come out until they have an answer."

"It gets things done," Phillips said

He said he has encouraged some changes in BCDC so it will be more effective in cutting red tape.

The corporation can now assemble industrial land for a potential development and deal with the government agencies involved for such things as pollution controls, permits and highway access permits.

That cuts down on the red tape, Phillips said, although the problem hasn't been eliminated entirely.

He said the ads and the effect they were having on B.C. was one of the main reasons for making the changes in the Crown corporation.

Boeing Inquiry Launched

The Boeing Co. is being investigated by the SEC in connection with possible payoffs on sales of Boeing aircraft from 1968 onwards.

A district court last Friday ordered a list of so-called consultants sealed following arguments by the state department and the Boeing Co. last month that disclosure of the names would harm' U.S. foreign relations.

A state department official in Washington said Thursday he does not believe any Canadian consideration is involved in the department's desire to keep the list secret.

Hurt Owl Flies On One Wing

Mrs. McKeever, who runs a charitable refuge for injured birds of prey at Vineland, Ont., insisted that the bird travel with her in the passenger section because of its delicate condition.

The rare bird, protected under the Wildlife Act, suffered a compound fracture to its upper right wing bone Wednesday when it flew into a tree in the Pine Falls area northeast of Winnipeg.

Only an artery muscle kept the wing attached to the bird's body. A provincial government employee recovered the bird and it was held in safekeeping until Mrs. McKever arrived within 24 hours.

An Air Canada supervisor obtained a go-ahead for Mrs. McKeever to take the owl with her in the passenger compartment. The owl was put in a pair of baby's jumpers hastily purchased at an airport shop and wrapped in a large towel, and was off for the Ontario refuge.

Pension Overhaul Demand

OTTAWA (CP) — The Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC) launched an advertising campaign today in 40 major newspapers to demand a government overhaul of the pension system in Canada.

The public service union, which represents 177,000 federal employees, is calling for adequate pensions for the many Canadians who are not members of private pension plans.

Andy Stewart, PSAC president, said in a statement that only 40 per cent of Canadians are covered by private pension plans. But these private plans were subsidized indirectly by other Canadians through purchase of consumer goods and services.

Stewart said Canadians do not seem to realize this. They should be demanding that all Canadians be protected.

"The Canada and Quebec pension plans are not enough and perhaps these should be overhauled to accomplish the goal of an adequate pension for all Canadians upon retirement."

the weather

Many parts of the B.C. Interior were relatively clear overnight as a ridge of high pressure over the area was moving only slowly eastward. Occasional rain was occurring over the open coast. Rain associated with a Pacific disturbance will spread along the open coast this morning with occasional rain reaching the lower mainland later in the day. A few showers of rain or snow will cross the central Interior this afternoon and evening. Unsettled weather will continue on Saturday with showers in some areas. The present temperature pattern will persist.

Bargain Prices for Booze in B.C.

Canadian Press

It is the first sale of this magnitude in B.C. but smaller clearances have been held previously, Nick Clark, stocks director for the Liquor Administration Board, said Thursday.

Most of the 136 items being cleared are stocks that are slow moving—90 of them will be delisted. The products are widely scattered. Some stores have large selections and others virtually none.

Many of the sale items are 13-ounce mickey bottles of liquor and Clark says that "in some cases, a great saving can be had by buying two on-sale mickeys instead of the regular bottle which will still be available after the sale."

The sale items include:

- ● Nine rye whiskies (such as 500 just-acquired cases of Barclay's Royal Canadian at $5.20 a bottle—previous price $7);
- ● Seven scotch whiskies (such as Islay Mist at $6.80 normally $8.50);
- ● Nine rums, five gins, one bourbon, one Irish whiskey, 11 liqueurs and one imported beer.
- ● 68 de-listed Canadian wines — many of which are available in other sizes — including 12 still reds, six still whites, 10 roses, nine ports, five sherries and a gaggle of sparklers and others listed as "miscellaneous" such as Uncle Ben's Hot Goose (on sale at $1.70).
- ● 24 imported wines, including eight whites, four reds, five ports and sherries and five sparkling wines — most of which will still be available in different sizes. Three premium wines, however, are being wiped out because sales are too slow at the price. They are Gevrey Chambertin (at $9—regularly $11.25), Chateaux L'Arosee-Grand Cru ($10.25—normally $12.80), and Meursault ($9.15—down from $11.45).

The sale will continue until the stocks are sold but the reduced prices will be just a memory April 1 when domestic and scotch whiskies go up 25 to 30 cents a bottle and some white burgundies and beaujolais reds increase by as much as 50 per cent.

Rights Aid Test Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said he is considering applying some form of human rights test to countries to see if Canadian non-food aid should be cut off.

But the minister made clear —and Prime Minister Trudeau reiterated in another forum — that there would be no cutoff of food for starving people because of the form of government that rules them — dictatorship and repressive of human rights or not.

The minister was testifying before the Commons external affairs committee and Trudeau, told of Jamieson's remarks later, said he would be interested in hearing the minister's views.

Meanwhile, both men said they are looking closely at whether the Canadian government should be more public in its condemnation of treatment of dissidents in Eastern Europe and elsewhere but added that quiet diplomacy has seemed the best in dealing with reunification of families divided by ideological curtains.

Meanwhile, David MacDonald (PC—Egmont) introduced a private members bill in the Commons that would force the government to stop aid to countries repressing human rights.

In the committee Douglas Roche (PC—Edmonton Strathcona) condemned Canada's foreign policy, saying it is unclear, unimaginative and uninspiring, and called for Canada to duplicate United States President Carter's openness in condemning human rights violations.

Several MPs noted that Cyrus Vance, new U.S. state secretary, has said aid to three countries might be cut because of theilr governments' human rights records.

Trudeau said in a news conference that he has always felt the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) has made sure its aid goes to the people and not to government. However, he would be interested in hearing from Jamieson.

Speaking in different places, both the prime minister and the external affairs minister said almost the same thing about openness in criticizing governments for alleged violations of human rights.

Whether the Canadian government should be an outspoken as the Carter administration has been in something that will be studied as the two governments prepare for the Belgrade followup conference to the Helsinki accords, Trudeau and Jamieson said.

FIRE! SO PUSH . . .

MEATH PARK, Sask. (CP) — The volunteer fire department's truck had to be pushed to the scene of a fire in this community 20 miles northeast of Prince Albert, said Mayor Bill Feschuk.

The mayor said three men noticed smoke coming from Meath Park General Store and pushed the truck to the scene when it failed to start.

"Some jackass siphoned all the gas out of the tank," Feschuk said in a telephone interview.

He said the trio experienced further difficulties when they tried to operate the truck's chemical fire extinguisher.

Both air tanks used to provide propulsion to the chemical were opened when only one should have been opened part way. The chemical was expelled much too quickly.

They also had trouble connecting fire hoses to the hydrant because they failed to use the necessary couplings.

"You can't connect two female ends together," the mayor said.

Feschuk said the fire was extinguished before any serious damage occurred. A number of residents in the town are familar with operation of the equipment and it is unfortunate none of them were present.

He said town council is considering the purchase of a pumper truck, but the cost is $20,000 to $30,000.

North Van Ex-Mayor Dies at 61

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Ron Andrews, 61, former mayor of the North Vancouver district and former chairman of the Greater Vancouver Regional District, died today in hospital in North Vancouver.

Andrews had served 10 years as mayor and had been a member of the North Vancouver district council since 1958. He twice ran for the legislature as a Social Credit candidate and was narrowly defeated by Liberal Gordon Gibson.

He is survived by his wife, a son and daughter.

He was recently named a freeman of North Vancouver District.

Churchill Art: $146,700

LONDON (UPI) — Five paintings belonging to Baroness Clementine Churchill, the 91-year-old widow of Sir Winston Churchill, were sold for $146,700 today at Christie's art auction house.

Lady Churchill, financially squeezed between mushrooming inflation and falling investment income, put the five treasured paintings on the auction block to help defray her living expenses.

The paintings, including two by Sir Winston, were sold for 2½ times the revised pre-sale estimate, which Christie's doubled just before bidding began.

All five were bought by London dealers.

His Mimizan, done in 1924 while Churchill was staying with the Duke of Westminster at Mimizan, 60 miles south of Bordeaux, France, went for $81,600.

Sir William Nicholson's Nesting Swan, Chartwell sold for $9,350 and his Black Swans at Chartwell brought $6,460.

Sir John Lavery's portrait of Lady Churchill and daughter Sarah, done in 1914 and titled Mrs. Winston Churchill with Her Daughter, Sarah, went for $5,100.

Sir John and his wife were among Churchill's first instructors when he took up painting as a hobby in 1915.

Christie's sources originally estimated the five paintings could together bring up to $34,000 with Sir Winston's two landscapes going for $11,900 each.

Human Rights Issue Stressed In Major British Policy

By BERNARD NOSSITER
WashingtonPost

LONDON — The British government Thursday gave a resounding endorsement to President Carter's campaign for human rights in the Soviet world.

In a major address, Davic Owen, the youthful new British foreign minister, cited "President Carter, whose obvious concern for the whole area of human rights is crucially important."

Owen flatly rejected the Soviet contention that highlighting abuses abroad amounts to "interfering in other people's internal affairs."

"Abuses of human rights, wherever they may occur, are the legitimate subject of international concern," Owen said. "The dignity of man transcends national frontiers."

Britain's government, he said, "shall not hesitate to state our views frankly where we consider the performance of countries to be demonstrably unsatisfactory ... The Warsaw Pact countries had and still have much ground to make up."

Owen explicitly aligned London with "the attitude" of the Carter administration, decrying violations "in every corner of the globe."

"We will apply the same standards and judgments to Communist countries," he said, "as we do to Chile, Uganda and South Africa."

Owen's address to the Diplomatic and Commonwealth Writers' Association is the strongest support the president has received from abroad for his new departure.

The French and other Western governments have refrained from publicly criticizing his tactics but made clear their distate for them.

The 38-year-old foreign secretary spoke out on the eve of a visit he and Prime Minister James Callaghan will make to Washington next week.

The timing was deliberate. It is known that top foreign office officials have been laboring for weeks over a coherent statement of the British view toward detente. This was a major and private preoccupation of the late foreign secretary Anthony Crosland's final weeks.

His death 11 days ago brought in Owen, who became the vehicle for Thursday night's expression of the British views.

In his speech, Owen cautioned that governments "must balance morality with reality," that their language will frequently be less 'exhilarating" than the "highly-articulate statements of famous exiles from Eastern Europe."

ECONOMIC PRIORITY FOR CALLAGHAN MEET

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister James Callaghan said today he expects world economic problems and the Western economic summit conference in London in May to be the main topics of his talks with President Carter in Washington next week.

"Our main theme is likely to be the impact of the economic policies of the various industrialized Western countries and especially the United States, which is the giant of the free world — the impact of these policies, both domestic and external, on the rest of the free world,' Callaghan said.

Callaghan and foreign secretary, David Owen, will travel to Washington in the controversial Anglo-French supersonic Concorde airliner.

Tax-Deductible Fines New Business Loophole

OTTAWA (CP) — Companies fined for polluting could start deducting the fine as a business expense on their tax forms because of a loophole opened by a recent federal court decision, says tax lawyer Arthur Drache.

The loophole might also permit a deduction for a company fined for violating safety regulations, a doctor fined for double parking on the way to a patient or a businessman given a speeding ticket while rushing to an important appointment.

In an interview, Drache referred to a Federal Court of Canada decision allowing a New Brunswick trucking company, Day and Ross Ltd , to claim fines paid for overweight trucks, misplaced registration papers and missing mudflaps and licence plates as a business expense.

Truckers pay a fine for vehicles over certain weight limits because they damage public roads. Where a trucker knows in advance his load exceeds the weight limit, he may purchase a special overweight permit.

The judge in this case, Jean-Eudes Dube, former federal minister of public works, said the company often picked up a series of loads at various points and could not verify the weight each time.

He said that in view of the availability of overweight permits, exceeding weight limits should not be considered "outrageous transgressions of public policy." He overruled a federal revenue department decision not to allow the deduction of the fines—which ranged from $250 to $20,000 over six years — as a business expense.

PERILOUS PRANK

GILROY, Calif. (UPI) — This rural Northern California town came within 40 feet of being "blown to smithereens" by young pranksters who diverted a freight train carrying 64 tons of compressed gas, police said Thursday.

Only 40 feet of track remained between the 100-car Souther Pacific train and a dead end at the California Canners and Growers Cannery near the centre of town when it rolled to a stop Sunday night.

"If it has been travelling at normal speed it would have sailed right through and blown the place to smithereens," said Gilroy detective Bob Clark.

"We would have had one hell of a fire and explosion."

An unidentified crewman, said a derailment would have blown Gilroy off the map.

Two 15-year-old boys were arrested Wednesday and booked on a felony charge of attempting to derail a train, an offence carrying a possible life sentence for adults.

They told police they threw the rail switch diverting the train off the main line to a dead-end spur "just to see what would happen."

An Unceremonious Report

A refreshing lack of flim flam characterized the provincial government's third quarter financial report, unceremoniusly plopped on reporters' desks last Tuesday. The lack of ballyhoo surrounding this document — Finance Minister Evan Wolfe held a press conference to explain the first report and Premier Bennett gave a province-wide television address following the second— reflects the sour state of the provincial economy. There was simply nothing to herald this time, and the government wisely refrained from putting its foot in its mouth with elaborate explanations. Many of the figures had already been revealed by the comptroller-general's nine month review, made public along with the budget in January.

After deducting non-budgetary items such as ferry leaseback arrangements and the recovery of monies from special funds, the province had a $34.7 million surplus at year end. But the government is quick to say that the outlook for the full 1966-1977 year indicates the surplus will be considerbly reduced by March 31, the end of the fiscal year. British Columbia will have a balanced budget one way or another. Considering the fact the national economy lost ground in 1976, the Bennett administration's careful budgeting and financial caution cannot be dismissedcompletelyas the callous acts of an insensitive government.

Both revenues and expenditures were below original forecasts for the current three-month period. Over the first nine months of the fiscal year revenues were $49 million less than anticipated, and expenditures were $109.3 million less than predicted in the original budget. Given a total budget of $3.6 billion the government has been quite accurate in its predictions. But lower levels of revenue were most noticeable in sales tax and personal income tax, an indication that the large tax increases brought in by the Socreds in 1976 were bad medicine for an already ailing economy.

Perhaps the brightest note occurred in the crown corporation financial picture. Excluding the British Columbia Railway and the B.C. Ferries which lost money, public corporations contributed a whopping $215 million to government in the first nine months of 1976, creating an ironic note for Socred finances. In oppositioh this administration railed against every purchase in the private sector by the NDP, yet it was these same crown companies that allowed the Socreds to have a small surplus in the first nine months of a disastrous year. Without that extra $215 million even this administration of "financial wizards" would be hard pressed to balance the budget.

Now that we have had three of these quarterly financial reports one can't help the feeling that the government is dismayed, even nervous, about the province's economic performance. The first report predicted a deficit, the second forecast break even or even a small surplus. Each time it got a little better, as though the government was carefully orchestrating a financial comeback in tune with its campaign promises. But in this the latest report, we see no positive escalation, no flourishes along with the presentation. It is as if the Bennett administration sobered up following the euphoria of its election victory, finally realizing that businessmen in three piece suits can do no better than social workers in an economy largely dependent on national and international factors. If in fact the government is running scared, that's good — it may spark its imagination to get the economy moving, as it promised a year ago December.

Questions

Transport Minister Otto Lang's announcement earlier in the week of the creation of VIA Rail Canada Inc. to take over and operate passenger trains probably is the death knell of transcontinental passenger service in this country.

He didn't say as much specifically, but the rust is on the tracks. Clearly, VIA will emphasize short haul, high-speed service in the more densely populated regions of the country. That is, the Windsor, Ont. to Quebec City corridor where passenger trains can compete with the airlines.

The minister said that under the present rail passenger set-up, Canadian National Railways and CP Rail would have had to pump $400 million into the system in the next two and a half years for improvements to equipment.

"VIA will co-ordinate passenger services, cut out or reduce under-used routes and generally increase efficiency to the tune of cutting that federal cost in half," said Lang.

So VIA's consolidation and cost-cutting measures will account for the savings. No one except the railroads knows what either figure is based upon, but experience in the U.S. with Amtrak, the public passenger rail corporation, suggests it is vastly underestimated.

Problems in Canada with rail passenger service are not as severe as in the U.S. but VIA Rail will take over some fairly old equipment. Even on the "crack" transcontinental trains, the newest rolling stock dates from the mid-1950s. It is wearing out.

There are questions about the method of consolidation. Why was VIA Rail made a subsidiary of the CNR, another crown corporation? It would seem to relieve CP Rail entirely of any responsibility for passenger service and give it all to CN. Will CP be required to contribute to the operation of VIA Rail? Who will own the roadbeds and equipment the new corporation will use? In the case of Vancouver Island and the E and N, will VIA Rail also take over some of the remaining land grant as well as the passenger service?

These are but a few of the questions which Canadians will want answered before they give the highball signal to VIA Rail.

W. A. WILSON

A Malaise In The Country

OTTAWA — It is now all of three years since a badly worried deputy minister here made the comment that he had never known this country to be so far from any sort of consensus.

There is a malaise in the country, whether it is Western alienation or the discontent with Confederation of the Quebec separatists.

Unhappily, the sort of consensus that is necessary is not emerging through the political process, which is where it would be expected. That process, instead, is particularly full of discord. One of those who has been attempting to help along the development of some degree of consensus is Judith Maxwell of the C. D. Howe Institute. The words with which she opened a recent apeech reveal how perplexing the present period is even for those with a high level of special training.

"I chose the topic of policy targets for today because I have been having so much difficulty in my own work recently in formulating policy prescriptions that make sense for both the short term and the long term."

Economic Shocks

A bit later she remarked that "we are entering budget season 1977 and there is no underlying consensus in the Canadian community about what targets to set for economic growth, price increases or unemployment rates."

Then she posed five major questions, acknowledging that she does not know the answers to them but pointing out how important it is that they should be answered.

To begin with, what rate of inflation is acceptable? Once we would all have said that it should be kept down below two per cent a year. Now we must ask whether, if we could get it down to four per cent, it would stay there over time, providing there are no more bad economic shocks such as oil embargoes.

"Or are there basic biases in the system that would cause the rate to accelerate even without new price shocks?" Miss Maxwell demanded.

She is surely correct: These questions have not been answered. So the government must contemplate the exit from controls with no real knowledge of sustainable price performance. That is the sort of problem that led a very senior official to respond recently, when I asked how he was, "If you mean my physical health, fine."

Miss Maxwell's next question was, "What rate of unemployment is acceptable and sustainable?" We used to think of three per cent as representing good performance. Now an economist is justified in calling that a "wild day dream in the short run." Is it also a day dream in the long run? We are not even agreed on the real composition of the labor force, which has expanded not only from demographic causes but from social ones as well.

How far are some of these new workers only marginal members of the work force? It seems to me that because the cost of unemployment is so heavy we run a risk of being very convenient in our thinking when we talk too easily of "marginal" membership in the labor force.

PIERRE TRUDEAU
. . . can he cure it?

To go on with Miss Maxwell's questions. What rate of productivity growth should we be aiming for and how should the target be expressed? What constitutes a viable balance of payments? What combinations of mutually consistent targets for employment, prices, productivity and growth are possible over the medium-term?

The unresolved issue of gas from the Arctic is not a bad example of how far from agreement perfectly well-meaning people are today. One school of thought, extremely worried over energy supplies in the less than middle future, believes that gas from the north should be brought south and that even it will fall far short of solving the problem. Another school insists that environmental and social questions are all-important.

Many of these people, among them the leader of the NDP, Ed Broadbent, are so convinced of their view that they reject the entire project even before the studies have been completed, before the vital supply and requirements issue has been faced.

I accept the sincerity of these people but I would like to see them relate their position to energy consumption in the country, energy suppliers, our balance of payments problems now and half a dozen years down the line and, most of all, to employment. It is easy, and it is certainly fashiohable, to talk about the "conserver society" and the unexpected desirability of slower growth but these ideas need to be much more closely related to employment prospects than they often are.

Sincere People

In this period of general uncertainty, the prime mnister's contributions have been unsatisfactory. The most memorable that bore specifically on the problem were those famous year-end broadcasts with which he wound up 1975. They did far more to raise the level of uncertainty in the country than to resolve it and they were not, indeed, as good a job of putting forth the vital questions as Miss Maxwell has been doing. Nor have Mr. Trudeau's opponents been contributing much to the process of reconstructing some sort of consensus in the country.

It is hard to take a political leader seriously when, as with Mr. Broadbent's approach to the Mackenzie valley pipeline, he cannot trouble to await the outcome of by far the most thorough and wide-ranging inquiries into all the related issues that we have ever launched in such a matter. When the evidence can so readily be swept aside without a thought, what then would be convincing?

There seems to be little doubt that Mr. Clark is doing an admirable job of reorganizing the Conservative party from the inside, producing from it a far more coherent political body than it has been. He may be doing as well with the party's organization across the country and in Quebec he at least wants the Tories to have their own organization, not to be dependent on some one else's. But like the other party leaders, Mr. Clark is not doing much either to give the country any sense of direction or even to suggest what the direction might be. That is why people are finding him disappointing.

Fuel Use

My proposal that the core municipalities join together in some symbolic gesture to focus attention and public awareness on our continued frivolous abuse of hydrocarbon fuels has received substantial coverage by the media. I am most appreciative of this since any publicity of this kind may encourage fuel conservation. Citizens might even be encouraged to write their MPs and MLAs and suggest that in view of an imminent continental energy crisis perhaps we should have a national and provincial energy policy.

The idea of a "leave your car at home" day obviously did not mean that everyone could suddenly jump on the buses. Clearly that would immediately overload the system and bring the wrath of regular users down on the head of whoever suggested it. It is equally clear that everyone could not leave their cars at home since alternate transportation is not available. Both these points were made by me every time the idea was discussed.

What I had in mind were such things as pooling cars to carry perhaps four people instead of one, extensive use of bicycles by those fit and capable to use them, putting additional buses into service for that one day and even walking a few city blocks and leaving the car in the parking lot.

The idea was presented to the intermunicipal committee as just that—an idea. Unfortunately there were only four members present at that meeting and they were unimpressed.

The impetus and publicity obtained through press coverage will not be completely lost. I have contacted Derrick Mallard of CASE (Citizens Association to Save the Environment) and suggested that they continue to promote a demonstration of this kind. His reception was positive and enthusiastic.

One final point. Media comment has pointed out that I use a motor car. I find it difficult to understand what this has to do with underlining the need for more careful, planned use of fuel. We are a one-car family and have an automobile powered by a 1500 cc engine. It is interesting to ponder on the fact that if the average family in North America subscribed to that policy we would not be facing a fuel crisis and Canada would not need imported fuel.—Ald. Ian Cass, 3844 Merriman Drive.

Pious Answer

When well-fed citizens hasten to agree that the world owes a living or better to the masses of the "starving millions," they have usually just seen another possibly authentic photo of pathetic youngsters in ads for contributions to various organizations, which may or may not deliver the dollars.

The world's food potential is finite, in spite of brave talk of wood pulp bread from vanishing forests. And births seem infinite, in spite of diseases, wars, floods and quakes.

There's a pious answer to: "Why don't they control the births?" Mothers must produce assembly-line babes so that enough may survive to support the parents in old age. Why subsidize this parental selfishness? These parents seem not to give a damn about the suffering of their pawns. They're thinking of their own welfare, in the i expensive, ready pleasure of procreation, and in the surety of having another gaunt eight-yearpold son to begin driving a bullock for hire; or the next 11-year-old daughter, no hibiscus blossom in her hair, to serve in dirty brothels. — N. Leckley, Victoria.

Seal Hunting

So now the British are upset about the Newfoundland seal hunt. A picture in your Feb. 28 edition shows a large billboard in London entitled Canada's Shame depicting a man about to club a seal.

Recently I read of strong objections to the hunt in the morning paper written by an Englishman living in Victoria. However, I haven't seen any letters in the press from people such as this objecting to English torture of Irish prisoners. But then seals are a much more popular cause than people, aren't they?

For hundreds of years seal hunting has been a respectable and important seasonal industry in Newfoundland. Despite much hardship and danger, fishermen have traditionally "gone to the ice" in order to supplement their meagre livelihood. Back home in port, residents anxiously await the safe return of the sealing vessels. As well as the cash crop of pelts, people on shore line up at the docks to purchase "flippers," the shoulder portion of the seal which is a food delicacy.

I wonder who's concerned about cruelty to such species as Pacific salmon? Sports fishermen, who are not in need of a livelihood or food, catch these fish daily. Of course, those hooks in a salmon's mouth are not cruel, that's just "sport!"

Where is the balance in news reporting to be found in this matter of the annual seal hunt? It's time for some unbiased investigative reporting. Let's have both sides of this story researched and reported objectively and fairly.— S.-J.E., Victoria.

Abundance

In reply to letter in the Times, 24 February(There's A Way), R.S.B. fails to recognize that the installation of energy driven machines and the automation of same has not only made it a possibility to produce an abundance for all North Americans but has made it possible with the employment of less and less workers who become the unemployed. Because kilowatt-hours have replaced man-hours, because the unemployed cannot receive income in the form of money at the same level as the workers and because our free enterprise system effects the distribution of its goods and services by means of commodity evaluation and uses money to do so, then technology is not the culprit — our price system is the villain.

It must also be recognized that any free enterprise monetary system, contrary to physical laws, requires continual exponential growth which necessitates the raising or borrowing of money supplied by the banks and the financial investment sector. If these transactions did not take place these bastions of the price system would rapidly end up in bankruptcy, the interest, their life blood would no longer flow.

Technocracy's social design for the operation of North America's high speed technology in accordance with the physical laws of nature, with minimal pollution, minimal use and maximum reuse of resources, most efficient use of energy, and the guarantee of a high standard of living with minimal period and hours of work for all citizens from birth to death, has been available since 1933. Technocracy through its continental membership, via the communications media, through briefs and monthly magazines and by public lectures has reached out to inform North Americans of our social demise and of its social design for survival.—J. J. Gibson, 920 Easter Road.

Ban Fishooks

Now that public furor seems to have succeeded in stopping recreational shooting of pheasants in North Saanich, let us now be consistent and ban fishooks. The recreational pastime of sports fishing, which is so popular in this area, is just as sadistic and cruel, and a much greater risk to life by drowning.

When one group starts to make moral decisions for another, it opens bitter controversy when, because we believe in personal "freedom," we are supposed to allow for all sorts of choices.

Being human, we always tend to strain at gnats (sports shooting) and swallow camels (the threat to all life from oil spills and nuclear build-up!). — Mrs. Edith Gardner, 11145 Heather Rd.

NDP Mistakes

With reference to the letter by C. L. Clements which appeared in your paper on Thursday, February 24, where increases in ICBC, sales tax, ferry fares and income tax were said to be the cause of the economic uncertainty in this province. Perhaps the writer should realize that if the former NDP government had the foresight to charge realistic prices instead of giving away more money than was coming in, this province wouldn't be in the situation it is today, and may we all pray that an NDP government doesn't return to botch it up again,—P. Langdon, Victoria.

Political Irony

I think it is significant that demonstrators at the parliament buildings during the time of the NDP government consisted of people associated with mining companies and stock promotions. Under the Socreds it is the handicapped. — R. G. Boak, D.C., 723 Fort Street.

Chess Game

The latest increase in the price of gas puts it well on the way to $1 a gallon. Before gas pumps appeared we carried the stuff in two-gallon cans from the nearest store. We knew nothing about high-compression octanes. In fact, in emergency we sometimes used low volatile kerosene as a substitute which caused loud exhaust explosions and sent horses flying through the streets with their delivery vans in tow. It was pandemonium but there was pleasure in those perfect days.

Then the oil barons blazed it around the world that they had invented the introduction of lead into gas for better engine performance and they put the price up. Now they have taken the lead out and put the price up again. Their supreme moneymaking stroke is to get us to serve ourselves and save them paying service wages. The next move in this chess game is for motorists, when the pumps put the price at a dollar, to sell their cars; but then shoe leather and walking canes will go up. Pensioners can't win when it comes down to dollars. — Clarence Goode, 1840 St. Ann Street.

Blind Ignorance

The blind ignorance of many third and fourth generation British Columbians is beginning to show up more and more in their everyday conversations.

Never having ventured east of the fabulous Rockies, these shallow-minded dregs of society simply stultify themselves every time they utter a word about Quebec.

Do they really believe Canada would be better off without Quebec? Are they ashamed and jealous because they don't have a culture of their own worth fighting to preserve? Does the prospect of their children learning a second language irk them because their own uncultivated lifestyles have prevented them from doing so? Or are they so untutored as to the importance of Quebec remaining within Confederation, that their benighted minds can't forsee the catastrophic results of a devided Canada?

Quebec has the most extensive water-power resources in all of Canada, and generates nearly half of the nation's hydroelectric power. It has the largest forested area in Canada, and is the nation's principal supplier of pulp and paper. It leads the world in asbestos production, and is the leading manufacturer of textiles, employing more than half that industry's national total. Quebec produces about 40 per cent of this country's iron ore, and because of its gigantic aluminum smelters Canada ranks third in the world in aluminum production. Quebec supplies an abundance of zinc, nickel, gold, copper, and many other metals to the rest of Canada, as well as being a chief supplier of clay, cement, and lime.

Almost two-thirds of Canada's foreign trade moves through Quebec via the St. Lawrence Seaway, and of the 16 major ports in Canada, those in the province of Quebec handle nearly as much cargo, in terms of tonnage, as those in all the other provinces combined.

Any fool can see that Quebec must remain a part of Canada! We're all Canadians, and we all own a share of that province's immeasurable natural resources.

Those witless British Columbians who are all too eager to "let the frogs stay in Quebec where they belong" should be thinking more in terms of solidarity.—Jim MacIntosh, 3992 Panther St.

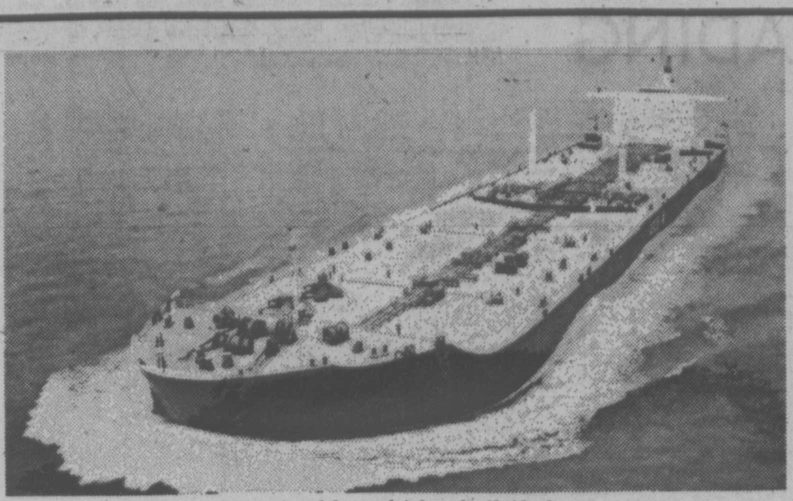
Tankers Unfit For the Job

LOS ANGELES TIMES
An Editorial



'Exceptional hazards' faced off Alaska

The typical large oil tanker is unwieldy at best. In rough weather, even the finest helmsman may be unable to avoid trouble.

Trouble is what these ships appear sure to face at the south Alaskan port of Valdez, where, starting in August, oil from the Trans-Alaskan Pipeline will be loaded onto tankers bound for the lower forty-eight and the Panama Canal.

Valdez had exceptional hazards, It has rough seas and erratic weather. It demands exceptional ships with exceptional safeguards, and it apparently will not get them unless the U.S. Coast Guard is over ruled.

Because of appalling delays and the adoption of lax regulations by the Coast Guard, most of the oil company tankers now scheduled to serve the pipeline traffic will not be equipped for the area's special rigors.

The fleet's inadequacy presents a risk of lost lives and lost ships. It threatens oil-spill damage in the Gulf of Alaska and the Northeastern Pacific, one of the world's most fertile grounds for fish, shellfish and marine mammals.

Of the 31 ships now slated to enter this magnificent, unspoiled stretch of coastline, only seven will have the added safety of double hulls or double bottoms so that a minor grounding or side-swipe need not cause a major oil spill. Seventeen of the ships will lack gas-inerting systems to minimize the risk of explosions inside a storage tank. None will have twin propellers or adequate backup engine systems.

Now think about where these tankers will be going. The Gulf of Alaska has varying weather, but in winter it is customarily terrible. To enter Valdez — and eventually five ships a day will be coming and going — a tanker must traverse a narrows where winds occasionally gust at more than 110 m.p.h. There is a big rock in the middle of the narrows. Rain and snow often get so suddenly thick in this area that radar is useless.

In experiments at a maritime laboratory in Holland, merchant skippers attempted some 130 simulated runs into Valdez harbor. It is said that about half the time they went aground.

Four years ago Congress was assured that the most modern and best-equipped ships would be used in the Alaskan oil trade. The promise was never withdrawn by federal official or Coast Guard officers or oil company executives, yet the tanker regulations since imposed by the Coast Guard have fallen far short.

The fleet itself falls short, too — even though the costs of adequatedly equipped ships are not prohibitive. Double hulls cost about 6 per cent more. But they pay for themselves during a ship's life by preventing spills.

Some companies have performed better than their competitors. The Alaska fleets of Sohio, Shell and Atlantic Richfield are generally safer and better equipped. Those of Standard Oil Co. of California, Exxon and Mobil Oil Corp. are poorly prepared by comparison.

The nation is entitled to an explanation of why promises were made but not kept, It is fully entitled also to protect its own long-term economic interests by flatly refusing ill-equipped ships entry to these dangerous waters.

Wealth Scale

WASHINGTON POST
An Editorial

It's the sudden swoops and crises in the world's economy that get the attention. But it's the slow and steady trends that are transforming the patterns of the world's wealth. One of these trends is the rapid rise in the production of the other industrial countries, relative to the United States. Another is the lack of improvement in the poorest countries, where the long-term increase in wealth per capita is now zero.

These two trends will be the major themes of the economic history of our times, as it is written a century from now. Consider, first, the rich countries. The conventional view used to be that they were expanding very rapidly only because they were catching up with the United States, which, as the leader, carried a disproportionate share of the cost of innovation. According to this view, the other industrial economies would slow down long before they drew even with the American levels of productivity. But it hasn't worked out that way.

There are a lot of ways to measure relative wealth, and one of them is to compare the earnings of industrial workers. In January, just before President Ford left office, his Council on International Economic Policy published a striking set of numbers showing the enormous change in position since 1960. The following figures are hourly compensation rates for industrial production workers:

	1960	1970	1976 (Est.)
Sweden	$1.20	$2.96	$8.50
Canada	$2.13	$3.46	$7.39
United States	$2.66	$4.20	$6.90
West Germany	$0.83	$2.32	$6.70
France	$0.83	$1.74	$4.59
Japan	$0.26	$0.99	$3.26
Great Britain	$0.82	$1.46	$3.95

The drastic changes since 1970 reflect not only rising output abroad, but the drop in the dollar's exchange rate. These changes are hardly mere technical adjustments. American productivity has not, in fact, risen very rapidly in recent years. Over the past decade, productivity — which is simply output per man-hour — rose 24 per cent in the United States. In Canada, it went up 43 per cent. In Germany, it went up 73 per cent, and in Japan, it more than doubled. Even Great Britain's productivity has risen slightly more than this country's since 1967.

Unfortunately, these rapid increases in productivity are not shared equally throughout the world. Some weeks ago the World Bank published its economic atlas for 1976, an annual accounting of global growth and prosperity. It showed that, from 1970 through 1975, real production per capita rose not at all in the 30 poorest countries. These countries comprise just about one billion people: they include India, Indonesia, and a broad band across Central Africa. If anything, they lost a little ground in those five years. Their total output rose significantly in those five years — about 11.5 per cent as the World Bank calculates it. But their populations rose a bit faster.

By 1975, the average per capital output in the industrial countries with a population of about 700 million, was somewhere around $5,080 a year. In those 30 poorest countries it was still about $130. That gap has existed for a long time. But there have been moments when both the rich and the poor saw hope that it could be diminished. Instead, since the beginning of this decade, it has grown steadily wider.

Small Price

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

The federal government has finally got around to detailing the cost of its bilingualism program. And it turns out that Canadians — including Quebeckers — are being billed less than $19 a year each for the effort to make government services available as needed in both official languages, and to give French Canadians wider opportunities to work for the federal government.

A cost of $19 a person is little enough to pay for an experiment — badly handled as it has been at times by the Ottawa bureaucracy — that is still one of our best hopes of creating a land in which all Canadians can feel at home from coast to coast.

To put it another way, the $405.4 million budget for bilingualism, which includes increasing amounts for language teaching in the schools and among other youth groups, represents just under 0.9 per cent of the total federal budget.

For comparison, the national defence budget for the coming year will be $3.8 billion. The bilingualism costs can be taken as helping to provide insurance that we will have a country to defend in years to come.

The government is wise to provide the total and the breakdown of the costs of bilingualism which, as Languages Commissioner Keith Spicer noted in his last annual report, have simply not been available before.

In the absence of verified figures, some bigoted critics have been able to go unchallenged with claims that the program was costing as much as $3 billion a year. All that and bilingual cornflakes boxes too!

Now that the figures have been brought down to earth, most Canadians will agree that the bilingualism money in the new budget is a good investment in Canada's future. There are risks posed by the separatist movement in Quebec, but all investments involve some risk. And by supporting the program, every Canadian can help improve the odds that this investment will pay off.

Levesque's Different Economic Tack

By DOMINIQUE CLIFT
Montreal Star

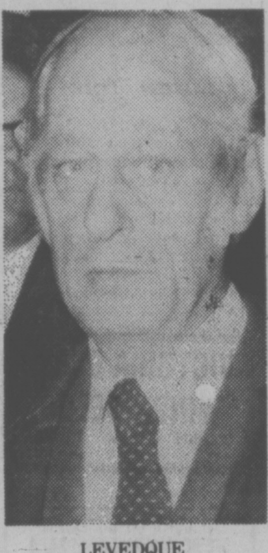
There is a very dangerous discrepancy between the methods which Premier Rene Levesque would like to apply in order to get the Quebec economy on its feet and the approach that is currently being used to ensure French cultural survival in the province. The contradiction is so glaring that it is difficult to imagine how the Parti Quebecois government can prevent the emergence of serious doubts about its capacity to govern effectively.

On those issues which relate to Quebec's constitutional future and to language use, Premier Levesque is counting on the ability of a militant nationalist minority to rally the majority of voters around his own objectives. On the question of language particularly, Premier Levesque believes in the effectiveness of restrictive and coercive legislation in order to ensure the pre-eminence of French in every field of activity.

But when the premier is dealing with economic problems, as he was last week in a speech before the Chambre de Commerce in Montreal, his approach is fundamentally different. At such times the key words are consultation and consensus. There is no question of government policy being based on the desires of an active minority.

On the contrary, all "the agents of economic life", as the premier expresses it, are to become involved in the elaboration of government policy. This includes private enterprise, trade unions, the co-operative movement and the government itself.

The contradictory approach to economic and cultural problems may have become apparent even to the premier himself. Not once in his address to the Chambre de Commerce did he refer to independence and to language except in an oblique way. There had been a decision to "cool it" as regards talk on independence. On the issue of language, the premier had never been a leading participant in the countless debates that have taken place in the past, and he tends to be carried along by the more extreme nationalists in his party.



LEVEDQUE

Toning down the independence controversy is inspired by tactical reasons. The new administration would like to concentrate on problems relating to "good government." At the same time it would like to gauge the federal reaction to the new situation in Quebec and to prepare for the referendum which can be expected to take place in about two years' time.

However, there may be other reasons as well. It is clear that the premier's audience at the Chambre de Commerce and in the corporate boardrooms of Quebec would be extremely skeptical about a call for a consensus on economic policy if this were accompanied by aggressive statements on the government's intentions in the constitutional and cultural fields. In order to remain credible, Premier Levesque can hardly afford to preach consensus on one aspect of public policy and minority-inspired action in another.

Premier Levesque's expectations may eventually prove to be totally unrealistic. It is difficult to see how the various "agents of economic life" can arrive at a workable consensus in a spirit of high-mindedness and detachment while the government is resolutely going ahead with linguistic and constitutional policies which are divisive and tension-laden. Public policy cannot be compartmentalized in the way apparently contemplated by the premier. It must be coherent and unified to be successful.

The destructive militancy of the labor movement over the last few years was largely inspired by the feeling that there were irreconcilable cultural differences between employers and the union rank and file. Nationalism was a prominent element in the rhetoric of union leaders. The animosity voiced in the past cannot disappear overnight, and it will inevitably intrude in the broadly based consultations that Premier Levesque has in mind to stimulate economic recovery in the province.

So will the resentment of the French-speaking middle class over the business community's lack of roots in the province, its slowness in recognizing the necessity of a closer relationship with the French-speaking community as a whole. The pre-eminence of English in business activities leads to countless distortions in the evaluation of corporate motives and interests. That, too, will have to be smoothed out before the government can really approach economic problems in the manner outlined by Premier Levesque.

On the other hand, business leaders are not likely to be very co-operative if they have the feeling — rightly or wrongly — that government policy on independence and on language is undermining the basis of corporate prosperity and effectiveness. Being the prime target of the Parti Quebecois cultural grievances, they will be quick to percieve the close relationship which exists between social and economic problems, even if until quite recently they were blithely indifferent to it.

Now it is Premier Levesque's turn to show a blind eye to this type of relationship, to the close connection there is between social and cultural expectations and the state of economic activity. It is unlikely that this kind of dissociation can be sustained for very long. The business community in Montreal is paying dearly now for having sought to sustain it in the past.

Premier Levesque may face some unexpected problems in the future because of his tendency to indulge in the same kind of wishful thinking. The hard line on nationalist claims may prove impossible to reconcile with the conciliatory one displayed on economic problems.

Parental Guidance

By GEORGE WILL

A list of things I frown upon would, I know, be an inventory of the modern age. But I am especially grumpy about a modern literary genre: handbooks on "parenting."

The word "parenting" is evidence of the regrettable modern tendency to turn nouns ("loan," "critique") into verbs. And as I write this, my desk is groaning beneath the weight of books with titles like Effective Parenting. That book has a chapter on "Key Words for Parents," like (I'm not making this up) "there, there, there."

Between Parent and Child is a best seller that "tells you how to talk childrenese, the new way to get through to your child." I wonder: Did Tom and Nancy Lincoln talk childrenese to little Abe? Did they read How to Raise a Bright Child?

The Challenge of Child Training lists the 20 "most common mistakes" and includes — surely the author jests — "draconic severity." I prefer the book inspirationally titled Dare to Discipline.

What's a Father For? explains what to do "when your boy wants a doll" and asks, "Are you sorry you had a girl? Electra did her mother in." Liberated Parents, Liberated Children begins with a controversial premise ("Children are people"). P.E.T.—Parent Effectiveness Training concludes with imprudent advice ("How to Avoid Being Fired As a Parent").

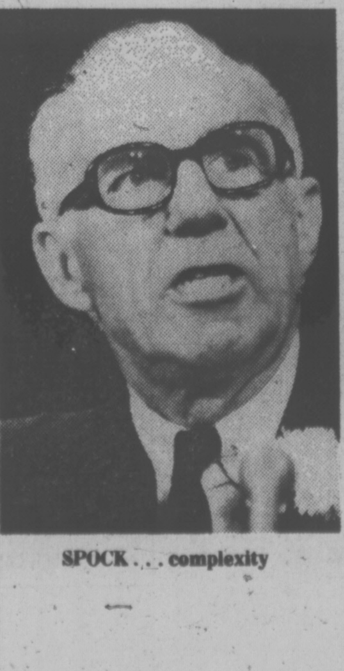
It is interesting that How It Feels to Be a Child (answer often crumby) used to be titled The Myth of the Happy Child. It is fascinating that the author of The Primal Scream has written The Feeling Child, which has a chapter on "Intra-uterine Life." It is, well, a scream.

Children generally should be faced with philosophy and managed with common sense, and most parenting books are frequently sensible. Like most parents, most such books do little lasting harm to children. But the profusion of these books, some of which are mischievous, is the result of a North American affliction.

North Americans are predisposed to believe too much in environmental determinism. They are inclined to regard infants as malleable bundles of "potential" — clay on which determined parents, handbooks in hand, can work wonders.

In the "nature versus nurture" argument, North Americans are can-do optimists who believe that skilful nurturing is all-important in shaping individuals. The United States is a manufacturing nation that sometimes seems to regard children as raw material from which ever-better products can be manufactured as know-how increases.

The first edition of Benjamin Spock's Baby and Child Care appeared in 1946, when Americans were in the full flush of success. They were anxious to turn from the collective task of history-making to the private task of family-making. Like Studebakers and toothpaste, the next batch of children would be "new and improved."



SPOCK . . . complexity

What Dr. Spock and, even more, subsequent authors have done is (as sociologist Philip Slater says) "to encourage Pygmalionesque fantasies in mothers and to stress the complexity of the task of creating a person out of an infant." Yes, "creating": Parents, and especially mothers, have been saddled with god-like responsibility for making little Mike into a work of art, like little Mozart.

★ ★ ★

American women are being driven bonkers by the limitless exaggeration of their child-raising, "person-creating" responsibilities. The naggingly insistent voice of much parenting literature says: Children become what, and only what, parents consciously make of them. And every creature born of woman can "maximize" his or her potential, given sufficiently attentive parenting, which usually means a sufficiently dutiful mother.

Small wonder that conscientious mothers often feel they are gasping for air. They are being suffocated by the demands of a duty they can never fully dispatch. It is their ever-expanding duty to "maximize" something — their children's "potential."

But, then, parenting is no piece of cake for father, either, as I learned one morning recently, when Geoffrey M. Will was still two, and thus still had an excuse for being insufferable.

I ventured a commiserating comment on his wan appearance, which I hoped was the result of his having been up late foraging for stimulation in his father's library. "Geoffrey," I observed, "you look pale."

His face suddenly glowed with pure intelligence, and he shot back "I'm not a pail; you're a shovel and I'm a sandbox."

You see why I'm bitter about parenting? You try to nurture Mozart, and you wind up with Groucho Marx.

Toronto Prices Still Jumping

TORONTO (CP) — Prices rose moderately in active mid-afternoon trading on the Toronto stock market today.

International Business Machines Corp. was unchanged at $289 a share following a brief halt at mid-session. A statement is expected from IBM headquarters in Armonk, N.Y.

The Toronto Stock Exchange says a total of 506,837 Westinghouse Canada Ltd. shares have been tendered in a bid from the parent firm, United States-based Westinghouse Electric Corp. for the remainder of the Canadian subsidiary's shares.

Westinghouse Electric, which previously held a 75 per cent interest, is offering $26 a share.

The TSE says the tender brings to 94 per cent Westinghouse Electric's interest in Westinghouse Canada which last traded at $25.75 a share. A one-day halt is in effect to allow for the acquisition.

Among other industrials, General Motors rose 1 to $75, Husky Oil ⅞ to $26¼, Texasgulf Inc. ¾ to $32½, Falconbridge Nickel ½ to $36 and Interpoll Ltd. ½ to $16½.

Mercantile Bank was down 1 to $13¼, Canadian Cablesystems ¾ to $13, Canadian Imperial Bank ½ to $24⅜, Canadian Tire A ¼ to $38 and Canadian Curtiss-Wright three cents to 43 cents.

Rio Algom gained ¾ to $27½, Dome Mines ½ to $32¾. Kerr Addison A fell ⅛ to $14¼ and Mattagami Lake Mines A ⅛ to $14⅛.

Numac Oil and Gas was down ⅞ to $13⅞, Ranger Oil Canada ¾ to $22⅝ and Voyager Petroleums ⅝ to $8¾. Ocelot Industries A dropped ⅜ to $8 and Bridger Petroleum ⅛ to $8¼.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took the news of February's higher unemployment in stride and quietly advanced Friday.

The market has been confronted recently with negative economic news, including a drop in January's index of leading economic indicators, a decline in the number of factory orders, and increased unemployment in February, but the market has managed to hold its own.

However, analysts were wary of the rally because of the light trading.

"The problem is the rallies don't seem to develop any volume," said Saul Smerling of Standard and Poor's. "You like to see it rally with some conviction."

Generally analysts agreed the market had dealt with the effects of the cold weather snap and was looking to an improving economy.

A Federal Reserve weekly report showed the money supply fell one billion dollars, easing investor worries that the Board would pull back on its monetary policies.

International Systems, which jumped 3⅛ Thursday, was up 1⅞ to $29⅝. The company said it did not see any commercial or business reason for the rise.

Deere Co. in heavy trading was up ⅜ to $28¾, leading the most active list.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were a shade higher in moderately active trading today on the Montreal Stock Exchange. Celanese Canada was up 20 cents at $3.70, Husky Oil ⅞ at $26⅛, Dofasco A ¼ at $26 and IAC Ltd. ⅛ at $16⅛. Mercantile Bank of Canada was off ½ at $13⅝, Canada Trust Mortgage A ¼ at $24 and Interprovincial Pipe Line A ⅛ at $13.

Pension Protection Pays Off

VANCOUVER (CP) — The $181 million invested to protect Canada Pension Plan benefits from inflation has been returned almost five-fold in additional earnings, a treasury board official says.

W. A. Kelm, director of pensions and benefits for the board, told a conference on pensions that other changes in the pension plan have generated $854 million, more than enough to offset the amount invested to shelter the plan from inflation.

Since 1969, pension payments have been indexed, or tied to the rate of inflation, to ensure that benefits will have enough purchasing power to help pensioners through retirement.

Kelm said the plan's additional income has come from three main sources: about $590 million in interest was earned as a result of the government's decision to loft the former four-per-cent limit in interest credited to the pension account; an additional $78 million came from employer contributions increased by indexing, and $186 million came from increased employer contributions to the plan.

Direct government contributions account for about 22 per cent of the additional earnings, he said.

Montreal To Amtrack

MONTREAL (CP) — Amtrak, the U.S. rail passenger corporation, has signed a $3.6 million agreement to lease two high speed intercity trains manufactured by Bombardier-MLW Ltd. of Montreal, with an option to purchase.

Bombardier-MLW said the trains, called LRC's for Light-Rapid-Comfortable, will be used on Amtrak's run between Portland, Ore. and Vancouver.

Each train consists of a streamlined, low-profile diesel engine pulling four day coaches and a secial coach which can be used for food service, accommodation for the handicapped and club car accommodation.

The trains are sched;uled to begin operation in late 1978 or early 1979. Amtrak estimates that 50 minutes in travel time will be saved on the 342-mile run.

ABC

The American Broadcasting Companies Inc., boosted by improved television ratings, reports a sharp turn-around in 1976's fourth-quarter and full-year profits.

In the last quarter, ABC said, it earned $24.39 million, compared with a $3.95 million loss in 1975.

ABC's latest quarter's profits equalled $1.36 a share and revenue in the period rose to $391.23 million from $321.75 million in 1975.

For all of 1976, ABC earned $71.75 million, or $4.05 a share, compared with $17.10 million, or 99 cents a share in 1975. Full-year revenue rose from $1.07 billion to $1.34 billion.

Natsea

National Sea Products Ltd. of Halifax reports a 1970 profit of 1.1 million or 68 cents a share, compared with a net loss of $1.4 million a year earlier.

The company said the two performances are not strictly comparable because the end of the fiscal year has been changed to Dec. 31 from Aug. 31.

Most of the 1976 profit was earned outside the company's main operation, groundfish processing, and the company said U.S. operation, groundfish processing, and the company said U.S. operations were "particularly successful."

The 1976 figures include $317,000 in extraordinary gain from the sale of fixed assets and tax credit.

Figures for the previous year include extraordinary charges of $387,000 from plant closing and currency translations, $116,500 in special gains from tax credit and $217,500 extraordinary charges from sale of fixed assets.

IH

International Harvester Co. of Canada, Ltd. reports net income for 1976 of $20.8 million compared with $22.1 million in 1975.

Despite the slightly lower earnings, Norman Smith, president described 1976 as a "successful year."

He said sales continued high for agricultural equipment and for the company's Scout four-wheel drive vehicles. As well, the company maintained its hold of the truck market and showed "marked improvement in the heavy-duty class."

But a slowdown in the construction industry, blamed on economic restraints, created a lower demand for construction equipment.

Smith said in the company's annual report that while agricultural demand will remain strong, the demand for trucks and woodland equipment should be slow.

He urged governments to maintain a positive climate for business to improve productivity, adding that Canada's production costs "are increasing at a faster rate than in othere industrialized nations."

The company had 1976 sales of $714.9 million compared with $713.9 in 1975.

Craigmont

Craigmont Mines Ltd. has announced first quarter earnings of $235,000 or five cents a share, compared with $546,000 or 11 cents a share for the same period in 1976.

The company said that only one shipment of copper concentrate was made during the quarter ending Jan. 31, 1977 and that this was the main factor affecting earnings.

Poisoned Liquor

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — One hundred persons have died and more than 100 others are seriously ill in hospital after drinking poisonous liquor brewed illegally in the western city of Ahmadabad, the Samachar news agency reported. Police arrested four persons suspected of selling liquor in the city in Gujarat state, where the sale of alcohol is prohibited.

'Self-Destruct' Trades Union Ploy

Building trade unions have organized a voluntary united bargaining front in preparation for a new round of labor negotiations due to start in about a week

Victoria Labor Council president John Schiblie reports all but three of the 15 major unions have banded together to negotiate on a "self-destruct" basis.

This, he says, means the unions would bargain individually in the event there is any provincial government pressure to force them into an official bargaining council.

The construction industry, through its bargaining body — the Construction Labor Relations Association — recently asked the government to put joint bargaining regulations on the unions.

The industry blames the lack of a united bargaining front for the shutdowns that happen each bargaining year.

In the upcoming negotiations the building trades will be seeking a one-year contract instead of their former two-year agreements because of the uncertainty of continuence of the federal government's anti-inflation controls.

Schibli, president of the Victoria local of the carpenters' union, says his group will ignore the guidelines.

A QUALITY WHEATON DEVELOPMENT

SAWMILL SEEKS SITE

The government-owned B.C. Development Corp. has asked for approval to construct a sawmill on agricultural land near Houston, in central B.C., Economic Development Minister Donald Phillips said Wednesday.

Phillips said in response to a question in the Legislature from Liberal leader Gordon Gibson, that the corporation had applied to the B.C. Land Commission to have a parcel of land freed from the agricultural land reserve so the corporation could buy it and lease it to a private firm.

Gibson asked how much influence the corporation had in its dealings with the commission.

He said the corporation applied to have 300 acres of land removed from an old farm within the freeze to build a Eurocan-Weldwood Sawmill.

Gibson said the location being studied by the corporation wasn't the company's first preference.

One group in Houston feels the sawmill should be located away from residential areas on land outside the reserve, while a rival group favors construction of the mill on the farmland to give the town an improved tax base.

The arguments will be heard by the B.C. Land Commission on Tuesday.

SC Selling Out to U.S.: Macdonald

The Social Credit government is placing a higher priority on supplying U.S. customers with natural gas than on supplying B.C. needs, Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said Thursday.

Macdonald, a member of the board of the B.C. Petroleum Corporation (BCPC) under the former New Democratic Party government, said in an interview that the present government is selling out to the U.S.

He was commenting on a news report which revealed that during the next three years Transcanada Pipe Lines Ltd. will supply sufficient gas to B.C. to meet shortfalls in gas export contracts to the U.S.

Macdonald explained that Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., with the agreement of the government, has announced it will not increase supplies to B.C. customers over existing contracts until its contractual requirements to the U.S. are met.

Westcoast said the Alberta gas, which calls for the construction of a new pipeline, will be enough to meet Westcoast's commitments to both B.C. and the U.S.

But Macdonald said the Alberta gas will be insufficient, and because B.C. Hydro demands for natural gas are increasing, B.C. consumers will be left short Premier Bill Bennett told Macdonald during question period in the legislature that the government will recognize its contractual agreements with the United States. All exports are handled by the crown-owned BCPC.

Macdonald told reporters that the former NDP government did not treat the exports under permit as a contract commitment that had to be met every year.

Westcoast has agreed to supply 809 million cubic feet of natural gas a day to the U.S. until 1989. Present export price is $1.94-a-thousand cubic feet.

Filing Income Tax Returns: 54 Per Cent Do It Themselves

OTTAWA (CP) — A revenue department survey of taxpayers done last year found that 54 per cent of respondents completed their own personal income tax forms.

Of the remainder, 26 per cent used professional tax consultants and 20 per cent had a friend or relative complete the forms.

The survey was conducted with 1,031 persons to determine the usefulness of the tax guide to taxpayers, the success of an advertising campaign promoting use of the guide and the problems faced by taxpayers in completion of the forms.

The survey found that education of taxpayers plays a large role in determining if a person completes their own forms.

About 79 per cent of persons with college or university degrees did their own forms but the figure dropped to 56 per cent for high school graduates and 33 per cent for persons with only grade school education.

The survey indicates 90 per cent of those who completed their own returns used the tax guides.

"The only area where use of the guide was significantly below the 90 per-cent level was among those who tried to complete their own returns but gave up. Among this group only 78 per cent used the guide."

Most persons who felt the guide was not of use complained that explanations were not clear enough.

NOW THAT'S SAVING!

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. David Brooks, former director of the office of energy conservation in Ottawa, said Thursday that if Canadians cut heat loss from homes, reduce car-engine horsepower and take other simple steps to conserve energy, the savings would be equivalent to:

—The oil production of four 125,000 barrel-a-day oil sand plants;

—Half the contemplated capacity of a 48-inch natural gas pipeline down the MacKenzie Valley;

—The output of seven nuclear power plants each the size of Ontario Hydro's Pickering Plant and;

—Four million tons of coal a year.

Brooks told a conference on energy conservation that all these savings are achievable by 1990.

He said new homes easily can be insulated to give a 30-per-cent improvement in energy saving.

Westcoast Buys Alta. Gas for U.S.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. has reached agreement with Pan Alberta Gas, a subsidiary of Alberta Gas Trunk line Ltd., to buy 175 million cubic feet of Alberta gas a day for export to the United States.

Westcoast president Ed Phillips said the company is discussing the agreement with the British Columbia Petroleum Corporation to get ites endorsement.

J. W. Kerr, chairman and chief executive officer of TransCanada Pipelines Ltd., said earlier his firm is involved in a plan to sell 250 million cubic feet a day of gas to Westcoast.

Kerr said the plan could mean $400 million to $500 million in gas sales to Alberta producers and will require an estimated $12 million to $18 million in capital costs.

Underground flooding in key gas fields in Yukon and northern B.C. gas fields a few years ago have drastically cut supplies of natural gas available to Westcoast.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

"I'm not even a Canadian citizen; what right do you have to hold me?" a 22-year-old man asked Judge William Ostler Thursday in Victoria provincial court.

Paul Vincent Thompson asked the question after being declared fit to stand trial on charges of possession of marijuana for trafficking and possession of hashish.

The fitness hearing was held after defence lawyer Paul Jarman questioned his client's ability to advise counsel.

Thompson, who has been in custody in Wilkinson Road jail for more than a month after being denied bail, was silent during the entire fitness proceedings, but spoke up after Jarman elected trial by judge alone on both charges and a preliminary hearing date of March 25 was set.

"Can I go anywhere but Wilkinson Road jail?" Thompson asked.

When Ostler explained there was nothing more he could do but to recommend to authorities that Thompson receive proper medical attention, the young man became agitated and questioned the judge's right to detain him.

"Just let me walk in the streets and I'll get out of your stupid country," said Thompson just before he was led from the courtroom.

A 26-year-old man who pleaded guilty to breaking into the Upper Room Society, 579 Johnson, received a 10-month jail term.

Ian Douglas Perry, jointly charged with Henry James McClure, received the sentence after Crown counsel Robert Mulligan read a long record of related offences dating back to August, 1974. Court was told Perry had completed a two-year probation term 14 days before the break-in. The term was imposed Feb. 14, 1975, for a conviction of possession of housebreaking tools. Perry was also sentenced to four months in jail on Aug. 13, 1976, for possession of stolen property.

Defence lawyer Robert Higinbotham said Perry didn't have adequate shelter or clothing and found a window wide open. Higinbotham also requested that his client receive psychiatric treatment for a drug problem. He said previous requests in this regard had not been met by prison authorities.

A 19-year-old man who had been at large from the Jordan River prison camp since Oct. 22, 1975, was sentenced to a further three months for escaping lawful custody.

Joseph Mayday, who was sentenced to six months definite and 12 months indefinite on July 2, 1975, for false pretences, was arrested Tuesday in Vancouver, where he had been working.

Legal aid lawyer Barry Gaetz told the court Mayday had a fight with another inmate on the day of his escape and had found the camp unbearable.

During his freedom, court was told, Mayday worked about five months publishing a United Nations magazine in Vancouver and worked for a Vancouver engineering firm for about the same period of time before his arrest.

Another escaper, 25-year-old Robert James Watt, received a four-month term for being unlawfully at large from William Head prison since March 16 of last year.

Watt was serving a five-year term for trafficking in narcotics when he failed to return from a temporary absence pass March 15.

He received the pass to visit relatives in North Vancouver and was arrested in the United States, court was told.

Gaetz said that Watt, whose term would have expired June 5, 1980, but was due for release on Nov. 5, 1978, found the federal medium security prison near Victoria intolerable because his family and friends were on the mainland.

Gaetz said that when Watt arrived on the mainland, he found his girlfriend had left him, causing him to go to the U.S. He said Watt voluntarily turned himself in to American immigration authorities.

A man who appeared to be highly intoxicated when he arrived in court Thursday morning was given three hours in Victoria city jail to sober up.

John Robert Coward, 26, of 10150 Third, Sidney, was charged with having a blood-alcohol content over .08 Feb. 21 and began to plead not guilty when Ostler noticed the man's slurred speech.

"Have you been drinking this morning, Mr. Coward?" asked the judge.

After Coward's denial, the case was stood down until sheriff's deputies could make a determination of sobriety. However, when court was called to order for a morning break, Coward almost fell while trying to stand up and he was escorted to the jail by two sheriff's deputies.

Reappearing in court in the afternoon, Coward maintained his not guilty plea and was released on his own recognizance until March 17, when a trial date is expected to be fixed.

"If you appear before me again not in sober condition, I will consider you in contempt of court," Ostler warned him.

★ ★ ★

Thinking of teaching?

the University of Victoria
Secondary Internship Teacher Education Programme in 1977-1978

ELIGIBILITY Candidates must have an acceptable undergraduate degree from a recognized University, have the necessary subject preparation in two approved teaching areas for secondary schools, be prepared to work in Alberni, Nanaimo, Courtenay or Campbell River School Districts, and show evidence of commitment and skill in working with young people. Applications are encouraged from individuals with life experiences in addition to their formal education.

PROGRAMME Academically admissible condidates will be interviewed by University and participating School District personnel in late May. Forty-five selected candidates will then attend a week's orientation in their school district in early June, attend UVic for July and August course work, train in their school district from September, 1977 to April, 1978, and complete their academic work on UVic campus during May/June, 1978. Successful candidates are then recommended for a Teaching Certificate.

FINANCIAL AID Interns will be eligible for existing student aid as administered by the University's Financial Aid Office. A grant to cover tuition costs and some financial assistance for the summer months is anticipated. In addition school districts will provide a stipend to Interns during their 8-month residency.

TO APPLY For detailed information and application forms, write immediately to:

The Co-ordinator, Secondary Internship Programme,
Faculty of Education, University of Victoria,

Crash Kills 38 Cadets

PISA (AP) — An Italian air force C-130 transport plane carrying 38 naval cadets and six crewmen crashed Thursday in the mountains north of this central Italian city, killing all aboard, the defence ministry said.

The plane was taking the teen-aged cadets, all in their first year at the Leghorn Naval Academy, on their initial training flight when it crashed against Mt. Serra, shortly after takeoff from Pisa's San Giusto Airport.

Bodies were spread over a half-mile range. Officials said it would be difficult to find all the remains as the Hercules crashed on a steep slope covered with bushes, just six miles from the airport.

Order Restored in Mexico

OAXACA, Mexico (AP) — The army has restored order in the south Mexican state of Oaxaca after 10 days of clashes between police and demonstrating students, townspeople and landless Indians. At least 16 persons were killed.

The state governor opposed by the students, Manuel Zarate Aquino, took a leave of absence "in order not to hurt my people," and there were indications that a dispute that divided the state university into two factions might be settled.

Zarate Aquino was replaced as governor by Gen. Eliseo Jimenez Ruiz, who commanded the military operation two years ago in which the country's most-wanted guerrilla, Lucio Cabanas, was killed.

Defence Secretary Felix Galvan Lopez ordered the troops in on Thursday after police the night before battled student marchers in the state capital demanding the ouster of the governor. A demonstrator was killed, and 19 other persons were injured.

Earlier, the police had battled with Indian peasants armed with machetes Monday night in the village of Montenegro Lalana and on Feb. 22 with towns-people in the town of Juchitan demanding the release of student demonstrators for land reform. At least 15 persons were killed in those clashes.

Bhutto Leads Monster Parade

KARACHI (Reuter) — Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto led a big procession here Wednesday. Officials of Bhutto's Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP) estimated that at least one million people joined the procession. The prime minister, in the final week of a hectic campaign for elections March 7, had staked his prestige on having a bigger procession than retired air marshal Asghar Khan, a leading figure in the nine-party opposition alliance PNA.

Plant Start Hinges on Loan

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Trident Aircraft Ltd. expects to begin producing airplanes at its new Pat Bay plant this year but a definite start-up date has not been set, president David Hazlewood said Wednesday.

He was commenting on a report in B.C. Market News, a provincial government publication, that production will start this fall.

"That report is premature," Hazlewood said. "Everything is waiting for the result of our application for a $1 million loan from the provincial government. Ten minutes after that loan is approved, we go into production."

The application is still being considered by the British Columbia Development Corporation, he said.

If there is an extended delay on the request, the company might decide to begin production in hopes the loan will be approved later.

"That would be a very significant step, however, and it would have to be approved by the board of directors before we could make a dicision of that mignitude. Once a decision is taken to go into produciton the policy could not be reversed."

Hazlewood said he is optimistic the loan application will be approved but said there is no indication from the government how soon a dicision will be made.

Trident has already spent $3 million in pre-production work and last Friday received technical approval for a $500,000 loan from the BCDC for additional work.

The $1 million loan, if approved, would be in addition to the $500,000.

The company has already employed 30 people in preparing for production at Pat Bay Airport and an additional 45 woud be hired at Pat Bay once the production decision is made.

Another 125 would be employed at the company's sales offices at Richmond.

The Pat Bay plant will assemble Trigull amphibious aircraft, a four-to-six passenger craft.

The company has deposits for 26 planes and standing orders for 50 more.

Hazlewood said these orders are really reservations for serial numbers and are contingent upon favorable prices and delivery dates.

The company received a federal grant of $500,000 to develop facilities to assemble the plane.

The company has been preparing for the Pat Bay venture for four years using funds from private stock purchases and the federal grant.

FOREST FIRE WARNING

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Sterling Cosens, Kamloops district fire protection officer, said Thursday this summer could be the worst for forest fires in three years if the region doesn't get more rainfall.

Cosens said permits for open burning other than campfires will be required as early as April 15.

The B.C. Forest Service has started planning its summer offensive against forest fires, he said, but exact spending estimates have not been approved.

"I don't know how many aircraft we'll be getting yet, but tenders have been sent out for air tankers," he said. "I don't expect we'll be getting less aircraft this year."

Last year, the service employed 10 air tankers in the region.

B.C. Professional Groups Want Right to Incorporate

VANCOUVER (CP) — A joint committee representing seven B.C. professional associations has asked Raif Mair, minister of consumer and corporate affairs, to revive the Professional Corporations Act.

Vancouver lawyer Barry Davidson, chairman of the taxation section of the B.C. branch of the Canadian Bar Association, said Thursday the professional organizations want the right to incorporate as other people can but "we don't want to limit our liability to the public in any way."

He said the right to incorporate would simplify professional partnership arrangements by allowing new partners to buy shares in companies and would be a tax advantage to people beginning in the professions. Senior professionals would not get a tax advantage.

The professions seeking to have the act revived are lawyers, doctors, chartered accountants, certified general accountants, dentists, architects and land surveyors.

A Professional Corporation Act was passed by the legislature in 1970 but the tax advantages were wiped out by the cabinet which later issued an order saying a corporation incorporated under the act is not a corporation as defined by the Income Tax Act.

Burrard Oil Firms Form Spill Co-Op

VANCOUVER (CP) — Six major oil companies in B.C. have pooled funds and expertise to form an "oil spill co-operative" designed to improve oil spill clean-up capabilities on Burrard Inlet.

The companies — Chevron, Gulf, Imperial, Shell, Texaco and Transmountain Pipe Lines — will spend $1.2 million this year setting up the co-operative they have christened Burrard Clean.

Austen Torrell, Gulf Oil's corporate affairs director for B.C. and chairman of Burrard Clean, said he hoped to have the organization ready by late summer.

Primary concern of the consortium, Torrell said, will be the containment and clean-up of spills caused by any of the six major members, which are all based around Burrard Inlet.

Since the majority of spills historically have been caused not by oil suppliers but by the carriers — such as shipping lines — the co-operative's equipment will be available at an established fee structure to all shipping and shore-based companies east of a line between Point Grey and Point Atkinson, he said.

Eligible companies will be able to join Burrard Clean upon request.

The idea for Burrard Clean, Torrell said, grew out of the environmental committee of the B.C. Petroleum Association, an organization comprised of most of the major and minor oil producers in the province.

"Oil committees across Canada have established oil spill co-operatives in each province; in fact, there already are 28 of them in B.C. alone. Each of these, of course, offers a specific package for the different requirments that have to be met in that area.

The oil companies will be using at Burrard two custom-designed, B.C.-built self-propelled oil skimmers (which alone will cost $800,000), three small portable skimmers, two work boats, two large oil containment booms (with carrying trailers), a mobile communications centre housed in a 24-foot trailer, a mobile signal relayer and lighting equipment for night work.

The self-propelled oil skimmers are actually small ships — 42 feet and 48 feet in length — that corral the floating oil with portable booms, then lift the oil out of the water with revolving oil-absorbent belts. The oil travels up the belt and is forced off the belt when it goes through a series of rollers.

Pesticide Mistake Cost $400

DELTA (CP) — Richfield Farms Ltd. of Delta has been fined $400 in provincial court for using a pesticide in a manner inconsistent with label directions.

The charge was laid following investigations by provincial and federal agencies into the deaths of about 1,000 ducks during October and November.

Judge D. C. Reid said it was not a flagrant violation because the misuse was a result of error rather than intention and did not impose the maximum fine of $500.

Court was told the farm dusted turnip transplants with the pesticide furadan 10G rather than applying it to seeds sown by machinery.

Following The Ball . . .

Spectrum a Darkhorse

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

If there is any hint of a surprise in the opening round of the Vancouver Island high school boys' basketball championships, it lay with the fact that there wasn't one.

Oak Bay Bays, Nanaimo Islanders, Cowichan Timbermen and Spectrum, all favored to hurdle past their first-round opponents, hohummed it into tonight's semi-finals at McKinnon gym.

The tightest fit Friday was a 23-point spread. The "close one" was Nanaimo's 83-60 victory over Victoria High Totems.

Cowichan rolled by Claremont Spartans 73-49, Spectrum defeated G. P. Vanier of Courtenay 73-47 and the Bays breezed by Esquimalt Dockers 71-35.

That sends Cowichan against Oak Bay (starting at 7:15 p.m.) and Spectrum against Nanaimo (at 9) in tonight's semi-finals, and there's a suspicion that round No. 2 might be more interesting than the first.

For one thing, Nanaimo, the North Island's top-ranked team, and the Bays, No. 1 in the South, were expected to be impressive. They weren't. Although they won handily, they have been known to turn in better games this season.

Spectrum and Cowichan, on the other hand, did impress. With Ken Larson, a talented six-foot-seven forward, and five other players in the six-three to six-five area, Timbermen have the undisputed height advantage among the eight qualifiers for the Island tournament.

And while they can't match Cowichan's height, the Rick Mark-coached players from Spectrum showed enough Friday to be branded as the dark-horse entry among the semi-finalists.

Against Courtenay, Spectrum played intelligently, with great poise . . . and also proved to the opening-night audience that it doesn't have to rely on the shooting of Harbinder Sanghara.

Sanghara, only five-eleven, has stung more than one rival with his deadly shooting this season. Friday happened to be one of those very rare evenings when Harb failed to delve deeply into double figures in scoring.

He scored but eight points, all in the second half.

On such a night, Tim Achtzner, Grant Clark, Dan Ryan and Dave Shokar venture out to remind you that Spectrum shouldn't be accused of beinf a one-man team.

A cocsistent strength in rebounding, Shokar and Sanghara showed some of Spectrum's poise. Saddled with three fouls in the first half, they came out to perform better in the second frame — but without drawing another foul.

Achtzner, with 17 points, Ryan, with 20, and Clark, with 21, picked up the scoring slack. Clark and Achtzner were especially outstanding against Courtenay.

It is to Vanier's credit that the Courtenay team contained Spectrum's shooting ace, but the North's No. 3 squad didn't reckon on the talent and ability of Achtzner and Clark.

All in all, it was a solid team effort by Mark's guys, and that included the manner in which Spectrum controlled the tempo of the game.

It was the type of effort, if repeated, that could pose some problems for Nanaimo tonight.

John Levering's Islanders had some early problems with the Totems. Nanaimo pulled away just before the half, then carried on despite the fact Levering used two of his big guns — Mike Montgomery and six-five Neil Squire, sparingly. Both are recovering from recent ankle injuries.

Friday's game was Montgomery's first in three weeks while Squire has been idle for two weeks.

As for the Bays, B.C.'s top-ranked team ran up a 12-0 lead before Esquimalt scored its first point. It was 26-4 at the end of the first quarter, and Oak Bay never looked back despite committing more than their average in turnovers, and scoring about 20 points less than they normally do.

There's Still No Word On Hockey Club's Sale

Lorne Williams is expected back in Victoria today to continue talks with Pat Ginnell over the sale of Victoria Cougars of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Vancouver interests, head by Williams, are reported to be close to finalizing the purchase of the Cougars from Ginnell.

Williams was in Victoria on Wednesday to meet with Jack Morgan, director of community recreation services, presumably about Memorial Arena rental.

Williams returned to Vancouver later that evening without commenting on his meeting with Morgan, or about the pending sale.

Meanwhile, Cougars slipped back into last place in the Western Division without losing a game on Thursday.

Portland Winter Hawks, who the Cats face at 8:30 p.m. Saturday at Memorial Arena, moved into second place with a 10-4 victory over the touring Flin Flon Bombers while Kamloops Chiefs moved into third spot with an 8-3 decision over the Monarchs in Winnipeg.

Winter Hawks, who had 49 shots on goal, picked up their second one-sided win in as many days from the weary Bombers, who have been on the road since Feb. 13.

Goaltender Gary Nakrayko provided the winning margin for Chiefs, who were outshot 42-30. Monarchs were particularly frustrated in the second period, outgunning the Kamloops team 19-8 and still slipping from a 1-1 tie at the end of the first period to a 3-1 deficit going into the final 20 minutes.

Athletics Lead Big Six Finale

Victoria Athletics came up with a well-balanced scoring attack to top Western Homes Buckaroos 7-5 Thursday night in the third game of the best-of-seven South Island Big Six Hockey League playoff final at Pearkes Arena.

Athletics, who now lead the series 2-1, held period leads of 4-1 and 7-1.

Errol Goulden, Gord Neilson, Bryan Preston, Ross Swanton, Brian Hamilton, Dave Parenteau and Steve Andrejkew each scored once for Athletics while Dave Pettinger (2), Bill Pettinger, Rick Piechotta and Neil Palone replied for Bucks.

Reg Wonnenberg came up with several excellent saves, including one on a penalty shot, as Athletics stifled a comeback bid in the third period.

The fourth game of the series is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. Monday at Memorial Arena.

Three Reach Final Round

Great Pumpkin, Namdor and Khalsa will meet in the single round-robin championship final of the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Volleyball League after finishing one-two-three, respectively, in the preliminary round-robin competition which ended Thursday night at CFB Esquimalt gymnasium.

The fourth-fifth-sixth place teams and the seventh-eighth-ninth place squads will also play off in the final night next Thursday.

Results and point totals:

Great Pumpkin def. Royal Roads 15-6, 15-7 and CFB Esquimalt 15-9, 15-5 (12 pts.).

VIKETTES' HOPES CRUSHED

CALGARY — University of Victoria Vikettes saw their dreams of a national crown go down the drain in an extremely tight game Thursday night.

University of Winnipeg, led by Kathy Dubesky's 17 points, sank two foul shots right at the buzzer to nudge Vikettes 58-54 in the opening round of the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union women's baskeball championship tournament.

The loss eliminates the Vikettes from the title race in the six-team, single-knockout tourney. They play in the consolation final Saturday.

The defeat marks the second straight season the Vikettes have gone unbeaten in CWUAA play only to lose out in the national tournament. Last year, they won their opening round game but lost in the semi-finals.

Victoria, which led 44-26 at the half, was hampered when starters Shelley and Leslie Godfrey fouled out in the second half and the team managed only 26 per cent from the floor after the break.

Winnipeg received outstanding performances from guard Dori McPhail who hit 13 of her 15 points during the second half and Dubesky who was the Wesmen's high scorer.

Ronnie Hind led the Vikettes with 14 points and Marg Mainwaring chipped in 13.

Winnipeg shot 45 per cent from the floor and took down 28 rebounds while Victoria managed 38 per cent and picked up 30 rebounds.

In another night game, Carol Turney scored 44 points in a losing cause as her Saint Mary's University Belles were eliminated from the championship side 81-70 by the Concordia University Stingers.

CANADIAN JUNIORS LOSE FOUR STRAIGHT

QUEBEC (CP) — Canada stumbled to its fourth consecutive defeat at the world junior curling championship Thursday night, dropping a 7-4 decision to Switzerland and falling to eighth place in the 10-country round-robin competition.

The United States beat Sweden 8-5 and continued to lead with a 6-1 won-lost record after seven rounds. Norway defeated West Germany 11-1 and was in second place with a 5-2 mark, while five teams — Sweden, France, Switzerland, Italy and Scotland — were deadlocked in third place at 4-3.

Canada, represented by Bill Jenkins' Charlottetown rink, was 3-4 and Denmark followed at 1-6 ahead of winless West Germany.

Other seventh-round action saw Scotland down France 6-5 and Italy nip Denmark 7-6.

In sixth-round action earlier Thursday, Don Barcome, Jr., of Grand Forks, N.D., downed Canada 7-4, Switzerland's Uung Tanner beat Lockhart Steele of Scotland 10-3, Italy's Nassino Alvera took Ralph Zimmerman of West Germany 11-7, Norway's Sjur Loen dropped Denmark 7-2 and Claude Feige of France defeated Sweden's Anders Grahn 6-3.

Oak Bay One Up In 'B' Playdowns

Oak Bay fumbled a 46-32 half time lead and then came on strong in the final minutes Thursday night to top James Bay Athletic Association 83-72 in the opening game of their best-of-three Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League semi-final series at Lambrick Park School.

James Bay fought back from the deficit to go ahead 62-61 before Oak Bay came up with six straight baskets to regain a 73-62 advantage.

The secomd game of the series is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. Monday at Victoria High School.

OAK BAY (84): John Lauvaas 24, Mike Taaffe 21, Tom Hatcher 17, Ken Christensen 11, Corky Jossul 4, Stu Montgomery 4, Al Huddleston 2.

JAMES BAY (63): Dave Speed 22, Ian Scott 14, John Campbell 12, Mike Morrill 8, Clare Anderson 8, Al Martyn 4, Dave Anderson 4, Clive Haas, Tom Child.

Trios Claim Opener As Alstad Gets Four

Stan Alstad fired four goals Thursday night to lead Oak Bay Trios to a 7-3 victory over Victoria Ray's Red Wings in the opening game of the best-of-three South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League consolation playoff final for the Grant Peart Memorial Trophy.

Oak Bay trailed 2-0 after the first period but had evened the count 3-3 going into the final 20 minutes.

The second game of the series is scheduled for 6 p.m. Sunday ate Memorial Arena.

Meanwhile, Saanich Braves can add the playoff title to their league crown with a win over Esquimalt Legion tonight in the fourth game of the best-of-seven championship final at 8 in Esdquimalt Sports Centre.

Tenpinners Set to Throw For Charity

Third annual charity tenpin bowlathon sponsored by the B.C. Women's Tenpin Bowling Association. will take place the week of March 13-19.

This year each local association will decide on which charity it will support. The last two years, B.C. bowlers have sponsored the "big brothers".

Pledge sheets will be given to each bowler, who will collect ¼, ½ or 1c against her individual scratch score bowled in regular league play that week.

For every dollar collected, 70 per cent will go to the charity selected and 30 per cent returned to the local tenpin bowling association.

DRUG BANNED

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Trotting Association has banned use of the drug Lasix at all its race tracks. The drug prevents bleeding.

Russians Win Dance

TOKYO (CP) — Canada made its best showing in world ice dancing competition in a decade when Susan Carscallen and Eric Gillies placed sixth today at the world figure skating championships with a well-received free-skating program.

Carscallen, 22, of Sudbury, Ont., and Gillies, 24, of Moncton, N.B., moved up from 10th place in 1976 and pronounced themselves satisfied with their progress.

Lorna Wighton, 18, of Toronto and John Dowding, 20, of Oakville, Ont., finished in 10th place in their first world championship, something that hasn't happened to a first-year couple since 1967.

In that year, Joni Graham and Don Phillips placed sixth in the world championship in Vienna and no Canadians have been that high in dance until now.

To no one's surprise, Irina Moiseeva and Andrei Minenkov of the Soviet Union won the dance title vacated by the retirement of perennial champions Ludhmila Pakhomova and Alexander Gorshkov Moiseeva and Minenkov, who wound up with a perfect nine ordinals and 207.82 points, had won the championship in 1975 when Gorshkov was unable to compete because of illness. The Russians have won the dance every year since 1970.

Janet Thompson and Warren Maxwell of Britain, once the dominant power in dance, placed second with 24 ordinals and 201.66 points, while Natalia Linichuk and Gennadi Karponosov of the Soviet Union edged Krisztina Regoeczy and Andraas Sallay of Hungary for third.

The victory gave the Soviet Union two gold medals in the competition. Irina Rodnina and her husband, Alexander Zaitsev, won the pairs crown Wednesday.

The other gold medal went to Linda Eratianne of the United States, winner of the women's singles title.

The remaining gold medal will be decided Saturday in the men's singles with Vladimir Kovalev of the Soviet Union holding the lead after the halfway point today.

Following the short program, the 24-year-old Olympic and world silver medallist had 10 ordinals and 85.64 points to stay ahead of European champion Jan Hoffman of East Germany, who finished with 17 ordinals and 83.56 points.

In third place was American champion Charles Tickner of Littleton, Colo., with 36.5 ordinals and 80.08 points.

It was disastrous for Ron Shaver, the 25-year-old Canadian champion from Cambridge, Ont., because it dropped him one spot to 10th place. He had 86 ordinals and 75.32 points.

Leier Sets Scoring Pace In Soccer

John Leier of UVic Vikings, the steadiest shooter since the mid-season break, has taken over the individual scoring lead in the premier division of the Vancouver Island Soccer League with 12 goals in 14 matches.

Leier has four games remaining while runner-up Dan Henry of Gorge Molsons, who has 10 goals, has three matches left.

The Hub City side, deadlocked for third place with Molsons, plays eighth-place Oak Bay in the lone Saturday match at 2:15 p.m. at Royal Athletic Park

Molsons, on the other hand, have to face second-place Victoria Athletics at the same time Sunday at Topaz Park.

Campbell Confirms NHL Studying Merger

MONTREAL (CP) — National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell denied Thursday that the NHL has entered into merger talks with the World Hockey Association, but did acknowledge the NHL is studying the idea.

Campbell's comments came in response to published reports that representatives of the rival leagues are discussing the possibility of a merger or amalgamation.

"All that's happening is that there is a fact-finding committee of the NHL that is exploring the validity of representations being made by proponents of a merger," Campbell said. "We want to separate the fact from the fiction."

Campbell would not say who was on the committee or where it was meeting.

WHA president Bill MacFarland confirmed from league offices in Toronto this week there were discussions between the two league but agreed the talks were not aimed primarily toward merger,

A lawyer for the WHA said Wednesday that Judge A. Leon Higginbotham of Philadelphia, who has jurisdiction in matters involving the NHL and WHA, had been informed last month that discussions between the two leagues on "matters of mutual concern" had begun.

It was reported in Washington this week that while it is premature to conclude merger or amalgamation of the two leagues is the aim of the talks, NHL and WHA sources indicate the possibility of such talks does exist.

Higginbotham issued a consent decree in 1974 approving the settlement of an anti-trust suit between the WHA and NHL over the NHL "reserve clause" and issuing guidelines for the relationships betwen the two leagues.

MacFarland said the current meetings "are nothing new" since the consent decree allowed for "meetings of common interest" to take place between the two leagues.

"But we've not had much success to get the NHL to these meetings," MacFarland added.

He said the history of professional sport in North America dictates that most franchises suffer when there is an over-exposure of the sport and that merger has been the end result.

He noted head-to-head clashes between the National and American football leagues and the National and American basketball associations as leading examples where the leagues have merged to survive.

He predicted one major pro league "in the near future, no later than the 1978-79 season."

"If there are two leagues, then there will be 12 in one league and seven in the other. Even the ones (teams) that look successful today really aren't."

Windy Weather Stymied Most Salmon Fishermen

Blustery weather has kept most boats off the water around Vancouver Island this past week but a few fishermen have managed to duck out between squalls and pick up a few salmon.

Chinooks from five to 13 pounds have come in from waters off Secretary Island and the Bluffs. Some limits were taken using anchovies, minnows or strip fished between 125 and 150 feet in depth.

Nobody seems to be venturing out at Becher Bay but a few fishermen heading out from Pedder Bay are landing chinooks to 18 pounds while trolling bait or green or blue Squirts close to the bottom along the Kelp Bed or in Whirl Bay.

Only sporadic action has been noted off the Victoria waterfront and at Oak Bay and Deep Cove.

Wind hasn't been as much of a problem in the relatively sheltered waters of Saanich Inlet and fishermen have been picking up chinooks to 12 pounds in Tod Inlet and along The Wall while smaller fish of the same species have come in from Bamberton, Henderson Point and Coles Bay.

Best success has been noted on strip, using approximately 200 feet of wire line and a planer.

* * *

Fishing for bluebacks in the two-to-three pound class is still excellent on bucktails in Finlayson Arm but anyone wanting to catch a chinook in the same vicinity will have to use extremely deep lines. The chinooks have been feeding on shrimp at about the 300-foot depth and no herring have appeared yet to bring them closer to the surface.

Further up-Island, Bold Bluff, Tent Island, Thetis Island and Poirlier Pass waters have been yielding fair catches of salmon and numerous blues are being caught around the mouth of Alberni Inlet.

Some fishermen have been getting out in the vicinity of Courtenay and landing small chinooks and blues.

Steelheading is still fairly poor and the entire winter season is rapidly shaping up as a complete disaster when you take the entire Island into consideration.

Success has even started to taper off in the Cowichan, where most of the action has taken place over the winter. A few steelhead were reported taken this past week in the Koksilah, Somass, Sproat, Tsable, Trent, Oyster and Salmon rivers.

Trout anglers are beginning to connect with some good catches in Shawnigan, Cowichan and Brannan lakes as well as at the mouth of Sproat River.

NIBBLES: Brian Inglis was re-elected president at the annual general meeting of the Amalgamated Conservation Society on Wednesday. . . . Brian represents the RCN Anglers on this association of conservation groups . . . Cam Vaesen of the South Vancouver Island Rangers was voted in as vice-president and Wayne Zaccarelli of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association was picked as secretary-treasurer.

A meeting has been called for 7:30 p.m March 11 at the Mill Bay Community Hall to discuss possible salmon enhancement projects on Shawnigan Creek, which drains Shawnigan Lake into Mill Bay . . . This particular stream had a wooden fish ladder and a spawning run of salmon at one time . . . Both have since disappeared . . . It would be well worth the effort of restoration.

* * *

Another meeting, sponsored by the Cowichan Unitarians, will feature Dr. Bristol Foster as a guest speaker . . . Foster, chairman of the B.C Ecological Reserves Committee, will be speaking on the subject of preserving the unique features of the Chemainus Rive Estuary . . . The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. March 10 at the St. Patrick Church Hall in Duncan . . . Admission is free and most outdoor-oriented people should find it interesting.

The latest catalogue from Breck's, the people who make the Mepps spinner, arrived the other day and is crammed with full-color photos and interesting tips on angling for many varieties of fish . . . It usually sells for from 25 to 75 cents but can be obtained for free by mentioning this column when writing: Breck's, P.O. Box 604, Sherbrooke, Quebec J1K 1C1.

Strange . . . You don't see most of the people who are upset over the possibility of a pheasant-shooting facility in Saanich at any of the environmental meetings concerned with loss of wildlife habitat . . This latter problem is far more threatening to entire populations of birds and animals than the shooting of a few pen-raised pheasants.

Alberta Rink Takes Crown

HALIFAX (CP) — Nini Mutch of Ontario salvaged her pride at the Canadian women's curling championships Thursday night, outshooting Alberta's Myrna McQuarrie for an 8-7 victory in an extra end in the final round.

The decision gave the Mutch foursome, playing out of Toronto's Humber Highland club, second spot in the 11-team championship but McQuarrie wrapped up the title with a 10th round win over Quebec earlier Thursday and suffered only a little disappointment in losing the game with Ontario.

Alberta finished at 9-1 but McQuarrie said later they wanted to go through the event undefeated.

Mutch expressed satisfaction with placing second and was smiling broadly moments later after a last-rock draw in the extra end gave her the victory over McQuarrie.

British Columbia, represented by Heather Kerr of Richmond, and Manitoba finished in a third-place tie with 7-3 logs.

Defending the title won last year by Lindsay Davies Sparkes, the Richmond rink got off to a disastrous start by losing on both of Sunday's draws. The recovery was a 6-1 showing over the last four days, but the Alberta champions refused to come back.

Young Unknown In Golf Spotlight

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Bill Rogers, another in the seemingly endless line of young men dominating the tour this year, one-putted 10 times on the way to a six-under-par 66 and took the first-round lead Thursday in the $200,000 Florida Citrus Open golf tournament.

Rogers, 25, who joined the tour in 1974 and has yet to win, twice reeled off strings of three consecutive birdies as he posted his career-best opening round.

Rogers, who had to survive the Monday qualifying round to gain a spot in the tournament field, held a one-stroke lead over Mexican Victor Regalado, Terry Diehl and Wally Armstrong, all with 67s on the windswept, heavily-wooded, 6929-yard Rio Pinar Country Club course.

Shutt and Lafleur Act Keeps Canadiens Rolling

By The Canadian Press

Followers of Montreal Canadiens consider themselves lucky because they have the opportunity to watch two of the best forwards playing today in the National Hockey League.

One is right winger Guy Lafleur, the other is left winger Steve Shutt. Together they have terrorized NHL opposing goaltenders with Shutt popping 52 goals and Lafleur getting 48 to this point.

Thursday night they were at it again with Shutt getting two goals and an assist and Lafleur getting a goal and two assists to run his league-leading points total to 106. It happened as the Canadiens stretched their unbeaten streak to 20 games with a 5-1 triumph over Pittsburgh Penguins.

In other action, Boston Bruins defeated New York Rangers 4-1, Washington Capitals downed Chicago Black Hawks 7-4, New York Islanders clipped Detroit Red Wings 4-2, Buffalo Sabres hammered Los Angeles Kings 7-2 and Philadelphia Flyers skated to a 5-2 win over Vancouver Canucks.

Sam Pollock, the general manager whose wise trading and draft selections appear to have the Canadiens on their way to another dynasty, was asked about his two young stars and compared them with many of the great line combinations of former NHL days like Bill and Bun Cook of New York Rangers, the Canadiens' punch line of Elmer Lach, Toe Blake and Maurice Richard and the Detroit combination of Sid Abel, Ted Lindsay and Gordie Howe.

"Both Lafleur and Shutt fit in well together," said Pollock. "It was the same type of thing with those other players. They threw the puck around and were great scorers.

"But it takes three fellows to make a line and you have to give credit to their centres. They played most of last year and part of this year with Peter Mahovlich and most of this year with Jacques Lemaire. You have to give them credit too. Guy and Steve play well with either one."

Pollock is proud of his men, but his counterpart with the Rangers is less than enthralled with the New York troops following their loss against the Bruins.

John Ferguson, who also coaches the Rangers, slapped a midnight curfew on his boys after they lost another opportunity to gain ground on third-place Atlanta Flames in the battle for the final playoff spot in the Patrick Division.

"You could see the frustration in their play," noted Boston centre Peter McNab. "Sometimes you just get too keyed up. You could see it in their faces how badly they wanted to win. But sometimes that just has the reverse effect."

The Rangers, with 15 games to play, trail the Flames by four points. Atlanta has 16 games remaining.

The Kings had just 15 shots at Buffalo goaltender Don Edwards as they saw their seven game unbeaten streak snapped by the Sabres. Bill Hajt, who had just 16 points going into the game, had two goals and an assist for the winners.

Mosher Hot, Lansdowne Grabs Title

Lansdowne Flyers, led by a sparkling 33-point production from Russ Mosher, downed Duncan Kinsmen 87-49 Thursday at Mount View gymnasium to sweep the best-of-three Vancouver Island bantam boys' basketball championship in straight games.

Mosher was picked as the series' most valuable player.

Vince Cullen added 12 points for Lansdowne, which advances to the B.C. tournament March 18-19 in Vancouver, while Jim Larsen topped Duncan with 13 points.

Shock for Salt Spring Boaters

AROUND OUR SHORES
pat dufour

The decision of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club to take over the largest marina on Salt Spring Island for an outstation is bad news for boaters this side of the Gulf of Georgia.

Phyl Sinclair, secretary of the Salt Spring Island Sailing Club, says about 30 members keep their boats at Scott Point Marina, recently bought by the plush Mainland club.

The Salt Spring Islanders have been given until the end of March to get their boats out. "It's a real shock," Phyl reports.

The Royal Van already let the island's power squadron, sailing club and water sports club to continue to hold their meetings at Scott Point but are mum on what Salt Spring Islanders can do for moorage.

The tiny Harbours End Marina at Ganges is too small and too poorly protected to handle moorage on a big scale. Owner Chuck Hankins has applied for federal assistance to help him improve and enlarge his facilities but Warren Parkinson, regional manager for small boat harbors, reports it could be two years before any help is forthcoming. He also warns there's no guarantee Chuck will get the funding he needs.

The Royan Van. already has two outstations where their members can tie up and enjoy the facilities when away from their home base.

One is at Silva Bay, in the Flat Top Islands near Nanaimo, and the other on Centre Island in Howe Sound.

Anyone who has seen the signs posted at these two spots, warning others off, can't be hopeful that Salt Spring Islanders and others wanting to use the newest one will get a break.

The Victoria Thunderbird fleet is holding its winter championships at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club this weekend. The five-race series will be sailed Saturday and Sunday, beginning at 10 a.m. each day.

RVYC's Laser sailors have series racing again on Saturday, starting at 1:30 p.m. Dave Richardson won the first of three races sailed last Saturday, edging Bob Britten and Barry Wright. In the second race it was Bob followed by Dave and Jim Williams. The third time around Dave beat out Bob and Barry.

Laser sailors of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association. also have series racing on Sunday, starting at 1 p.m. Last Week's winners were Frank Towler, George Kirkwood and Robin Spear.

Ed Life's Semiramis was the first boat home in the race sailed by RVYC's Cal 20 fleet last Saturday. After her came George Lewis' Sea Fever, Jack Truman's Tongariro, Frank Cushion's Por Gusto, Les Milton's Strumpet, John Martin's Idle Hour, Tony Marshall's Sunbeam, Ward Palmer's Calindigo, Peter Coy's Kittiwake, Brenda Jackson's Merlin and Eric Tomlinson's Tarkwa.

The Canoe Bay Sailing Club has another six-miles set for Saturday, starting in the vicinity of Sidney's government wharf at 1 p.m.

Forty-four boats took part in the club's 14½-mile Canoe Rock race last Sunday. The six-metre Llanoria, owned by Jim Ross and John Graeme, was over-all winner.

Next came Paul Longridge's Saga, Willi Fahning's Doninique, Roy Morahan's Starwagon, Gordie Inglis' Water Melon. Bert Buchanan's Lairig Ghru, Alan Dickinson's Viking, Daryl Foster's Tzonqua, Roger Vale's Temenos and Rick Baldwin's Summer Salt.

The Turkey Head Sailing Association had two races off Oak Bay Marina on Sunday. Leading the pack in the first race were Gerry Porter's Chelca, John Edward's Hunter, Jan Olsen's Discretion, Glen Hoggins' Freeway, Andy McBride's Crazy Jane, John Booth's Umpka and Tom Kriger's Taluca.

The top 10 boats in the secind race, subject to a protest yet to be heard, were Crazy Jane, Dennis Davis' Freya, Sly Fox, Freeway, Sunshine, Umpka, Discretion, Dennis Robinson's Hobo, Shuttlecick and Larry Shorter's Kila Kila.

Kuhn Approves Lindblad's Sale

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Bowie Kuhn approved the sale of relief pitcher Paul Lindblad to Texas Rangers by Oakland A's Thursday.

The baseball commissioner was unavailable for comment on the ruling, which followed a three-hour hearing Wednesday in Dallas.

At the hearing, Kuhn interviewed Charles O. Finley, owner of the A's with whom he has had frequent clashes in the past over the sale of players.

The commissioner had delayed approval of the $400,000 sale of Lindblad pending the hearing. Kuhn had said he was concerned that Finley was "liquidating" the Oakland ball club. He repeated that concern in Thursday's statement.

Kuhn had been accused by Finley of lacking "the guts or authority to cancel the sale."

Finley continued in like vein following Kuhn's decision. The Oakland owner called his meeting with Kuhn a "charade" and termed Kuhn's accusation that an attempt was being made to liquidate the Oakland club "a lie."

Keating Fourth Despite Record Toss

TORONTO — Joyce Yakubowich of Victoria was the only Canadian woman to place first in an event Thursday on the opening day of a three-way track and field meet with the Soviet Union and United States.

Robert Forget of Montreal won the men's high jump with a leap of 2.26 metres, eclipsing the previous Canadian record of 2.24 metres held by Claude Ferragne of Montreal and Dwight Stones of the U.S.

Mrs. Yakubowich, a competitor at the Montreal Olympics, finished in a tie with Sharon Dabney of the U.S. in the women's 440-yards, each clocking in at 56.6 seconds. The race was run in two sections. Tatiana Prorotchenko of the Soviet Union had third fastest time at 57.1.

Three other Victoria athletes fared well, with Tom Griffin running third in the 880, Murray Keating placing fourth in the 35-pound hammer throw and Debbie Scott finishing fifth in the women's mile.

Jim DeRienzo of Yonkers, N.Y. won the 880 in 1:52.0, Randy Makolosky of Calgary was second at 1:52.9 and Griffin clocked in at 1:53.5.

Keating established a Canadian native record with his heave of 67 feet, one and a half inches. Olympic champion Yuri Sedykh smashed the Canadian open record by nearly eight feet with his toss of 70 feet, six and a half inches; teammate Valentin Dmitrenko was second at 70 feet, one and three-quarter inches and George Frenn of the U.S. was third at 67-9¾.

Francis Larrieu-Lutz of the U.S. won the women's mile in 4:36, a Canadian open record, Julie Brown of the U.S. was second at 4:41.4 and Miss Scott timed in at 4:50.6, while Maureen Crowley of Vancouver was sixth and last at 4:51.1.

The previous record of 4:01.5 was established by Vladimir Panteley of the Soviet Union at Richmond, Va., in 1973.

Bayi took the lead early in the eight-lap race and held off a fast-closing Solomon Nyambui of Tanzania, who finished in 4:00.9. Mike Boit of Kenya was third in 4:03.0.

The event, an invitational race not included in the tri-country standings, was supposed to pit Bayi, the Tanzanian world record holder in the mile, against Eamonn Coghlan of Ireland, a student at Villonova University who has been almost unbeatable in the mile during the current indoor season.

Unfortunately for meet director Ken Twigg and a crowd of about 6000 at Maple Leaf Gardens, Coghlan pulled out of the event because of an injury.

The tri-country meet marks a departure from the dual-country meets the Soviet Union and the U.S. engaged in for several years before expanding this year to Canada.

Each country is officially represented by two athletes in each event.

Guidolin Hands Reins to Sather

EDMONTON (CP) — Bep Guidolin, general manager-coach of Edmonton Oilers of the World Hockey Association, said Thursday that he has handed his coaching duties to Glen Sather for the remainder of the season.

"I'm going to be a full-time general manager from here on in and I'll be spending my time working on improving the hockey club, both on the ice and off," Guidolin said in a news release.

He said his dual duties were too much for one man.

He almost hired a coach early in January, he added. "When Baltimore Clippers folded and Larry Wilson became available, I went after him but Detroit got there first."

Expressing confidence that the Oilers will make the playoffs, Guidolin said he alone made the decision to drop the coaching duties and that he wasn't pushed by anyone.

Sather made an auspicious debut as Edmonton's player-coach. He scored 71 seconds after his debut to help Oilers to a 5-4 victory over Winnipeg Jets.

Hotel Fire Kills Pensioners

LLOYDMINSTER, Sask. (CP) — Three old age pensioners died and two people are still missing following a fire Thursday which destroyed the Alberta Hotel in this community on the Alberta-Saskatchewan border.

Police identified the dead men as John Ludwig Gilles, 69, Johny Mahaffey, 67, and James MacDonald, whose age is unkown.

"They were old age pensioners who lived on the top floor of the three-storey hotel," an RCMP spokesman said.

"When the fire broke out, night clerk John Arnold went through the hotel and woke everybody.

"But we believe these men went back into their rooms to collect what belongings they had and the smoke spread so quickly that they were trapped and died of smoke inhalation."

The officer said a list of residents was made up and two men are still missing, but there was a chance that they had escaped and had checked into another hotel.

CUPE Joins NDP

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Union representatives of 400 municipal workers in southern Alberta voted Tuesday to affiliate with the federal and provincial arms of the NDP.

The workers, members of Local 70 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), are employed by municipal governments in southern Alberta.

Fee Hike Rapped

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — A recent provincial government decision to increase foreign students' tuition fees has been criticized by the local branch of a national women's organization.

The 60-member Lethbridge division of the Canadian Federation of University Women said in a letter to Advanced Education Minister Bert Hohol Tuesday that foreign students should be considered an asset at Alberta Universities.

Student Work Aid

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta will tackle the problem of student unemployment this summer with a $450,000 program.

Bert Hohol, minister of advanced education and manpower, kicked off the eighth annual hire-a-student program Monday before the 20 students and provincial civil servants who will help run it.

The students will participate in a three-dayy seminar where business leaders and government representatives will prepare them to establish 76 program offices in the province. The offices will open in April and May.

The program is jointly funded by Hohol's department and the federal department of manpower and immigration. The province will provide $200,000 and the federal government $250,000.

Chambers of commerce will provide co-ordination at the local level, establishing contracts with employers and in some cases providing or subsidizing rented offices.

Knife Used To Hold Girl Hostage

SASKATOON (CP) — An eight-year-old girl was taken hostage for about three hours Thursday and a knife held to her throat before she was released unharmed.

Police said a man abducted the girl from a city home about 5:45 p.m. The girl's mother, who had been living with the man, telephoned police.

The man's car was stopped at a roadblock more than an hour later. The man, armed with a knife, used the girl as a hostage and demanded to see the woman. He held a knife to the girl's throat at one point.

Car Rates Up 5%

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan Government Insurance Office has announced a five per cent increase in automobile insurance rates in most vehicle categories.

Ed Whelan, minister responsible for SGIO, said today a "small" increase in rates is necessary to keep pace with the accident rate, body shop rates and parts costs.

However, most motorists who registered a car last year will pay the same or slightly less than same rates because of the aging of their vehicle, he said.

Rates for light farm trucks, public service vehicles and commercial power units will increase by 15 per cent to reflect adverse loss ratios in these categories, Whelan said.

As well, 27,000 trucks used for private, pleasure and recreational purposes and formerly registered as commercial vehicles, will be required to register in the commercial vehicle category.

The auto insurance fund this year is expected to show a surplus of $1.9 million after adjustment for reserves because the increase in the rate of accidents of 6.8 per cent was less than expected, he said.

The rate hikes will increase premium income this year by 4.3 per cent, he said.

11 LANGUAGES . . . NO FRENCH

CALGARY (CP) — A multilingual sign carrying greetings in 11 languages outside the Calgary Stampede and Exhibition grounds in southeast Calgary will be altered to include French.

Dave Paulson, publicity officer for the stampede, said in an interview Wednesday the ommission of French had to be rectified.

The nine-by-six-foot sign hangs on the northwest corner of the grounds.

The stampede, which honors Canada's Indians, will be held July 6-17.

Edmonton Crime Studied

EDMONTON (CP) — Police Chief Robert Lunney said Thursday federal government researchers will launch a pilot study of crime in the city March 21.

Lunney said the project is called a "victimization study" to determine the actual dimension of the present crime problem and its causes.

A major emphasis will also be on crime that is never reported to police and on the relative risk of city residents becoming victims of crime.

Lunney told city council's economic affairs committee the study will be the first of its kind in Canada and that it will be funded entirely by the federal solicitor general's department.

The chief said he expects to hire about six researchers who will gather data during the next four months.

The findings probably will not be published unto next year, he said.

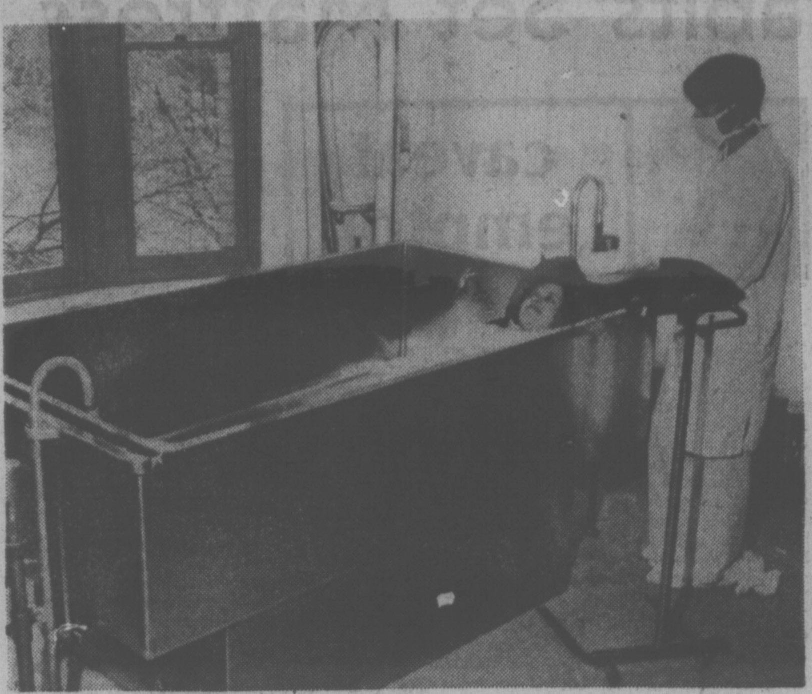
Burns!

For Scarred Victims, The Super Treatment

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff



Special bathtub has rig for lowering patient on stretcher

Everyone enlisted in battle on infection

The burns unit at Victoria General Hospital is an antiseptic two-bed hideaway for people up and down Vancouver Island who have suffered among the most painful and lingering of wounds.

Built almost six years ago from money contributed by organized labor, the city of Victoria and businessmen, it was named in memory of the late Victoria mayor A. W. Toone.

Since then all sorts of people have come to lie naked there, sometimes victims of their own stupidity, sometimes the end products of what sound like comic accidents but aren't.

In her 4½ years as head nurse, Mrs. Bea Sinclair has seen them all.

Among the more common are people who have fallen asleep, perhaps after too much to drink, and had cigarettes set their mattresses or chesterfields or clothes alight.

There have been men burned by caustic soda at pulp mills, the so-called black liquor used to cook wood, and hydro men seared by hot wires. One of them lost both legs and an arm a few years ago but is up and around today.

Caustic soda just keeps on burning you until it is neutralized. Bea recalls one of the men had it in his boots, eating away at his feet, until nurses could get him into their big stainless steel tub called a Hubbard.

Old people sometimes burn themselves with water too hot in the bathtub, she says. Then there was the young man who burned his face and hands when a fondue caught fire and he tried to carry it outside.

Two accidents she recalls involved boiling hot tar and in both cases the victims ended up in the water for relief. One was a carpenter who had the bad luck to be standing below when a tar pot spilled. He jumped into the Gorge waterway.

A roofer was burned in the other case and his quick-thinking friends threw him into a nearby swimming pool.

There have been children burned by pots overturned on stoves and a waitress hurt when brandy poured on a sizzling steak exploded.

More than once men have been burned when they used gasoline to clean machine parts and one older man died when burned by an exploding propane tank in his trailer.

One man whose pyjamas somehow caught fire when he opened an oven spent 142 days in the burns unit. An 11-year-old boy from up-island was there 193 days after a house fire. A woman whose cigarette started a bed fire holds the current record, 252 days.

It's skin which is destroyed by burns and your skin being your first line of defence against infection, the burns unit and nurses concentrate on keeping their patients super-clean.

First job facing the nurses and a burn victim goes under the name debriding, cleaning up the burns, sometimes picking the charred clothing out, scraping the dead tissue away. It can hurt. The victim lies in the big stainless steel tub, where warm water can be delivered through a gentle spray.

He may be sedated first. Then there is the mask for more help if he needs it. It delivers a little anaesthetic, nitrous oxide. The more pain, the harder he breathes, the harder he breathes, the more anaesthetic. Self regulating.

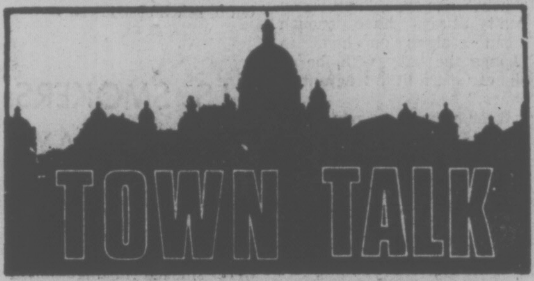
Saline compresses and antibiotic creams are the usual dressings for burns. Often patients cannot be covered so heaters above the bed keep them warm.

Air conditioning in the burns unit keeps patients surrounded by sterile air. Sterile linen is used. Special attention is paid to diet and fluid levels.

Plastic surgeons care for burned people and often skin grafts, sometimes many of them, are needed. These tissue-paper layers of skin simply lie unattached atop the area where they are to take root. They're vulnerable, will move if disturbed. Bea says nurses watch over them like any fanatic gardener guarding a pet plot.

"It's real nursing," she says of work in the burns unit. "It's nursing care which pulls people through."



TOWN TALK

Tory leader Scott Wallace Thursday entered the contest to name the provincial government's new Burrard Inlet crossing ferry system.

Wallace asked Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, minister responsible for the two-ferry pedestrian crossing system, whether the advertisements and the $500 prize for the contest were justified in this time of government restraint.

After Curtis replied that the Socred government's advertising budget was less than that of the NDP, Wallace offered his suggestion, and perhaps his evaluation of Curtis' answer.

The new ferry system should be named Curtis' Regional Aid to Pedestrians, Wallace said, or, in its acronym form, CRAP.

The mascot of the research vessel Pandora II and the ship's submersible Pisces IV is lost when it comes to navigating on dry land.

Answering to Queenie, or just Dog, the six-year-old brown and tan female German shepherd went missing Tuesday night when the crews took her with them when they put in at Sidney for shore leave.

"She's not used to life on land and got lost," says Pisces IV's pilot Frank Chambers

Queenie has a habit of getting lost afloat too. She's named Queenie because her new masters found her about three months ago halfway across Queen's Reach in Jervis Bay. If you find her you can rescue her for the second time by phoning 656-6895.

In addition it supervises all transport of liquor in the province

The other guys form the Liquor Distribution Branch in Vancouver and they run the liquor stores.

But it is tough to remember which one of the two organizations has the blimp.

When the tug Gibraltar Straits was built in 1965 for Straits Towing Ltd., now Rivtow Straits Ltd., nobody thought she'd actually ply the waters for which she's named.

But under the command of Capt. Fred Whitford of Surrey, she did just that this month, sailing from the English port of Hull, towing a barge to be delivered to Piraeus in Greece.

Working for the past year on North Sea oil exploration work, the Vancouver tug has now been chartered for a year to haul barges from Piraeus to Jeddah, the principal port of entry to Saudi Arabia from the Red Sea.

Rescue Centre Studied

The centre will be studied in April by Major Bill Leslie of Ottawa, the defence department's representative on the permanent interdepartment committee on search and rescue, appointed by the federal government in January.

Major Lou Villeneuve said Thursday Leslie's recommendations are almost certain to result in improvements.

He said they probably would include microfilming and other means to allow his staff to co-ordinate their efforts faster. Such equipment is used by the United States' Coast Guard centre in Seattle.

Villeneuve said the Victoria centre will be used as a pattern for the three other rescue centres, based in Edmonton, Trenton and Halifax.

"They (the committee) will be visiting the various regions and deciding how to operate on a standard pattern, based on what's happening here," he said.

The centre moved from Vancouver to CGB Esquimalt in 1970 and "is the most modern and the most efficient of the four," Villeneuve said.

The committee was established by the federal government to correlate all search and rescue policy recommendations, Villeneuve said. Prior to January, the defence, ministry of transport, environment and fisheries departments had all been making separate reports.

Bert Simpson . . . 50 years of six-day weeks

That's Shoe Biz . . . for Him

He started operating on Douglas, next door to his present store, on June 6, 1930, moving to the present premises four years later.

He daren't hazard a guess as to the number of boots and shoes he's repaired since then.

Greater Victoria roofers will miss him even more than his other customers. For them, the quiet-spoken Simpson developed a leather strip, which attached to the left side of their crepe-soled boots, protected them from long hours of squatting on that side of the boot.

Simpson is looking forward to taking it easy, a luxury rarely known in 50 years of six-day weeks. He also plans to fish, garden and tackle some of the household chores he's had to neglect.

Students Step Up Fee Fight

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

University of Victoria students are talking about organizing a mass demonstration March 21 in an effort to head off a proposed 25 per cent tuition fee hike.

Student leaders said Thursday they have been encouraged by the Senate's 18 to 14 vote earlier this week to oppose the increase. The Senate will recommend the Board of Governors hold the fees at the present term's $426.

But UVic president Dr. Howard Petch is almost certain to recommend the governors increase fees — a move he said is necessary to prevent staff lay-offs.

The governors meet March 21, but before that time, student leaders will step up their lobby.

Alma Mater Society vice-president Joe Barrett will introduce a motion at Sunday's meeting of the Representative Assembly calling for a general meeting of students.

If that passes, the meeting will probably be held March 9.

The student body at large will be asked to support a mass demonstration March 21.

"We were really surprised. And of course delighted," student senator Rosemary Gray said about the Senate vote.

She said no one expected the motion to pass, "but now we're really hopeful" the decision will influence the governors.

She said student senators argued for more than an hour citing reason after reason why fees shouldn't be increased.

"We changed some minds," she said. "I think some of the faculty (Senators) felt guilty. If they didn't vote for the motion, it would appear their salaries are more important than fees."

Gray said a tuition fee increase is putting the cart before the horse. Fees shouldn't increase until there is enough financial aid for students to be able to pay them, she said.

Petch said earlier that the government grants to the university for general expenditures amount to only about five per cent more than last year.

Metric Help Refusal 'Unfair'

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Ottawa's refusal to help defray the municipal costs of metric conversion is inequitable and unfair, Saanich Ald. Ian Cass said today.

He said the metric conversion program was ordered by Ottawa but costs are being shifted to the provincial and municipal governments who have other financial burdens to bear.

"We are hard-pressed to find enough funds to pay for sidewalks and other things without having this burden added to our shoulders."

Cass was commenting on a statement Thursday by Clare Bolger, federal Metric Commission chairman, who said no federal funds will be available to meet a Saanich request for assistance with metric conversion costs. He made the comment at a news conference at the conclusion of the commission's first meeting in Victoria. Bolger said some provincial governments might be willing to provide financial assistance with conversion but there is no provision for federal grants.

Cass said today he will raise the issue with Esquimalt-Saanich Conservative MP Don Munro although he is not optimistic that Saanich can win its case.

"Quite frankly we cannot afford to get into a David and Goliath confrontation with Ottawa on this issue because it would be an expensive battle.

"We are going to have to save our money and energies for the bigger battles with Ottawa over things like public transportation and energy conservation.

"Ottawa's decision on metric conversion costs, however, is obviously inequitable and unfair."

At the urging of Cass, Saanich council has passed a resolution asking for federal funding.

Saanich has already spent $10,000 on the program and council last week agreed to advance another $3,500 to prepare speed limit signs in kilometres.

The new signs, 50 kmh in the city and 80 on the highway, will be used on all B.C. highways by September. They will carry small signs down below giving the equivalent in miles per hour.

The small signs will be removed within six months time.

Travelling 50 kmh is just a fratction faster than the present speed limit in the city but the 80 kmh is identical to the present Vancouver Island highway speed limit.

New UVic Vote Set for Tuesday

A second election for the presidency of the Alma Mater Society at the University of Victoria will be held Tuesday.

The first on Feb. 16 was declared invalid this week by the student Representative Assembly after it received a report that a number of students may have been deprived of their right to vote.

AMS general manager David Clode told the assembly two of the five polling stations ran out of ballots just before polls closed. He said it could have affected the outcome by five to 10 votes.

The assembly also invalidated the results of the election for treasurer where Dale McClanaghan defeated Douglas Moore by 28 votes.

But Moore withdrew from a second campaign and McClanaghan was declared AMS treasurer by acclamation. All other executive positions were filled by acclamation before the Feb. 16 election.

Ask the Times

Q. I have lost my social insurance card and would like to know where to write to obtain a new one. — M.A.

A. Go to the Unemployment Insurance Commission office in the Bank of Commerce building at Douglas and View. (Use the View Street entrance and go to the second floor.)

They will process another application for you, but you have to bring three pieces of identification. If you are a Canadian citizen, bring your birth certificate, if not bring immigrant papers or citizenship papers. Bring all your change of name documents such as a marriage certificate if you are female. And if you've been divorced and remarried, bring both marriage certificates. The third piece of I.D. can be a driver's licence or similar piece of identification.

Q. Is Joan Crawford still married to Franchot Tone? W.B.

A. No. She first married Douglas Fairbanks Jr., and then Franchot Tone. She married twice more, first Phillip Terry and, finally, Alfred Nu Steele, who died in 1959.

Sleeping Habits Set Mattress Size

By LYNNE GORDON

In my last column, I discussed those things that should be examined when selecting an inner-spring mattress and box spring — the number and thickness of the coils, the kind of padding and the type of construction. However, the only true test of comfort and support is to lie on the mattress before you buy it.

When you take your "lie in" test in the store, check to see if the mattress is long enough and wide enough for you to sleep comfortably.

The standard sizes of mattresses are: Twin — 39 inches by 74 inches, with an extra six or seven inches available for the extra long length; Regular — 54 inches by 74 inches; Queen — 60 inches by 80 inches; and King —78 inches by 80 inches, with outsizes available,

There are no hard and fast rules on how much room you will need for a comfortable sleep. This is an individual matter, and depends on your size, height and weight. Some dealers advise that a person should purchase a mattress that is at least 10 inches longer than his or her height, and one that is at least 38 inches wider. These measurements will give the sleeper plenty of room to move around, roll over and shift position. A recent study showed that the average couple are sleeping in an area that provides each of them with only slightly more room than their baby's crib!

Again, there are no set rules regarding the "proper" length or width of a mattress. The right length and width for you will depend on your sleeping habits and those of the person you sleep with. Do you curl up and sleep in the fetal position? Then a standard 74 or 75 inch bed should suit you very well. How about those people who like to stretch out to their full height? You may have to go to an 80 inch, oversize mattress. A dealer suggests that "anyone over six feet should look in to an extra long mattress."

When choosing a bed to share, should you buy a single or double bed mattress? This answer is, once again, dependent upon how light a sleeper you are, and how much the other person's movements interrupts your sleep. Some couples seem to prefer the oversized beds so that they can still sleep together, but have some "elbow room." Examine your sleep habits — which elements exist for you when you can truly say, "I've had a good nights sleep."

Many people are investing in convertible or fold-out beds. Don't expect to purchase a good quality mattress when you buy this type of bed. This mattress is made with a special type of coil that is much softer than those in a regular mattress. It has to be softer to allow you to fold up the bed, and when constantly opened and closed, the soft coil simply wears out. — and very quickly too, if its unfolded every night.

In my last column I spoke about the construction of inner-spring mattresses of various types. There are other kinds of mattresses on the market, and these include latex and urethane foam.

The hardness, resiliancy and durability of any kind of foam will depend upon its chemical makeup. There are specific grades of foam, and the quality (and price) is dependent upon the number of cells produced during the chemical process. The greater the number of cells, the better quality the foam, because it "breathes," or returns instantly to its original shape. A cheap foam mattress will "suffocate" and flatten out very quickly.

A typical latex (or carbamate) foam mattress is firmer than the typical inner spring mattress and will revert quickly to its orignal shape as soon as the pressure on the surface is removed. In addition, the latex mattresses are dustless, odorless and non-allergenic.

Another man-made foam on the market goes under the name of urethane. Urethane mattresses share many of the characteristics of latex foam, and are washable as well. They are very lightweight and can be moved or carried with comparable ease.

However, urethane is a cheaper grade mattress, and although it will conform well to the body shape, it doesn't "remember" its own shape as the sleeper moves. Depressions will remain long after you've shifted your weight to another area. There will be a feeling of sinking or sliding into the mattress as you lie on it.

Do foam mattresses give you the correct support? Apparently so, and a doctor who has treated a lot of back ailments told me that the "best kind of mattess is two to three inches of foam on a plywood base." It sounds like sleeping on the floor, but it may do wonders for your back.

As with any product, no standard guarantee exists for mattresses, and each manufacturer will have his own type. For example, some pocket coil inner springs are guaranteed for 15 years, while some open coil mattresses are under warranty for only one year. If you change your mind after a short while or become dissatisifed with your purchase, you can not return the mattress to the retailer, in most cases. Many dealers may have an exchange policy, providing the bed is still clean and only used a few days. Painless Way To Remove Adhesive Tape

By NORMAN H. STARK

Adhesive tape used in medicine for protecting cuts and wounds contains a special adhesive that is free of chemicals that could cause skin irritations. The systdm is designed in such a way that tafions. The system is decloth tape than to the skin, thereby making it removable after it has served its purpose.

Unfortunately the bond is not only to the skin but to the hairs as well, so removal can be a painful process. But here's a formula that will help a lot.

THE FORMULA

You'll need one-fourth cup ISOPROPYL ALCOHOL (from a drugstore) and ten drops WINTERGREEN OIL EXTRACT. Stir the extract into the alcohol and store in glass eyedropper bottle. To use, apply with dropper along edges of tape and allow fluid to soak in for about five minutes before removing. Note: Isopropyl Alcohol is toxic and flammable.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

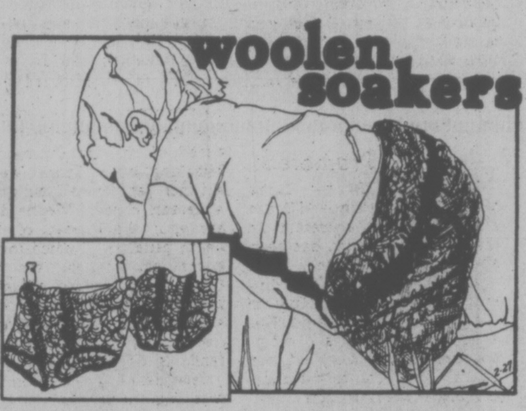
(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it—listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

U.S. SMOKERS PUFF AWAY TO RECORD

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A record 616 billion cigarettes were smoked in the United States last year—nine billion more than in 1975. The agriculture department, in a summary on the tobacco situation, also said that a record 693 billion cigarettes were made in 1976, compared with 651 billion the previous year. Filter-tip cigarettes accounted for 88 per cent of total output last year.

Getting Back to Basics—with Soakers

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®



When Stephanie Mendelson and her husband moved to their West Virginia homestead, they committed themselves to live lives that were as environmentally oriented as they could make them . . . without becoming fanatics on the subject.

It seemed only right, then, for their firstborn — a beautiful baby girl — to be delivered naturally, for her first food to be mother's milk, for her to wear plain cotton diapers, and for her clothes to be made with simple patterns and from natural fibres.

Everything about their baby, in short, seemed part of a larger harmony . . . except for the plastic pants that Stephanie put on over her diapers. The pants weren't that big a problem, to be sure . . . but they did clash enough with the rest of the baby's clothes to push Stephanie into doing a little research.

"After all," she reasoned, "rubber and plastic haven't been around as long as babies have. Other mothers at other times have faced the problem that now confronts me. And they must have found a way of solving it."

Stephanie eventually decided to replace her daughter's plastic diaper covers with the wool "soakers" in which whole generations of healthy farm children have been raised. These are nothing but short, plain pants knitted or corcheted of handspun, unprocessed — to leave the natural lanolin in — wool. The lanolin (an oil found in sheep's fleece), of course, makes the finished pants water repellent, not waterproof.

We realize that not everyone has access to homespun wool the way Stephanie does. No problem. You can make your soakers from regular store-bought woolen yarn (just crochet them up about three times too big and then shrink them — a process known as "felting" — down to size)

But do use wool. It will absorb and hold a certain amount of moisture, whereas acrylic and other man-made fibers will not. (If your baby is allergic to wool, you can substitute Angora goat hair or rabbit fur.)

Although the pants can be knitted, it is faster to crochet them . . . and all you need to make a pair is a size "J" crochet hook and four ounces of wool.

To whip up a set of the soakers (which correspond to a "medium" pair of plastic pants), just cast on 55 stitches and crochet for 6½ inches. Then, centred along the bottom of the first piece, add a second crocheted piece that is 10 stitches wide and two inches long.

(You can, if you like, crochet this crotch area with a smaller needle to make it "tighter." If you do, though, you'll have to adjust the stitches so that this part of the garment will still be as large as it's supposed to be.)

Finally, increase five stitches on both sides of the second strip and continue crocheting for another 6½ inches. It's then a simple matter to join the sides of the last panel to those of the first and — voila — you have another pair of baby pants.

Note that thils pattern has only two seams and, when Stephanie sews them together, she uses a different colored yarn than the yarn from which she crocheted the main body of the soakers. This makes it easy — as a baby grows — to find the seams, pull them, and add an inch or two all around the crocheted panels . . . so the pants can grow too!

One of the "old-timers" on MOTHER's staff — who raised at least one baby in soakers — recommends a minimum of a good dozen pair of the pants. "Wool dries slowly," she says, "and if you don't always have enough clean soakers on hand to change the baby with, he or she can get a little fragrant at times."

Wash your homespun pants in cool to lukewarm water and, whenever possible, dry them in the sun (to bring out more of the wool's lanolin). As long as you don't use detergents, the lanolin never seems to completely wash out of the fibers. Occasionally increase and restore the soakers' natural water repellency by rubbing some vegetable oil or unscented lanolin (available from drugstores) into them.

Unlike plastic pants which cause rashes, the all-wool soakers keep a baby warm, even when wet, and actually prevent diaper rash.

GOLD SOLD FOR POOR

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The International Monetary Fund (IMF) sold 524,400 ounces of gold Wednesday at an average price of $146.51 an ounce to raise money for the poorest of the less developed countries (LDCs). The sale, the seventh in a series dating to last June, netted the IMF's special trust fund $55.6 million in profits bringing the total amount raised for the LDCs to $448.7 million.

Placebo Has Role In Treatment

By LESTER L. COLEMAN

I get severe itching of the upper lip. It drives me crazy. These episodes come on every few days. My grandmother says (and I'm not kidding) that intestinal worms can cause this. What do you say? — Miss J.S.

Dear Miss S.:

Readers of my colmn know that I have great respect for grandmothers' wisdom. However, in this instance, I must depart from my admiration for grandmothers' diagnostic acumen.

Instead, I would give consideration to the greater possibility that itching of the upper lip is allergic in origin. It may be due to some substance you're in contact with.

Lipsticks, hair sprays, hair dyes, and cosmetics generally, may be the offender.

Itching of the lips can also be an allergic reaction to certain foods or drugs.

When itching becomes so intolerable, consultation with an allergist may help identify the responsible substance. Allergists have at their command many excellent techniques to track down the irritant.

Intestinal worms can cause itching around the rectal area. If you want to satisfy your grandma, it's easy to rule out the possibility of worms.

Dear Mrs. F.:

The incessant heartbeat which is transferred to the ear can be most annoying. It's especially noticeable when you are fatigued, in a quiet room or when you are emotionally upset.

The assurance that you say you were given by two ear specialists should, for the time being, reduce your anxiety.

When the pregnancy is over there are numerous studies of the blood vessels that can be made in order to track down any specific cause of this referred heartbeat.

HOT DOG! WEINERS HAVE MERITS

Nutrition Buyline

QUESTION: Are wieners good for children?

ANSWER: Wieners are included in the meat and meat alternates group. They contain nutrients similar to other members of the meat group at lower levels. One and a half vieners, or a three-ounce serving, is equivalent to two ounces of lean meat, fish or poultry. A young child may have difficulty eating the larger portion. Wieners are lower in iron than most other meats. They can be offered occasionally but a wide variety of meats should be included in a child's diet.

QUESTION: Instead of three meals a day, 'I am skipping lunch. Will this help me lose weight?

ANSWER: Meal skipping is a poor way to lose weight. It actually may increase appetite for the next meal or for between-meal snacks which results in increased food intake. Skipping of meals is likely to lead to the choice of unbalanced diets. Actually, several small and regular meals each day may provide greater satisfaction to the person on a reducing diet than the normal three-meal pattern.

QUESTION: What is calcium propionate and why is it used in bakery food?

ANSWER: This is a calcium salt of propionic acid, found widely in natural and processed foods, including the yeast leavened foods—bread and cheese. Calcium propionate inhibits mould growth which would otherwise develop in bread within about three days. It has no effect on staling.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Just What Is Tapioca?

By DR. JEAN MAYER and Dr. JOHANNA DWYER

Q. What exactly is tapioca? Is it grown naturally or is it a manufactured product?

A. Tapioca is a manufactured product. It is made from the starchy root of a shrub called manioc, or cassava, which is extensively grown in central and South America, as well as in Africa. (Cassava root, incidentally, is the principal food of many people n the tropics. Because of its very low protein content, however, protein malnutrition is common in communities that depend heavily on it.)

To produce "pearl" tapioca, the starch is extracted from the cassava root and formed into a dough. The dough is then forced through a sieve to form the pellets or pearls, which are dried at high temperatures. "Minute" tapioca, which is more popular now, is made by baking the dough in thin sheets and then pulverizing it to a granular consistency.

Tapioca itself provides little nutrition except some calories from the starch .When made with milk, a half-cup serving of tapiocal pudding contains about 160 calories with all the nutrients in the milk. It's a good dessert for children and those of us who can afford the calories.

Q. I'd be interested to know the difference between apple juice and unfermented apple cider.

A. There really is very little nutritional difference. Both contain about 120 calories per cup and supply small amounts of calcium, iron and B vitamins. The chief difference between apple juice and apple cider is in the type of apples selected. Apples with a high acid astringency-to-sugar ratio are preferred in cider production.

Both apple juice and apple cider sold in supermarkets are filtered and pasteurized. And as I'm sure you know, much of the cider sold at roadside stands is not cider at all.

Q. I know that salad dressing does not cost as much as mayonnaise, but both seem to look and taste quite similar. What is the difference?

A. Mayonnaise contains about twice as much fat as salad dressing, which gives it a somewhat richer taste. According to government standards, mayonnaise must be made of vegetable oil and egg emulsified to a semi-solid form and seasoned with acidifying ingredients and spices. It must contain at least 65 per cent oil by weight. Salad dressing also contains oil (30 per cent by weight), egg and seasonings, but it is thickened with a cooked starch, such as tapioca flour, wheat flour or rye.

As you might expect, because salad dressing is lower in fact, it is also lower in calories. A tablespoon of mayonnaise contains about 100 calories; the same amount of salad dressing provides about 60, making it a somewhat better choice for weight-conscious consumers.

Day-Care Centre Bill $168M

OTTAWA (CP) — Day-care services have improved in Canada but the standards vary from province to province, parents still pay most of the cost and much remains to be done, says the Canadian Council on Social Development.

A report on Canadian day-care standards, recently made public by the council estimates the cost of day-care services at publicly-regulated centres in 1976 at $168 million.

Of the amount, the federal government contributed $21 million, with a matching amount from provincial and municipal governments. Parents paid the remaining $126 million.

H. Philip Hepworth, program director and author of the report, said in an interview that about 80,000 children are placed at subsidized, publicly-regulated day-care centres. Most working parents cannot afford the cost of day-care centres and have to make informal arrangements, such as using babysitters or asking relatives, friends and neighbors for help.

There were about 600,000 children under the age of six in Canada at last count, Hepworth said.

The report says day-care legislation and standards have improved substantially in the last five years, but notes variance of standards not only among provinces but between urban and rural areas.

In children-per-staff requirements, the council recommends a maximum of nine children between the ages of three and four for each staff member, but the number permitted under provincial legislation varies from five to 20.

Another variance is in the minimum space required for each child, from a low of 25 square feet to a high of 60 square feet.

The report also adds that day-care centre staff salaries are "lower than they should be."

U.S. City Media Must Be Split

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals has ruled that the same company cannot own a newspaper and a television or radio station in the same city unless the joint operation is in the public interest. The ruling, which overturns an order of the Federal Communicaiotns Commission, FCC, might affect 79 joint newspaper-television ownerships or an unspecified number of newspaper-radio ownerships across the U.S.

Mixed Marriage Upsets Blacks

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is in her senior year at college. She is a beautiful girl who has won many honors and beauty contests, but she never let it go to her head. She was always very popular with both boys and girls, and she never gave us any trouble.

She wrote to tell us that she plans to get married after she graduates in June. The man (from what she says about him) is a fine person. He is her college professor.

My husband is heartbroken and says if she marries him she can't set foot in our house again. You see, he is of a different color. I also feel that she would be better off marrying her own kind, but I could never turn her away from our door.

How can I get my husband to change his mind and accept our daughter's husband even if he is white? We are black. — MICHIGAN MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Remind your husband that for a people who have suffered from racial discrimination for centuries to insist on "reverse discrimination" in choosing a mate makes no sense. He'll lose his daughter and gain nothing for his race.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 40-year-old divorced woman who came to visit Chicago from a foreign country last October. Without going into detail, I find myself now in a most distressing circumstance.

I am confirmed to be pregnant. The man has left me, and I am without friends, without funds and no source of income.

I will not submit to an abortion as it is against my religious principles. Where can I get help? I feel my obligation to give life to this child, but I cannot see my way clear to be a proper mother and raise a child.

Please, please help me. — stranded

DEAR STRANDED: Call BIRTHRIGHT — 312-233-0353. A courteous, understanding woman will answer all your questions and offer suggestions that are alternatives to abortion. At no cost to you you will be offered medical care for yourself, and arrangements for the adoption of your child. Counseling is available free, too. I urge you to call them at once. Good luck and God bless. Please let me know how you make out. I care.

Woman Promoted

OTTAWA (CP) — Livia Marie Thur, 48, since 1975 the senior assistant secretary in the science ministry, has been appointed associate vice-chairman of the National Energy Board, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said. The appointment fills a long-standing vacanoy on the board and increases the number of members to nine.

Cinnamon Rolls Corrected

Owing to a typographical error, two ingredients were ommitted from this recipe when it appeared in The Times on Wednesday. Here is the complete recipe:

¼ teaspoon soda
¼ cup white sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 packet dry yeast
2½ cups flour, about
1 cup buttermilk
3 tablespoons salad oil
2 tablespoons water
¼ cup melted butter
½ cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup finely chopped nuts

Mix together soda, white sugar, salt, yeast and 1 cup of the flour. Heat buttermilk and salad oil until just below boiling or until small bubbles gather around edge of pan. Add milk to flour mixture and beat well. Stir in the rest of flour and knead dough until smooth and elastic, using more flour it needed. Butter 12 muffin cups or tins. Mix the water with half the melted butter and half of the brown sugar, dividing mixture in muffin tins. Roll dough out to a rectangle, 12 by 15 inches. Spread dough with remaining butter and brown sugar sprinkling with cinnamon and nuts if desired. Roll dough into a round and cut into 12 slices, placing in muffin tins. Set to rise in warm place for about 1 hour, or until doubled. Bake at 350 degrees about 25 minutes. Turn rolls out of warm pans.

Lesser Charge In Hijacking

NEW YORK (AP) — One of five Croatian nationalists accused of murder during the hijacking of a Trans World Airlines jet pleaded guilty to a lesser charge Wednesday, escaping the threat of the death penalty. "I acted in the cause of freedom for the Croatian people and all other people" declared Mark Vlasik, 29, of Stamford, Conn., one of four Croatian-born defendants demanding Croatia's independence from Communist Yugoslavia.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel: During my husband's stay in the hospital recently he received several potted plants of chrysanthemums which I would love to save for transplanting outdoors later. Should I keep them indoors this winter and wait until spring for the transplanting? Even if the blooms fade and the leaves become withered will they survive from the roots if held indoors during the freezing weather? Any suggestions you offer will be appreciated.—V.R.

Dear V.R.: First, here's hoping your husband has a speedy recovery. As for his mums, their recovery will not be quite so fast. The best way to insure a profusion of outdoor blooms this spring is to cut them all back down to about two inches from the soil when the flowers die and the leaves become withered. Keep them in the sunniest spot in your home (out of sight of company, if possible, since a potful of stems is not the most decorative sight in the world), water only when they are very dry, and then, come spring, plant them in a nice sunny spot in your garden.

They should come back to full bloom within three of four weeks, and then, for the next several years, you should be able to cut them back and leave them outside and expect new blooms every year.

Program Arranged

PARIS (Reuter) — The Canadian and Venezuelan co-chairmen of the North-South conference of rich and poor countries will meet in Caracas on Monday to fix a program leading to a final ministerial meeting, senior officials said Wednesday. The 19 developing countries involved in the conference which began here in December, 1975, have called for a resumption of their stalled talks with industrial countries.

Royal Oneupsmanship In Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Mihister Trudeau has dismissed as an "untruth of the grossest sort" charges that the Queen had been asked to curtail her scheduled visit to Canada for the good of the country.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker quoted Ontario Premier William Davis as making the charge.

Trudeau discmissed the charge in the Commons on Thursday after he and Diefenbaker traded boasts over which of the two had invited the Queen to Canada most often.

Trudeau said he could count seven times his government had invited the Queen for a visit.

Diefenbaker said she had come for a "five-or six-week" stay when he was prime minister between 1958 and 1963.

Diefenbaker then asked whether Trudeau had written the Ontario premier to say that a lengthy royal visit this year would not be in the interests of the country.

Davis is reported to have asked whether a proposed four-day visit by the Queen this October could be extended.

Trudeau replied sharply that was "an untruth of the grossest sort such as sometimes one expects on this subject from the right honorable gntlemen" — Diefenbaker.

The prime minister said the Queen has come to Canada "more regularly when this government has been in power than any other time."

He said Diefenbaker should not be concerned about the Queen exposing herself inadequately to Canadians.

Only last year she visited Ontario.

The Queen currently is on a four-week visit to New Zealand following a five-week trip to Australia. She is visiting Commonwealth countries in conjunction with the 25th anniversary of her reign.

Mainland 'Has Worst Transit'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Lower Mainland of British Columbia is the worst-served urban area of Canada for transportation and the federal government has reneged on promises to help solve it, says Stuart Legatt (NDP-New Westminster).

In Commons debate Thursday on a government transportation bill, Legatt said he can sympathize with the plight of Toronto or Montreal, but the Vancouver area is much worse off.

He referred to complaints by Toronto-area government MPs that the Liberal government has gone back on a 1974 election promise to help the cities with a $190 million urban-transit program.

However, he added, "the worst urban transit area in Canada is in the Lower Mainland of B.C."

"Anyone who has had to go bumper-to-bumper for an hour or two in the morning in the Fraser Valley can testify to the problems . . ."

He said the government also promised in 1974 that "there would be an urban-transit corridor down the Fraser Valley providing easy rail commuter access to Vancouver."

"That is another promise that has not been fulfilled . . .

"Certainly one of the things we could be doing is to put a rapid transit system right down the middle of Route 401 so that everyone sitting in cars would recognize the advantage of urban transit," Legatt said.

INDECISION RAPPED

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau rebuked the Quebec government Thursday for its indecision over constitutional matters.

The prime minister had written Quebec Premier Rene Levesque last January asking him if he favored an immediate patriation of the constitution or if he preferred first to discuss division of federal-provincial powers.

No answer has yet been received from Quebec, Trudeau told the commons in answer to Roch LaSalle (PC-Joliette). "Quebec should decide where it's headed," Trudeau said.

'Judgments' Raked In $3B Que. Claim

By DAN POTTIER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Donald MacDonald says reports that Quebec made a $3 billion profit out of Confederation last year involve some judgment calls.

He told the Commons Thursday some of the figures used were public knowledge in the field of taxation and so on, but others dealt with "arbitrary areas" where it was very hard to make calculations.

Some of the calculations were based on "judgments" as to how certain elements such as value of payroll and national debt should be divided among the provinces.

MacDonald was replying to Frank Philbrook (L—Halton) who asked if the figure was accurate and where statistics came from.

He asked if the figures used in the undisclosed "private report" were available for the other provinces.

Noting the great difficulty in making such calculations, Mr. MacDonald said "it would probably not be helpful to attempt to do that for all the provinces."

"Personally," he added "I look upon Canada as being something more than a good balance sheet from one province to another." This issue of a balance sheet of Confederation has cropped up over the years, particulary since the Nov. 15 election of the Parti Quebecois. There has never been a clear answer.

He was told that such information was not available at Quebec or for any province at this time.

Lawrence wanted to know the total federal government revenues from Quebec in 1973, 1974 and 1975 along with total federal expenditures in that province in the same period.

No Spying, Levesque Pledges

QUEBEC (CP) — Routine operations of the mysterious centre for documentation and analysis are continuing but Premier Rene Levesque said Thursday nothing resembling expionage on individuals is involved.

Levesque said the nine remaining employees of the centre—known as CAD—clip newspapers and monitor televison broadcasts.

"I tnink people dramatize it too much. As it's now functioning, if it represents a danger for any democratic individual, I should be hanged high and dry tomorrow morning."

The centre was established after the 1970 October Crisis by former premier Robert Bourassa and, according to Mr. Levesque, amassed files on 30,000 individuals and 6,000 to 7,000 groups in the province.

The premier announced in December that a committee of three cabinet ministers would study the future of the centre.

At the time, he said the information had "a lot of elements of a police report," although official police information was not used.

Asked about the future of the 30,000 personal files, he said: "If it should be destroyed, it will be destroyed."

Pay Link Rejected

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has proposed tying increases in teacher salaries to pay raises for a "comparable occupational group," a Canadian Teachers' Federation official said Thursday.

Michael Heron, federation president, said the idea was advanced during a meeting with Finance Minister Donald Macdonald and three other federal cabinet ministers Thursday afternoon.

The government members were not clear about what a comparable occupational group for teachers would be, Heron said, and in fact asked the teachers to name one.

However, Heron said the teachers' group did not answer, and in fact will strongly resist any effort to tie its members' pay raises to other groups.

Go-It Alone Vow From Quebecer

QUEBEC (CP) —Quebec would be able to go it alone if the rest of Canada rejected the Parti Quebecois plan for political sovereignty with economic association, Quebec's minister for economic development said Thursday.

Speaking to an audience of about 125 public relations officers representing major corporations Bernard Landry said outright independence would pose technical problems which would not be insurmountable.

But in an interview the minister said he doubted that Canada would reject the new form of partnership the PQ government was offering.

He said that a partnership was in the mutual interest of both parties.

However, Quebec has the human and natural resources to become an independent nation, he said.

If on the other hand other Canadian provinces decided that the sovereignty-association formula was a good idea and sought the powers Quebec is seeking, that would not be such a bad thing, he said.

Landry said he could envisage a Canada resembling Scandinavia, that is composed of co-operating sovereign states.

Budget In April: Macdonald Aide

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald will bring down a new federal budget before the end of April in an effort to stimulate a sagging national economy, his parliamentary secretary said Thursday.

Robert Kaplan told the Canadian Fertilizer Institute tthe budget is coming before the end of April, then confirmed the timing in a telephone interview. April was mentioned as the target month in documents in Macdonald's office, he added.

Macdonald has told questioners in the Commons only that he would bring down a budget "somethime before June."

However, repeated opposition demands for quick action to ease unemployment, a steady procession of business lobby groups demanding incentives for investment and statistics that show the economy declining in late 1976 may have prompted an earlier budget date.

There are many signs that point to an early budget, likely one that contains some tax cuts and some incentives for business.

In recent weeks, the Canadian Labor Congress, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association (CMA) and the Canadian Chamber of Commerce have met Macdonald to propose measures that they want in the budget.

Generally, these pressure groups have asked for more job-creating measures to ease the 7.5 per-per-cent national jobless rate, some personal income tax cuts and some tax breaks for companies that put in new production machinery.

CMA members who met Thursday with the Progressive conservative and the Liberal caucuses said later they found the government members more inclined to listen now to business' concerns about the economy.

Figures released Monday thats how production of goods and services in the economy declined at a 2.4-per-cent annual rate in the final three months of 1976 add urgency to the businessmen's complaints.

Statistics Canada said in its final-quarter report on gross national product that the business investment outlook for 1977 is weak.

It was the first quarter of declining production for the national economy since the 1974-75 recession.

Several prominent economists have called recently for an early package of stimulative measures to revive growth.

George Post, vice-chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, said recently a first priority must be "to stimulate demand to ensure a fuller use of existing production capacities."

Quash Search Warrants, Papers Ask

VANCOUVER (CP) — An application to quash and set aside a search warrant under which Combines Branch investigators searched newsrooms at The Province and the Vancouver Sun will be filed in B.C. Supreme Court today.

The action, taken by Pacific Press Ltd., names the attorney-general of B.C., investigators Simon Wapniarski and Clare savage, and B. Harrison, the justice of the peace who signed the warrant.

A notice of hearing to be filed today sets the date of March 30 for a hearing in supreme court chambers.

TRAFFIC DEATHS DROP 3%

OTTAWA (CP) — Deaths in traffic crashes dropped three per cent in 1975, compared with 1974, the Traffic Injury Research Foundation of Canada reports. Alcohol continued to play a significant role in all traffic deaths, especially among snowmobilers.

The study release Thursday said drivers accounted for about half of all traffic accidents vistims, with passengers and pedestrians accounting for 29 per cent and 20 per cent respectively.

The study said the 2,839 car drivers who died in 1975 accounted for 67 per cent of all driver deaths. Nearly half of the car drivers had been drinking and least 39 per cent were impaired.

Truck drivers accounted for 12 per cent of driver deaths and motorcycle operators comprised eight per cent.

The study recommended:

—That further research should be conducted into alcohol abuse at work, especially among professinal drivers such as truck or tractor trailer drivers;

—That further research should be done on motorcycle drivers to make sure existing blood-alcohol limits are realistic for them:

—And that public information and education programs be started for snowmobilers on the perils of drinking.

Most experimental research, the basis for current impaired-driver legislation, was conducted on car operators, although such vehicles may require significantly different levels and types of skills for their safe operation than do motorcycles, the study said.

"Of all motor vehicle operators, fatally injured snowmobile operators were the most impaired. During 1974 and 1975 at least 58 per cent had been drinking and 47 per cent were impaired."

Go Home on 35 Cents Edmonton Boys Told

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two 16-year-olds were recently convicted of armed robbery in Vancouver, given 35 cents in city bus fare and told to go home to Edmonton, deputy attorney-general David Vickers was told Thursday.

The incident was related by Tony Mears, chairman of city council's communty services committee. As an example of steadily deteriorating conditions in the city's family court system.

The two boys had gone on a crime spree in the city after arriving from Edmonton, were caught and brought into court, Mears said.

But deputy sheriffs and probation officers couldn't agree on who was responsible for getting them back to Edmonton.

"It's incredible," said Mears. "There has to be some co-ordination."

Vickers agreed and said the circumstances would be investigated.

Vickers also agreed with committee members who complained about physical conditions in the Vancouver family and juvenile court facilities.

Social worker Laurie Wilson described the court as "like a zoo" with families lining up in court corridors without knowing when their cases would be heard.

Committee member Patrick Graham told Vickers the two holding cells for juveniles were filthy with holes in the ceiling and frequently clogged toilets.

Vickers acknowledged that conditions in the building were deplorable.

He said the only assurance he could give is that the city is high on his department's priority lists for new buildings and better services.

$600,000 DRUNK BILL

VANCOUVER (CP) — It costs the city of Vancouver about $600,000 a year to service the intoxicated in its jail, the Vancouver police board was told Thursday.

Dr. Hugh Parfitt, member of the police board, said in Alberta the government reimburses the municipalities for the cost of each intoxicated person held in the cells overnight.

He recommended the board ask support from the provincial government for intoxicated jail prisoners.

Chief Don Winterton said he would arrange a meeting with Attorney-General Garde Gardom and Mayor Jack Volrich, police commissioner, to discuss the question.

The board heard a report from city coroner Glen McDonald on the inquest into the death on Jan. 19 of George Seggie.

The report stated Seggie was picked up by two constables at 6 p.m. Jan. 19 in an apparent state of intoxication. He died at Vancouver General Hospital that night at 7:50 of an advanced state of pheumonia. The pathologist's report revealed no alcohol or blood in his urine.

To be called Pop 77, the show will involve about 400 skaters from the Esquimalt, Oak Bay and Victoria Skating Clubs as well as the Racquet Club of Victoria.

The first section of the two-hour performance, called Under the Big Top, will include a ringmaster, clowns, performing poodles, elephants, ponies and trainers, candy men, a circus and a grand finale.

Happy Days, the second half, includes such numbers as Festival Fun, Gospel Rock, Mexican Fiesta, The Swinging 50's and Love Will Keep Us together.

Tickets can be bought at the Memorial Arena box office or from members of the four clubs. Adult tickets are $2.50. The charge for children 16 years and under, as well as old age pensioners, is $1.

Diabetic Drive Goal $1 Million

The Victoria and District Branch of the Canadian Diabetic Association is undertaking a drive from now until April 30 as part of a nation-wide campaign to raise $1 million for research and educations.

Larry Dale, president of the local branch, estimates there are 2,200 diabetics in Victoria and more than 460,000 in Canada.

Dale says the number suffering from the disease is expected to double every 15 years unless greater progress is made in research despite the use of insulin to prolong lives.

The disease is ranked Canada's third biggest killer after heart disease and cancer.

March has been designated National Diabetes month.

"This disease today may be close to a turning point," Peter Campbell of Sydney, N.S., president of the Canadian Diabetic Association, said at the drive-launching press conference." Despite a current growth rate of six per cent a year in Canada, research may be a very few years away from an artificial pancreas or from the transplanting of cells to replace those damaged in the pancreas."

Honorary campaign chairman and honorary national president is Dr. Charles H. Best of Toronto, who with Sir Frederick Banting discovered insulin.

ENERGY CONSERVATION:

"We're making progress, but we still have a long way to go."

Our energy future isn't all gloom and doom. In the past two years, Canadians have recognized the seriousness of the problem and responded by voluntarily reducing their consumption. They've proved that modest adjustments to our way of life can bring startling returns.

A progress report to the Canadian people:

"I'm encouraged by our success to date. The Government's program has stimulated so much action by citizens, industries and other governments, that we're beginning to turn this problem around. We're making progress, but we still have a long way to go."

Hon. Alastair Gillespie
Minister
Energy, Mines and Resources

THE energy conservation program was officially launched in early 1975 with the goal of bringing about a 20% cutback to projected consumption by 1985. The approach was direct: tell the Canadian people why we must conserve, show them how to do it, and spell out the rewards both in dollars and energy saved.

Advertisements have explained all these points. Four special books have been published: 100 Ways to Save Energy and Money in the Home, Bill-payer's Guide to Furnace Servicing, The Garbage Book and Keeping The Heat In. Other items: a 30-page newsmagazine to Canadian students, teaching aids, films, travelling vans, conferences with leaders in industry and an introductory guide to conservation for business.

Small pebbles in the pond, perhaps, but the ripples have spread from Newfoundland to British Columbia. Other governments and community groups have joined in. The media have added their voice. Neighbours have talked to neighbours.

In short, conservation is catching on.

FINAL FIGURES for 1975 show that Canada consumed .27% less energy than in 1974. The results are even more impressive when you remember that the average annual growth over the past 15 years has been 5.4%. So consumption in 1975 represents a decline of about 5.7% from expected levels. The retail value of that saving: about $1 billion.

Conservation can't take credit for all the saving, of course, but it played a big part.

ENERGY TYPE	GROWTH RATE (1975 OVER 1974)
Oil	−1.3%
Natural Gas	+0.8%
Coal	+2.8%
Electricity	−0.15%
Weighted Average	−.27%

And the first half of 1976 looks promising, too.

These savings are continuing for oil and gas, although there has been an increase in the demand for electricity.

We've changed our thinking.

THE WISDOM of just a few years ago said that energy growth was directly linked to economic growth. So we were gung-ho about energy expansion. But not any more.

Bill Rockwell of Bridgewater, Nova Scotia, wrote in to say, "After insulating, I knocked $200 off the fuel bill. It's completely impractical not to insulate."

Thirteen-year-old Brent Jantzi of Kitchener, Ontario, read the 100 Ways book and sent in his own suggestions to help Canada conserve energy. He did it because "I just wanted to be helpful to my country."

Many Canadians feel the same way. Their new outlook shows itself in letters to newspaper editors and to the Office of Energy Conservation, and in responses to a public opinion survey.

Here are three highlights from the survey:

1. More than 61% of the people interviewed believe energy is an urgent problem.
2. 92% feel that individual effort is important in conserving energy.
3. Almost every person interviewed claimed to be making some personal effort to save energy — turning off lights, lowering the thermostat, buying a smaller car, using less hot water, insulating the attic....

It all adds up.

AN ENERGY PROBLEM can be tackled by expanding supply or cutting back on demand. The first route is expensive. For example, a nuclear plant costs about $1 billion, while an exploratory oil or gas well in the Arctic can run into millions.

Conservation is obviously a far cheaper and speedier approach. That's why both governments and industries are taking steps to encourage the conservation effort:

■ The federal tax on insulation products, storm doors, weather-stripping and such has been eliminated to encourage homeowners to cut heat waste. Some provinces have dropped the sales tax on these products.

■ The Federal Government is introducing rigid efficiency standards for automobiles, buildings and appliances. These measures, announced in February, 1976, include mileage standards for new cars, mileage listings for all new cars, new building codes and appliance efficiency standards.

■ Highway speed limits have dropped. The Government set a 55 mph limit for its own vehicles and encouraged the provinces to lower their speed limits. Five provinces have done so, with an estimated saving of 160 million gallons of gasoline a year.

■ The Federal Government has introduced the "Save 10" program to help all Government departments cut their energy consumption by 10%. The goal is to use less Government energy in 1985 than in 1975. The energy saving this year alone could amount to $25 million.

■ A joint federal-provincial project — Enersave — is being tested in Prince Edward Island this winter. Enersave is a computerized analysis of the heating and insulation characteristics of a house, with recommendations for corrective steps that should be taken to cut heat waste.

■ The Federal Government has begun subsidizing the cost of insulating houses in Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia as part of a $75 million energy conservation program in these two provinces which rely heavily on imported oil for electricity generation. Under the plan, the Government will pay a maximum of $350 in direct grants to householders for insulation materials they install themselves, and a maximum of $500 for work performed by contractors.

■ In industry, many companies have adopted conservation as a direct cost-cutting step. And it's paying off. The employees of Bell Canada, for example, saved the company more than a million dollars last year through an energy conservation program. In Ontario alone, they saved enough energy to heat 2,000 homes for a year.

Ten major sectors of industry have predicted that with good housekeeping and new technology, energy savings of up to 20% are realistic goals over the next 3 years.

Conservation is moving us ahead quickly.

THAT'S THE BEAUTY of conservation: no huge capital investment, no agonizing delays. The rewards are immediate for both the saver and the country.

We're on the right track. But as one woman wrote, "A used-car lot near me has display lights burning day and night. It's hard to conserve when those around don't do the same." We need everybody to pitch in.

We need to encourage more smaller cars on the road, to upgrade insulation in both old and new homes, to develop and expand the conservation programs in industry.

The Government's role includes introducing energy efficiency labelling for major appliances, research and development programs to explore such renewable energy resources as solar, wind and biomass; the use of waste heat; new approaches to heating, ventilating and air conditioning; economies in transportation.

In time, new technology will help us all to make more efficient use of our energy. But right now, we know one approach does work: conservation.

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

As to whether South should have bid four hearts rather than three notrump does not concern us, since he did elect to bid three notrump. After winning the opening lead with the spade king, had he led the queen of diamonds and finessed, he would have had nine tricks. And even if the finesse had lost, the defenders could not have made more than three club tricks (with East leading clubs) in addition to the (hypothetical) king of diamonds. But in the actual play, South led a low diamond to dummy's ace at trick two, after which he returned a diamond, putting up the queen, which West took with the king. West now reflected.

Based on the bidding and play to date, West concluded that the club suit had to be attacked immediately. And he did just that, but in a manner only an expert would have thought of: he led the club nine. This was covered by dummy's ten, and taken by East's jack. East then returned the four of clubs to West's ace, after which West led his remaining club, the three. Dummy's doubleton Q-6 was now entrapped by East's K-7. When play had ended, the defenders had taken four club tricks, plus the diamond king.

Had West cashed the club ace on the initial club lead (at trick four), all the defenders would have taken would have been three club tricks. Or if, instead, he had led the three of clubs on the first club lead, declarer, by playing the ten from dummy, would have forced East to win the trick with the jack. A club would then be returned to West's ace, and West would next play his remaining club, the nine.

Dummy, with the Q-6 remaining (East possessing the K-7), would follow with the six-spot — and the club suit would be "blocked," with the nine winning the trick. And East would never make his club king.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, March 5

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Full Moon position, aspects point to concerns with employment, communication, general ability to bring together those whose views oppose each other. You could be called upon to be a mediator. Genuine bergain in luxury-art area is available.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Haze of wishful thinking, romantic notions could dominate. Key now is to perfect techniques, to define terms, to refine procedures. Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently. A wish can be fulfilled with aid of partner or mate. If single, the "right person" may come into your life.

GEMINI (May 12-June 20): Full Moon position highlights practical matters, including legal rights, permissions, obstacles. Joint efforts need review. Display sense of responsibility. Get on solid footing; utilize lessons learned in recent past. Cancer, Capricorn persons figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Finish rather than initiate projects. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Ask questions; reject superficial answers. Relative in transit "gets in touch." Aries, Libra and Virgo figure in scenario. Long range effects, actions, reactions dominate — look beyond the immediate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Lunar position emphasizes feeling of possession, of security, of payments, collections. Means you understand meaning of money and how it gets that way. Major concern could be relationship that is getting involved, intriguing and perplexing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Full Moon, in your sign, emphasizes personality, appearance, fulfillment of ambition. Unfavorable Neptune aspect points to possible miscalculation where property value, tax matters, basic security are concerned. Follow through on hunch. You are on target where intuition is concerned.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lunar position, aspects indicate emphasis on desire, fulfillment, intensified relationship with member of opposite sex. You can fight your way out of corner. Roadblock is challenge and you will overcome it. Aquarius, Taurus and another Scorpio could be part of scenario.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on achievement, recognition, better rapport with professional superior. Taurus, Libra figure prominently. One who appeared dependable could confide doubts, confess infidelities. Don't cast first stone!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Steer clear of direct confrontations. Take ring roads — be diplomatic. Make intelligent concessions, especially where Taurus, Libra individuals are concerned. Full Moon now accents long journey, education, language, ability to bridge generation gap.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): See through attempted sham; be open-minded, not gullible. Individual who makes "interesting" claims could be victim of delusion. Know it and act, respond accordingly. Don't lend money! If you do, you can count on losing a friend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Let sleeping dogs lie — don't look for trouble. Be alert to subtle signals, nuances. Emphasis on legal forms, documents, hidden clauses. One who seemed indifferent lends support. You will be provided legitimate opportunity to prove a major contention.

IF MARCH 5th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are analytical, sensitive, creative, attractive to opposite sex. You can also be moody, impressionable and have tendency to see as you wish events could be instead of how they exist. You are prescient, have ability to express yourself in artistic manner, with words or on canvas. Gemini, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. This month, March, will be one of your most significant months of 1977, a year during which you make changes, travel and, if single, marry.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Some crazy kook broke into the pet shop and opened some of the cages," said Charlie. "They had just 300 birds there, and a lot escaped."

"Too bad, they'll mostly die out on their own," Joe replied. "They say a third of what remained were finches, a quarter budgies, a fifth canaries, a seventh mynah birds, and a ninth were parrots. And the original number of canaries was three times the number of parrots that remained."

OIL DRILLERS HURT BY EARLY BREAKUP

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's unusually mild weather is threatening to cut short what should be a near-record exploration season for the oil and gas industry, a spokesman for the Canadian Association of Oilwell Contractors said Thursday.

Twenty-six wells were drilled in January, 30 in February and there now are 36 rigs active in the province's oil and gas fields.

But continued mild weather could bring drilling activity to a halt because once the muskeg in drilling areas thaws, it is impossible to move heavy drill rigs, let alone drill.

The oilwell contractors have approached the provincial ministry of mines and petroleum resources to conduct a joint study of the length of the drilling season in B.C.

Potential well completions total 92 to date, more than half the 175 drilled in 1976.

Lack of access roads has been a barrier to more extensive drilling. Few drilling companies have availed themselves of government assistance for access road construction.

In Calgary, G.D. Ross, newly-elected president of the contractors association, said Thursday the oil and gas industry in Alberta could lose $10 million if warm weather continues there.

He said the industry is praying for cold.

"The provincial government's rural road bans are already in effect in some parts of the province," Ross said. "the are a full month earlier this year than in past years."

He said an early breakup would affect nearly 500 wells that would either not be finished or not started.

Back-to-School Movement Swelling

The demand for adult education is growing so rapidly grown-ups will soon outnumber young people in the public school system, says a department of education study.

The report recommends the provincial government greatly increase the priority accorded to adult education.

The report calls for creation of an "open college" which would use radio and television to provide educational opportunities for adults unable to attend classes.

The open college concept was pioneered in England several years ago and offers full degree as well as non-credit courses.

The report also calls for more government money for adult education and says a senior official should be appointed to be solely in charge of adult education.

Adult education courses now serve about 340,000 adults and the demand is increasing. There are about 500,000 students in the public school system.

Other recommendations in the report call for:

Formation of district adult education councils to assess needs and co ordinate programs.

- every citizen be allowed to upgrade to Grade 12 tuition-free.
- other government agencies such as health, human resources and the provincial secretary recognize and support community schools.

Rhodesia's Mercenaries 'Immigrants'

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — About 1,200 foreigners have joined the Rhodesian army in its war against black nationalist guerrillas.

The men, from Canada, the U.S., Britain, Australia, Portugal, South Africa and several European countries, are largely leftovers from conflicts eslewhere in Africa, Vietnam and Northern Ireland.

Most are in their 20s or early 30s. Some could not find jobs when they returned home from other wars. Most gravitated to Rhodesia as one of the few places today where a man can escape the boredom of civilian living by putting his life on the line.

The Rhodesian government is reluctant to talk about the foreigners in its 6,000-man army and is annoyed by any reference to them as mercenaries. Technically, the men are immigrants who happened to join the armed forces of Ian Smith's white minority regime to fight in the four-year-old guerrilla war. The ususual hitch is three years.

Most recruits learn of Rhodesian army opportunities by world of mouth spread among buddies from old wars. The government, however, does some advertising in hunting and gun magazines.

The Rhodiesian government says it does not make promises to prospective recruits, but some of them have been disillusioned by getting lower ranks than they expected.

A regular infantryman, known as a trooper, is paid about $600 a month. A captain earns between $750 and $900. New arrivals, most of whom reach Salisbury through South Africa, fillout forms noting their military background, then are sent for training, during which they are evaluated and given a rank.

The chances of a government infantryman being killed in Rhodesia appear, so far, to be slight. In four years of conflict, the Salisbury government says about 235 Rhodeian military men have been killed in action while mbre than 2,400 guerrilla or guerrilla suspects have been killed. Only a handful of the dead were foreigners.

The Rhodesian army generally operates in small groups, sets frequent ambushes, hits hard and moves fast. They rarely use artillery, and an airstrike from one of the aging British-built Vampire or Hunter jets is a luxury.

Most of the regular Rhodesian army is composed of black volunteers led by white Rhodesian or foreign officers. Observers familiar with other wars say it is a first-rate counterinsurgent force. Smith says it could keep the insurgents at bay for 10 years or more.

'Grass' Sale Cut

ALBANY, N.Y. — Those who responded to a newspaper advertisement for a quarter-ounce of "grass" got exactly that — though it probably wasn't what the buyers expected.

State Attorney-General Louis Lefkowitz said Thursday the ads in the Village Voice noted "marijuana cannot be sold through the mail, but 'grass can." The ads offered "homegrown grass" for $5 a quarter-ounce.

Instead of the illegal weed, the attorney-general said, buyers received a pouch containing green lawn grass.

Carole Corbo, 24, of Port Washington, N.Y., who set up the "grass" business, has agreed to refund buyers' money and pay the state $100 in costs, Lefkowitz said.

Crosby Takes Stage Tumble

PASADENA, Calif. — Entertainer Bing Crosby was taken to hospital Thursday night when he stumbled and fell from a statge after taping a television show.

CBS spokesman Hal Baird said the 72-year-old singer grabbed for a piece of scenery as he tripped but tumbled at least six feet into an orchestra pit.

Baird said doctors in the audience said Crosby suffered a minor head cut and several bruises but broke no bones.

Paramedics took Crosby to Huntington Memorial Hospital for a check-up, a spokesman said. The singer was conscious "and in good spirits," he said.

The tumble ended a three-hour benefit performance at Ambassador College's auditorium during which the CBS television special, honoring Crosby's 50th year in show business, was taped.

Jensen . . . pulling out the prickles

A Thorny Problem

HOVEN, Denmark — A 63-year-old pensioner known as the "human hedgehog" may be nearing the end of a six-year saga of pain during which doctors have removed 32,131 barberry thorns from his body.

His wife says that doesn't include countless inch-long barbs she and her husband have pulled out themselves, and there are many more still to be pulled out.

It began April 20, 1971, when Tjens Kjaer Jensen fell into a heap of thorny branches from a barberry hedge that he had been trimming around his home in this west Jutland village.

He tried to get up but kept falling back on to the needle-sharp thorns until he fainted from the pain.

Later this month Jensen will make his 248th visit to the hospital at Tarm for removal of thorns.

"That brought the count to 32,131 thorns removed since Jensen was first hospitalized here in 1971," said chief surgeon Erik Galatius-Jensen.

He and his colleagues were at a loss to explain how one man could get so many thorns into his body and how after six years they could still keep emerging.

"Only this morning my husband was again troubled by thorns working their way out through the skin of his legs," his wife, Marie, said Thursday.

"But it is nothing now compared with the hell we have been going through for years.

"Between operations he lived in terrible pain, but now he is able to walk and we hope that the scheduled hospital trip later this month may be the last."

Smallwood Put On the Griddle

HALIFAX (CP) — Joey Smallwood got roasted Thursday night but just to a light brown, despite some moments of intense heat from an old adversary who labelled him "the world's greatest one-way conversationalist."

Smallwood, former Liberal premier of Newfoundland, was seated on the roasting table beside John Crosbie, once a Smallwood minister who became a Conservative and his leading political foe. Crosbie now is a UC Member of Parliament.

The two exchanged few words until the master of ceremonies introduced Crosbie as the man "who has crossed the floor so many times his campaign manager is a travel agent."

Those present to roast Smallwood included Bryce Mackasey, former federal Liberal cabinet minister and now member of the Quebec legislature; Gordon Pinsent, Newfoundland-born actor and author, Smallwood biographer Richard Gwynn, J. S. Pickersgill, longtime Newfoundland representative in the federal cabinet, and Canon George Earle of Memorial University in St. John's.

Export Tax Removed by B.C. To Boost Sale of Wood Chips

The provincial government Thursday removed the $1.50 export tax on wood chips, a levy which had generated about $600,000 a year in revenues.

The removal of the tax was one of the recommendations of the Royal Commission report on Forest Resources headed by Dr. Peter Pearse.

Forests Minister Tom Waterland said the move is designed to clear up the large surplus of chips.

He said the loss in revenue will be more than compensated for by the increase in other taxes which would be expected to increase as the surplus of chips is cleared.

There is now a surplus of about one million units of wood chips, the majority in the interior, more than twice the annual export level which is about 400,000 units.

Waterland said the chips are rotting in storage and that other material which should be removed from the forest floor is being left there because of the chip surplus.

Waterland said the export tax is a "flag to major buyers" that the province does not want to sell its chips.

Both Waterland and Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said they hope the removal of the tax will have psychological effect in telling buyers that B.C. is willing to do business.

Phillips said the export of chips is "exporting waste and importing capital."

It's not unusual, he said, for a foreign pulp mill to buy B.C. chips and then at a later date to decide to establish a mill in the province.

Waterland said he will hire a project co-ordinator in an attempt to promote the export of chips.

"There is a tremendous surplus rotting and we do not have the current processing capacity in B.C.," he said, but warned it's only a short-term remedy.

He said the government has done virtually nothing in the area of increasing the province's pulp capacity.

He suggested it remove the seven per cent sales tax from all new productive investment in the next two years and follow Quebec's example of joining private industry to build a new mill.

Gibson said Quebec is the only province in Canada where a new mill is being built.

DISASTER FUNDS 'MEANINGLESS'

A million dollars won't help much if B.C. has to clean up a major oil spill, Conservative leader Scott Wallace told the legislature Thursday night.

During debate on budget estimates for the environment ministry, Wallace said budget figures for "provincial major disaster grants" are meaningless.

Under that category of the environment ministry budget, the amount has been reduced to $500,000 for 1977-78 from $1.5 million for the current fiscal year which ends March 31.

The proposed budget for major disasters is "the most ridiculous and incongruous item in the entire budget," Wallace said.

The government would need between $10 million and $20 million to deal with a major oil spill, Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said. That amount of money would have to be provided by special warrant or special consideration of the legislature.

Cyril Shelford (SC — Skeena) said he wondered why opposition members were so concerned about oil spills when there were hundreds of tankers sunk during the Second World War yet no significant marine life was killed as a result.

Wallace said the size of oil tankers had more than doubled since the Second World War and will probably increase in size in the future.

ICBC Competition Welcome

The Insurance Corp. of B.C. welcomes competition and can handle it nicely, Education Minister Pat McGeer, in charge of ICBC, said Thursday.

NDP MLA Dennis Cocke (New Westminster) asked McGeer during question period in the legislature if he'll do anything to restrict private firms like Royal Insurance from taking only the insurance "cream."

Cocke said Royal accepts only drivers over 30 who prove five years of accident-free driving.

"That's impossible competition for ICBC to deal with," he said.

But McGeer said the corporation welcomed the competition and that ICBC can "stand on its own two feet."

Oil, Gas Bids Boost Revenues By $9.2 Million

The provincial government has added $9.2 million to its revenues as the result of competitive bids for oil and gas rights, Mines and Petroleum Resources Minister Jim Chabot said Thursday.

Chabot said in a news release the funds were added to current revenue when bids on 54 parcels of oil and gas rights were accepted.

BLACKLIST APOLOGY

Environment ministry employee Klaus Ohlemann, autor of the so-called blacklist, Thursday issued a formal apology to one of his co-workers named on the list.

Ohlemann said in the apology released by his lawyers that "I entirely withdraw my remarks and apologize" to ski development co-ordinator Al Raine, named in Ohlemann's list as an NDP supporter and a campaign worker for former resources minister Bob Williams.

Ohlemann, in a letter to inter-governmental affairs director Dan Campbell shortly after the Socreds took office in late 1975, named several of his co-workers in the environment ministry as NDPers.

The letter was passed along by Campbell to Environment Minister Jim Nielsen.

THE GREAT PENSION DEBATE

Who's really being ripped off?

Fact

In 1974, 3,400,000 Canadian workers were covered by 15,853 pension plans.

Fact

The private pension plan system covers less than 40% of the labour force (79.4% in plans with invested assets and 20.6% in plans like the Public Service Superannuation Plan).

Fact

The expense of pension plans in the private sector is borne by the public. The cost of employer contributions to private pensions is calculated as part of the operating costs of the enterprise, and is passed along to the consumer in the price of the goods or services produced. Where the private pension fund runs into difficulties and additional funds are needed, the company says its operating costs have increased and raises its prices. If less than 40% of the labour force is covered by pensions and the cost of the employers' contribution is paid by all consumers and taxpayers through more price increases, it means that the 60% of workers without pensions are subsidizing the less than 40% who have pensions.

Does it provide inflation proofing? Can it have wider coverage? Should it have earlier locked-in vesting? Does it have discriminatory features with respect to sex? Benefits accruing in private plans should receive significant employer contributions earlier, be vested earlier in participants and locked in partially after 5 years and fully after 10 years. Eligibility rules should be liberalized. Women and young people should have improved access to plans and be able to participate on a basis of equality. There should be full indexing to protect pensioners from the ravages of inflation.

How much are you paying?

In 1974, trusteed pension funds represented the most significant group of funds both in terms of annual cash flow and accumulated assets. There were 4,167 plans using the trust arrangements covering 2,170,000 persons (the Superannuation Plan and similar plans are not trusteed pension funds) and 11,242 plans funded with insurance companies covering 13.5% of members (462,000).

In 1974, of the $2,990,000,000 paid into pension funds, more than one half, amounting to $1,640,000,000, was paid into trusteed pension plans which channel funds directly into financial markets for speculation by other interests.

In 1975, trusteed pension funds in Canada continued to grow at an accelerated pace with the book value of assets reaching an all-time high of well over $21,000,000,000 in 1975, a dramatic increase from $18,000,000,000 in 1974.

Investment income earned from all private pension funds amounted to more than $1,300,000,000 in 1975, more than enough to cover all costs of current benefits, leaving the contributions from employers and employees for investment to increase asset holdings.

"Many firms use the buying power of their pension fund to strengthen their business connections. Most corporate funds are now set up so that better (investment) performance simply allows the company to reduce its own contribution. In other words, some companies regard the management of their pension fund as just another part of their business operations, with all benefits accruing to the company and none to the employee."

Is the National Citizen's Coalition a front for some insurance and trust companies that would like to increase their hold on pension funds? The National Citizen's Coalition has on its Board of Directors some of the richest and most powerful men in Canada. They say that they are representing the "little guy". They never represent the "little guy" in their own businesses, do you think they are spending thousands of dollars in advertising campaigns now to represent him?

Could the funds you pay into the pension be invested elsewhere earning better returns, giving you better benefits?

Absolutely! In 1974, the Ontario Public Service Employees Union successfully fought for tendering of the insurance plan covering its members. It was opened to tender and the company which had administered the plan was seventh on the list! Unless employees get involved in the administration of their own benefit plans, they may be paying more money than they need to. The OPSEU was able to obtain better insurance protection at lower premiums. So can you!

Because so FEW Canadian workers are contributing to private pension plans . . .

Because so FEW Canadian workers can be sure that their pension plan is being equitably managed . . .

Because insurance and trust companies have a vested interest in keeping pensions in the private sector and are only accountable to their own interests . . .

Isn't it time you demanded that the federal government take over all pensions in Canada so that Canadian workers can be free from financial worries when they retire?

YOU MUST DEMAND —

The right to the employer's contribution. It suits employers to accept minimum vesting conditions enforced by provincial and federal regulations. If compulsory vesting is not enforced then the employee should have the right to withdraw both contributions. Many plans however, are based on the assumption that there will be a turnover of workers prior to compulsory vesting which reduces the cost to the employer because the worker who leaves his job in such cases loses the employer's contributions.

The right to information. Because pension plans are really deferred wages, every worker should be entitled to information about the management of his pension fund. In Canada, the laws require no disclosure of plan operations to the general public and very little disclosure to plan members. The application for registration, the amendments and the periodic reports which must be filed with the Government are not open to the public or to plan members, expect in Quebec, where a member of a plan may examine the plan provisions at the office of the Quebec Pension Board.

The right to share in pension fund management. The safety of the fund, the amount of interest that is earned and the way interest is applied determine the level of retirement and other benefits and these decisions are almost always made by the employer alone. Because pension funds represent deferred wages, then demands for greater worker participation in pension fund management are logical. It's a simple case of demanding the right to manage your own money!

The right to service and protection as a citizen. The investment and management of all pension funds should be in the public sector. Pension and other insurance plans in the private sector benefit the private entrepreneurs much more than the pensioners. The payment of annual salaries of $100,000 to $200,000 (plus fringe benefits) to insurance and trust company executives, excessive profits and high administrative expenses only benefit the rich while many of the pensioners they are supposed to be taking care of, are barely surviving at or below the poverty level.

The right to portable pensions. Today a large number of different small pension plans exists. When a worker leaves his job, he is often forced to leave his pension behind. He may lose all or a part of it. If there was only one large industrial pension plan handled by the federal government, you could take your pension with you from job to job, guaranteeing you a full pension on retirement.

IT'S YOUR FUTURE! IT'S YOUR MONEY! FIND OUT WHAT'S GOING ON!

The preceding facts were taken from "Pension plans in Canada — Statistics 1974," and "Trusteed pension plans financial statistics — 1975," published by Statistics Canada; "Pensions for the future," by Martin O'Connell, M.P., presented to the 8th annual convention of the Canadian Pension Conference in Ottawa, May 1976; "How much choice? retirement policies for Canada," by the Canadian Council on Social Development, November 1975.

Dwarfs Do Better on Porches

Small gardens of the patio type seem to need summer flowering annuals of a dwarf type rather than the regular 18 to 24-inch heights so popular in larger gardens.

Fortunately hybridizers have been aware of this need, realizing too that dwarf annuals are of great value for all types of container growing.

Thus the gardener with a sundeck, balcony or a rooftop to be planted all benefit from the wide range of dwarf forms of summer annuals now listed.

Growing your own from seeds will require instant action, for not all these dwarf types are likely to be found in seed racks. But orders to seed growers will still arrive in time for early sowing if sent off before this weekend.

Annual asters have been a favorite with gardeners from eastern Canada but rarely do they give a good crop here. Now there is a dwarf form of the quilled type called Spider. A blend comes as a mixture of all aster colors at a height of 10 inches

The seed must be started in late March in a cool greenhouse or a sunporch to make plants for flowering by late summer.

Calendulas or Scotch marigolds (also called pot marigolds because of their old uses in cooking can now be grown even more easily as bushy 12-inch plants with no sacrifice of flower size. They are listed as being fully double, 2½-inch blooms in shades of primrose, orange and yellow.

Dwarf dahlias are not new for we have enjoyed them for years. A new strain appears this year however which seems even more dwarf, compact and early. Named Rigoletto, at 14 inches, 2½-inch blooms in the usual range of rose, yellow, bronze and scarlet, this seems a real find for planters.

A long flowering season from a March sowing indoors or cool greenhouse is assured from May to October if each faded bloom is promptly nipped off before seeding.

The showy scarlet salvia must be one of the dwarf strains if it is to bloom before September in our normal cool coastal summers. At 10 to 12 inches the chance of summer bloom is increased, though seeds need sowing in warmth during March and young plants grown in flats without even a hint of frost. Fireball Improved at 10 inches and St. John's Fire at 12 are two names to look for.

For full value of garden perfume the experienced gardener should raise the All Double 10-week Stock from seed. Sown indoors with a soil temperature of 18 deg. C., then grown at 10 deg. C after germination, the gardener can, with an eagle eye, detect the few singles appearing among the seedlings after the seed leaves are fully expanded. The singles have darker green leaves. These can either be discarded or grown separately to judge accuracy of your choice. Single stocks have perfume but little appearance compared with the sumptious spikes of doubles. Their fragrance is carried on air currents for 100 feet or more.

These and other dwarf strains of summer bedding plants bring more color to windy exposed gardens whether they are on balcony, rooftop or at sea level.

Agent Lack Puzzles AECL

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Top officials of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. said Thursday they are mystified by reports from Seoul that no agent was used in the sale of a Canadian reactor to South Korea.

The government-owned nuclear company, embroiled in a controversy over lack of adequate documents for payments to the agents, already has paid $15.4 million to United Development Inc. of Tel Aviv for helping to make the sale.

News that Sung Nack Chung, a vice-president of the Korean Electric Co. said "no agents were necessary, no agents were used" in the sale drew denials and some confusion in the AECL executive offices.

"It is astounding," AECL chairman Ross Champbell said. Although he had only been at the company for little more than a year, he had checked and found reports of many joint meetings among AECL, Korean Electric and United Development.

Campbell said he could not understand the comments from Chung. The only explanation he could offer is that the Korean executive recently had taken over the office and may not have known of the agency agreement.

John Foster, president of AECL since 1975, said he recalled in particular a meeting he attended in 1974, at the Korean Electric offices in Seoul when he was a vice-president. That meeting had included representatives of the agent.

Campbell also disputed statements by Chung that AECL faced no competition in making the sale to Korea.

He said the government company faced stiff competition for the sale from Westinghouse Electric and General Electric of the United States as well as Seimens of West Germany.

In the Commons, opposition MPs urged the government to stop payments to the agents until a judicial inquiry is held to determine whether fees actually were paid.

Argentina's National Investigations Committee, meanwhile, reported Thursday in Buenos Aires that it is "actively conducting" an investigation into an alleged $2.4-million payoff in the sale of a Canadian nuclear reactor to Argentina.

A committee statement said it is awaiting "important evidence" requested last December from the Argentine foreign ministry. Once a conclusion is reached, it will be made public, the committee said.

In a related development Thursday, Anthony Hampson, president of the Canada Development Corp (CDC), said he would have stopped rebates paid to customers by a subsidiary, Polysar Ltd., in 1973 if he had received any hint of impropriety.

But Hampson said he and the other directors of Polysar relied on reports from the chemical company's private auditors and lawyers that there was nothing wrong with the payments the company made through a Swiss subsidiary.

Prince Charles Goes on Safari

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles leaves today for a Kenyan safari and visits to Ghana and the Ivory Coast. He is scheduled to arrive in Nairobi on Sunday after stopovers at Naples, Cyprus and Khartoum. The 10-day private visit to Kenya will include a wildlife camera safari. He is scheduled to arrive at Accra, Ghana, on March 17 for an eight-day official visit to the west African country. He leaves for the Ivory Coast, Ghana's western neighbor, March 25 for a three-day official visit, the first ever made to the country by a member of the British royal family.

Communists Vow Support For Democracy

By JIM HOAGLAND

MADRID — The Communist parties of France, Italy and Spain joined Thursday in demanding a share in the political leadership of their countries and promised formally to seek and exercise power only in democratic ways.

A declaration issued by the leaders of the three most important Communist parties in Western Europe, and statements by them to reporters, constituted their clearest joint commitment yet to building a third model of communism that would be far more liberal than the Marxist systems of the Soviet Union and China.

For the first time in public, Italy's enrico Berlinguer, France's Georges Marchais and host Spanish leader Santiago Carrillo indicated that they agree on a definition of "Eurocommunism."

Berlinguer and Marchais met for six hours with Carrillo, in talks spread over two days, in an effort to strengthen the Spanish party's bid to win legal status and popular support here after being outlawed for 40 years.

Their failure to join Carrillo in condemning the Soviet Union and Eastern Euope on human rights and other issues may dim what was an otherwise public relations success for the Spanish party in staging the two-day summit.

Spain's supreme court will rule within the next two weeks on an application by the Communist party to be legalized in time for the first parliamentary elections since Generalissimo Francisco Franco's death in November 1975.

The government has refused to register the party, claiming that it is totalitarian and controlled from abroad, presumably by Moscow.

Opening a two-hour press conference that was the only public appearance of the three men, Carrillo beamed as he noted that "this meeting is being held under the protection of the Spanish authorities." This showed, he added, "how much has changed in Spain."

Small contingents of Spanish riot police were posted around the luxury hotel in Northern Madrid where the conference was held. The government has not moved to silence Carrillo since it arrested and then released him two months ago after he ended 38 years of exile by sneaking back into the country.

Spain's King Juan Carlos has responded to the conference with subtle but calculated efforts to undercut Carrillo. The king announced Thursday night that he would meet this weekend with Romanian President Nicolai Ceaucescu, one of the more independent Communist rulers. The government also arranged to order the expulsion of a Russian trade official for alleged espionage on Thursday.

The conference's importance also lay in a discernible movement by the once hardline, Stalinist French Communist party in aligning its positions with its more liberal Spanish and Italian counterparts.

SKI REPORT

Two of the three ski areas on Vancouver Island are scheduled to open Saturday and the other is set to begin operations next weekend.

Forbidden Plateau reports a temperature of 2 degrees today with overcast skies and 15 cm. of new snow atop a 45 cm. base. Skiers are advised to carry chains and the area will be operating from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on a daily basis.

Mt. Arrowsmith has overcast skies and a temperature of —1 with 40 cm. total snow at the lodge and 60 cm. at the top of the chair lift. The top two runs are in good condition and the rest are fair. Chains are mandatory and the area will be open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

MAN UNFIT FOR TRIAL

Roger McDonald, of 209-3800 Quadra, was ruled mentally unfit Thursday in Victoria provincial court and will be held in a mental institution, probably Essondale on the Lower Mainland, until he is certified fit to face the charge.

A no-publication order was granted in the fitness hearing and none of the proceedings during the short inquiry can be reported.

McDonald was charged with last Friday's shooting at the Quintro Manor Apartments, 3800 Quadra, in which 33-year-old Al Kaukanen, a resident in a first-floor apartment, was wounded in the abdomen by a .303 rifle shot.

Draft Evaders: Canada Is Home

Larry Martin, with daughter Ana, aided war resisters since 1969

By DOUGLAS KNEELAND
New York Times

VANCOUVER — The agent at the United States Customs office on the border at Blaine, Wash., 30 miles south of here, seemed perplexed.

"Where are all of them?" she asked a traveller returning from Canada. "We haven't seen many come through."

She did not have to explain who she was talking about. "All of them" to almost anyone on either side of the border in this area are the several thousand draft evaders and deserters — no one really has an accurate count — who are reported to have settled in the Vietnam War years among the million residents of Greater Vancouver.

On Jan. 21, President Carter issued a blanket pardon for nonviolent draft resisters, but not for deserters who are to be dealt with on a case-by-case basis

But there is little evidence that many of those who for years now have lived, worked, married and started families in this modern, mild-weathered, if frequently rainy and foggy, coastal city are in a hurry to pull up their roots and return to the United States.

Nor does the experience of the Vancouver area appear to be notable different from that of the rest of Canda. A public affairs officer at the U.S. Consulate in Toronto, which is said to have by far the largest concentration of exiles, said that reports from immigration officials at the airport there indicate "there's not a big flow."

"The visa people are getting some inquiries about procedures," he added, "but most of them are just interested in visiting."

"I don't know of anyone who knows he wants to go back, except me, and I can't," said Jack Colhoun, a deserter who is co-editor of Amex, a Toronto-based publication for exiles. "I'm not saying there might not be some in a couple of months after people have a chance to think about it or have gone home to visit and gotten some pressure from parents."

And in Chicago, officials of such groups as Veterans for Peace and the Clergy and Laity Concerned, who have worked closely with the draft evaders and deserters in seeking amnesty, have reported little sign that many are returning.

Spokesmen for exile groups here and elsewhere have said that many of the refugees in Canada learned two or three years ago that they had never been indicted and that no charges were pending against them and still did not go back to the United States. Many others are also known to have had their charges dismissed through court actions and to have remained in Canada.

A spokesman for the U.S. Consulate here said that only a handful of inquiries about the pardon had been received, all of them from people who said that they had become Canadian citizens but were interested in going back across the border to visit.

J. B. Bennett, officer in charge of the United States Immigration Service at Blaine, which handles 3,000 to 6,000 crossings a day at this time of year, said of returning exiles:

"We've had two, and they were both going through temporarily. I didn't expect many of them. We didn't get many the last time (when former president Gerald Ford declared a conditional amnesty from late 1974 to early 1975). It's been too long. Most of them are settled. Frankly, I think if we do get any they'll be misfits who didn't fit in up there."

But the exiles here have not been especially stirred by the pardon. At the same time, while 350 draft evaders, deserters and others met in Toronto last weekend to demand that Carter broaden his pardon to include all types of antiwar offenses, including desertion, and to plan a fast in Washington, most of the exiles here went quietly about their daily lives.

As near as could be determined from organizers of the Toronto conference and the few remaining activists here, only one delegate from Vancouver attended.

"Those people in Toronto talk of American unity up here," said Carl Hinke, a 26-year-old draft resister from Nutley, N.J., who has been a Canadian citizen since 1975, "but there is no American community up here."

Larry Martin, 30, of San Diego, who came here in 1969 and has been aiding and counseling war resisters ever since, agreed.

"That's why the same names come up that talk to the media," he said, "because most people aren't interested.

"Many people came up here to get away from the United States and what they represented. A majority of the people are leading cushy, comfortable existences, and they couldn't care less about amnesty."

Martin said that he tried for four years to obtain the status of a conscientious objector and then refused induction in 1968.

In trying to explain why there appears to be so little interest in returing permanently to the United States, almost everyone here describes how successfully the Americans have blended into the life of this city, which on the surface, at least, is little different from Seattle, for instance, a three-hour drive to the south.

Most have not had much trouble finding jobs and fitting in, and if there ever was an American "exile community," it seems to have been well dispersed since the influx of resisters and deserters stopped with the end of direct U.S. involvement in Veitnam in early 1973.

"We've really had to scramble to find them when we've had something like the pardon," said Moira Farrow, a local newspaperwoman, who added: "They seem to be independent types. They're not joiners, you know."

"An exile community never existed here except during the period of initial need," said the Rev. J. McRee Elrod, minister of the Unitarian Church in New Westminster who worked with the newcomers in the days when as many as 50 a day were arriving.

Saying that he was still in touch with many of the expatriates he met then, Elrod went on:

"I guess I see 10 in a day, or maybe 100 in a month, and I haven't heard of any who are going back. The ones I tend to know are teachers, doctors, lawyers, social workers. It would be too difficult to go back, since they're all credentialed here. And most of them are 30 now — you're not going to pick up and move at 30."

Pushing Business in Christ's Name

By JANIS JOHNSON
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Two fundamentalist-sponsored directories urging consumers to patronize the businesses of "born-again Christian" advertisers have been published in about 50 U.S. cities and have drawn strong opposition from Jewish and mainline Christian groups in many of these communities.

A principal aid of both the "Christian Yellow Pages" and the "Christian Business Directory," which have been produced by separate fundamentalist groups, is to keep money within the Christian "family," according to their promoters.

"This identifies Christians to other Christians," said Frank Ford, who is heading the Richmond, Va, "Christian Yellow Pages."

"From the Christian perspective, the value is that we are one (Christian) family . . . This will help unite the family of Christians . . . If I had the choice of giving money to a stranger or to my brother, I would give it to my brother. Otherwise, it could mean I care for strangers more than my own family," Ford said.

But mainline Christian and Jewish leaders in several cities have condemned the directories as economically discriminatory and anti-Semitic and based on a distortion of Biblical teachings. They have also charged that it is anti-Christian because its effect is to divide the Christian community into those who say they are "born again" and those who do not use that expression.

"I would like Jews, Moslems, Universalists, agnostics and atheists to know that Mr. Ford does not speak for all Christians," the Rev. N. Robert Quirin, an ecumenical specialist in the Catholic Diocese of Richmond wrote in a letter to the editor of The Richmond Times-Dispatch.

"To say that the New Testament commands that we Christians must love one another means that we should do business with one another is more than just plain ridiculous interpretation of scripture," he wrote. "It is a perversion of scripture. The making of profit and the accumulation of wealth and power is exactly what Jesus asked his followers not to concern themselves with."

Both the Modesto, Calif.-based Christian Yellow Pages and the San Diego, Calif.-based Christian Business Directory are franchise-like operations in which regional staffs sell advertising space to local businesses and give a portion of the profits to the national office.

These directeories, ranging in size from 8 to 24 pages, are distributed free through churches and sponsoring businesses. They have appeared primarily in cities in the West, South and Midwest, such as Portland, Tucson, San Jose, Minneapolis - St. Paul and Miami.

The officials of these enterprises tend to be local businessmen whose livelihood is not dependent on the directories and who are actived in right-wing political and religious activities.

In some cities, such as Atlanta, publication of one of these directories has produced little discussion.

In other cities, like Richmond and Dallas, Christian clergy informed of the content of the directories and the Jewish concern about them, took the lead in condemning them also as anti-Christian and destructive of a sense of community, in a "pluralistic society."

Arnold Foster, general counsel of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, a Jewish civil rights agency, explained part of the Jewish resistance. "When consumers are urged to inqure into the religious beliefs of those with whom they do business and to practice discrimination on the basis of religion, the consequence inevitably will be religious division, resentment and conflict in the business community," he said.

"And if religious discrimination in business relationships, it will almost certainly tend to spread into other areas of public life, such as voting practices, housing and emplayment," Foster said.

But leaders of the directories argue that their projects are necessary during a "moral slide away from God," as Bill Bray, marketing manager for the Christian business Director put it.

"The smaller Christian society becomes and the more pagan America becomes, we'll be forced to put these out to cling to each other," contended Bray, an entrepreneur in Wheaton, Ill., and organizer of Campus Crusade for Christ's "Here's Life" evangelistic campaign in New York City.

Both Bray and Pat Booth, a Dallas entrepreneur, a one-time Campus Crusade worker who is now regional director of the Christian Yellow Pages, vigorously denied charges of anti-Semitism. "We're friends of the Jewish people and friends of Israel," said Bray.

Besides, Booth said, the Christian directories are no different from the new "Jewish Yellow Pages" and yellow pages in the "Second Jewish Catalogue."

"Historically, Jewish people have done business together," he said. He cited a statement in the Jewish Yellow Pages, which said: "Patronize Jewish talent."

These Jewish yellow pages contain free listings of Jewish services and products and are sold in bookstores, pointed out Lucy Negus, an Episcoplian in Richmond who opposed the Christian Yellow Pages.

"What is 'Jewish' about the listings are the products and services offered, rather than the religion of the businessmen selling them," she said.

In the Christian Yellow Pages and Christian Business Directory, advertisers must sign a statement of faith that they are "born-again Christians," a term used by some conservative Christians to explain the conversion experience but not one that has a common theology associated with it.

The Christian Yellow Pages advertising order states: "Advertiser herewith acknowledges the fact that he has accepted Jesus Christ as his personal Lord and Savior and according to the Holy Bible (John 1:13) knows that he is a born-again Christian."

The success of the business directories is mixed. Bray said the Christian Business Directories, which cost from $12,000 to $40,000 to publish, ing" ventures. In Dallas, howare "definitely moneymakever, where the Christian Yellow Pages doubled from 14 to 28 pages between 1975 and 1976, Booth said "I'll probably be lucky to break even."

TAX COMPUTER FEARED

WASHINGTON (AP) — A huge computer system proposed by the Internal Revenue Service in the United States could offer irresistible opportunities for illegal government intrusions on privacy, a congressional study says.

The computer system, which the report says could cost $1 billion, would make U.S. income tax returns immediately available on thousands of terminals in IRS offices.

The draft report of a study by Congress's office of technology assessment suggests that answers are needed teo questions about the security and privacy implications of the proposed computer.

Only about 10 per cent of each year's 132 million tax returns now are instantly available on IRS computers in a limited number of IRS offices. The rest are held on magnetic tape that take days to obtain. But the new system "will make large quantities of personal information about people available in the time it takes to snap two fingers," the report said.

"It may offer resources for surveillance, through identification and location of people, that could prove irresistible, or at least highly tempting to future congresses, presidents and federal agencies."

182 Rich Americans Escape Taxes

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Tax shelters and other provisions of the income tax system allowed 182 persons who earned $200,000 or more to escape paying any income taxes in 1975.

Another 6,000 rich persons used special provisions in the law to get their taxable income down to an effective tax rate of 20 per cent — the same rate as a family of five with an $11,000 income and a standard deduction.

These facts were revealed Thursday in analyses prepared by the treasury department and Internal Revenue Service.

Treasury said 41,361 persons had incomes, not including interest from savings accounts and other investments, of $200,000 or more. IRS said 5 persons had incomes of at least $500,000.

Treasury noted the number of high income persons escaping all income taxes "is very small . . . substantially less than one per cent" of all taxpayers.

But the number of rich people who paid no income tax was down from the 244 in 1974 and is likely to fall even more by the time individual returns for 1976 are filed.

Without the Tax Reform Act of 1975 — which most people remember for the $200 rebates — 230 high income persons would have paid no tax in 1975. And changes in the tax laws last year will reduce the 182 who paid no taxes to an even lower figure when returns are filed by April 15

"The changes made by the tax reform act of 1976 will largely eliminate high income nontaxables," the Treasury report said.

"However, due to various combinations of circumstances, there are always likely to be a handful of nontaxables and nearly nontaxables, but the numbers will be much smaller."

The 51-page report is the first in what will become an annual survey of taxes paid by the wealthy.

It said most wealthy persons are taxed significantly, although 182 persons paid no taxes, about 400 paid virtually none and a few thousand paid relatively low taxes.

Home Ownership Obsolete?

NEW YORK (WP) — The American dream of home ownership is in danger of becoming obsolete in 1985.

That is the major finding of an authoritative study of the nation's housing plight, conducted jointly by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Harvard University.

Already, according to the Harvard-M.I.T. joint centre for urban studies, the sale prices of new houses have grown twice as fast as family incomes; barely a quarter of the nation's households can afford a $44,000 home.

The poorer third of the population has been completely priced out of the house market, and the only families who can find affordable housing are earning $20,000 or more — the top quarter of the nation in terms of earning power.

The United States will enter the 1980s with modest new homes selling for $78,000, according to the study. Later, the price spiral will escalate more, and most of the middle class population will be hard pressed to own their own homes.

"We're not crying out a crisis, but we do have the warning signs of a crisis a few years down the road," said Arthur P. Solomon, director of the joint centre and a White House adviser to former president Lyndon Johnson.

The Harvard-M.I.T. research organization has been pre-eminent in forecasting housing needs since its widely publicized 1973 study disclosed that 13 million American homes were either physically unsound, overcrowded or excessively expensive for the occupants relative to income.

Since 1970, according to the study released here Thursday, the average-income family has lost ground as the cost of home ownership — mortgage and interest payments, taxes, insurance and maintenance — have outstripped increases in income.

The median sales price for new homes increased nearly 90 per cent from 1970 to 1976, and the monthly ownership costs of new homes increased during the same period by more than 100 per cent.

The median sales price for existing homes increased 65 per cent, and the monthly ownership costs for older homes jumped by 73 per cent.

Marion Pitchford used own pocketknife to remove arm

Worker Slices Off Arm To Escape from Machine

Marion Pitchford, 56, of Charlotte, used his pocket knife to cut off part of his arm Wednesday night after it was caught in a machine that sorts raw cotton fibre.

"The good Lord just went with me, that's all there was to it," Pitchford said Thursday from Charlotte Memorial Hospital, where he was in satisfactory condition after surgery.

"He said the only way he could get his arm out of that machine was to take out his pocket knife and cut his arm off," said Sgt. M. D. Cooper of the Mecklenburg County police department.

Pitchford said Thursday that the accident happened when he slipped and fell. His left hand went into the machine and was crushed by a large roller.

He said he was in great pain when he cut his arm, but "I was interested in getting out of that thing."

Pitchford said he plans to go back to work as soon as he gets out of the hospital.

"It happened," he said. "There was no way in the world for me to avoid it."

Surgery Ends Hump Backs

WASHINGTON (WP) — The chief of orthopedic surgery at Children's Hospital here has invented and successfully used a device designed to straighten the severly curved spines of young children suffering from a condition known as kyphosis.

Dr. Douglas McKay said that his procedure does not eliminate the paralysis from which these children suffer, but it does eliminate the hump back with which they have previously had to live.

The operation, which takes eight hours and has been performed 13 times, also extends the life of the children, by straightening them up, McKay said.

"This has been an answer to a prayer," said David Mannes of Norfolk, Va., who attended a press conference on the procedure Wednesday. Mannes and his wife, Irene, have a 10-year-old daughter, Laura, who is one of McKay's patients.

CALLS LIMITED

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fewer than 75 people are likely to get through to President Jimmy Carter during his two-hour radio call-in Saturday, and those who do must call from a publicly listed phone — and be ready to wait on the line.

The show, paid for by CBS radio and moderated by anchorman Walter Cronkite, will be broadcast from the White House Oval Office from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. PST.

A CBS spokeswoman estimated at most 75 people will be able to talk to the president during that period. They will be chosen on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Oil Firms' Breakup Overruled

NEW YORK (AP) — A U.S. federal court judge nullified on Thursday a Federal Trade Commission (FTC) order which would have broken up the country's major oil companies.

The judge ordered the FTC to study the possible environmental impact of the order which would force the oil giants to change the system they use to sell oil in the United States.

The eight oil companies in the case now are involved in the oil market from drilling ventures to operating service stations. The commission alleged the oil companies are maintaining a non-competitive refining market and it proposed divestiture of some refining operations and pipelines. It also recommended formation of 10 to 13 new refining firms.

In a decision on file here Thursday, District Court Judge John Cannella ordered the FTC to begin complying immediately with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) by preparing an environmental impact study.

The environmental issue was pushed by Mobil Oil Corp., Gulf Oil Corp., Shell Oil Co. and Standard Oil Co. of California. The four firms were targetted in an FTC complaint July 18, 1973, along with Exxon Corp., Texaco Inc., Atlantic Richfield Co. and Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

Payoff Charges Promised

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Griffin Bell says he intends to prosecute present or former members of Congress "where proof exists" they received payoffs from South Korean lobbyists.

But Bell added in a statement Thursday he also wants to make such decisions as quickly as possible to "dispel the clouds of suspicion where proof does not exist."

Reports of Korean influence-buying involving congressmen have been circulating for months, prompting a justice department probe and a congressional inquiry.

Bell's statement was in response to some criticism he may be setting an unrealistic deadline for his prosecutors to reach decisions while trying to trace the complex trail of allegedly illegal payoffs.

Critics have said a speedy probe may merely skirt the issue.

But Bell said the prosecutors were making a "thorough and unrelenting" investigation and added, "I intend to prosecute where proof exists."

Bell planned to discuss a "status report" today with the staff of the department's public integrtity section which is preparing grand jury evidence in the case.

"The investigation of all substantial leads in the Korean CIA case is continuing," Bell said.

MYSTERY MAN WINS $1M

The man, about 40, instantly quit his job and left Victoria to plan his future.

A spokesman for The Provincial in Toronto said a Victoria lawyer is acting as an intermediary for the millionaire to preserve his anonymity.

The Times has learned the man was earning only a moderate income and immediately decided never to work another day in his life, following confirmation that he has won one of the five $1 million prizes.

Lottery officials say the man indicated he plans to invest most of the money but will spend a large portion living in a grand manner.

"He was so excited about the win that he said he just had to leave Victoria for at least two weeks to think things over and plan for his new future," the official said.

He said he believed the man to be about 38 or 40, a family man and a wage earner.

The Victoria win means two of the five $1 million prizes have come to B.C.

Five Vancouver supermarket clerks won $1 million which they plan to devide $200,000 each.

Bennett Would Benefit

A company in which Premier Bill Bennett owns shares would stand to benefit if an attempt to remove property from the farmland freeze is successful, opposition MLA Gary Lauk said Thursday.

Lauk, former NDP economic development minister, raised the issue in the legislature during debate on the spending estimates of Environment Minister Jim Neilsen.

He told reporters he is making no charge of conflict or wrongdoing on Bennett's part, but said the public "has the right to know."

The premier, who was not in the House when the comments were made, said later he had made a full disclosure of his interests when he first became an MLA. He said Lauk's remarks were "typical."

During debate, Lauk said the Lieuwan farm near Houston in the Bulkley Valley lies close to a subdivision containing a shopping centre owned by Okanagan Holdings, a company in which Bennett owns shares.

Lauk claimed Okanagan Holdings stands to gain if the land-freeze exemption application succeeds, but did not enlarge on that statement.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips has said the B.C. Development Corporation is trying to purchase the Lieuwan property for use as a sawmill to provide badly-needed jobs in the area.

House records indicate that Bennett listed common shares in Okanagan Holdings when he filed his official statement of financial interests Jan. 17 this year.

On Wednesday, Liberal leader Gordon Gibson had told the House that Houston municipal council last year recommended the release of 300 acres of the Lieuwan farm from the agricultural freeze.

PM Orders CBC Probe

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau asked the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission today to conduct an inquiry into allegations of separatist bias within the CBC.

In a letter to CRTC chairman Harry Boyle, Trudeau asked the federal broadcasting regulatory body to investigate whether the publicly-owned CBC is fulfilling its mandate to protect and promote national unity.

Officials in Trudeau's office indicated that both the CRTC and CBC top management are ready to go along with the inquiry.

The officials said Trudeau discused the proposal with Boyle on Thursday and again early today and has also discussed it with CBC presdient A. W. Johnson.

Both Boyle and Johnson were in meetings with their senior starff to discuss the Trudeau request and were not immediately available for comment.

Trudeau's letter asked Boyle to present a report by July 1 "given the profound significance of this situation."

"Doubts have been expressed as to whether the English and French television networks of the corporation generally, and in particular their public affairs, information and news programming, are fulfilling the mandate of the corporation," the letter said.

These doubts merited examination by the CRTC because the agency has the ability "to make as objective a determination as possible concerning them."

Trudeau and several senior cabinet members have criticized Radio-Canada, the French-language arm of the CBC, and have said that the majority of Radio-Canada employees are separatists

Trudeau told a news conference Thursday that he favored a CRTC investigation of whether Radio-Canada employees have allowed their separatist views to influence their work. He said the CRTC was better suited to conduct such an inquiry than a parliamentary committee.

Smith Wins Vote Aided by Blacks

SALISBURY (UPI) — With the help of black legislators and two whites summoned from sickbeds, Prime Minister Ian Smith today rammed through Parliament a bill drastically reducing the extent of all-white land in this predominantly black country.

The victory, with not a vote to spare, gave the government the "vital element" it requested in its bid to achieve an "internal" majority rule settlement excluding the left-leaning, recognized black nationalist leaders.

The bill passed the 66-member House of Assembly with exactly the two-thirds majority it required. It was the first time Smith has depended on black votes for a parliamentary victory.

The bill now goes to the 23-member Senate, where its approval is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

The government summoned two supporters from their sickbeds for the vote — Minister of Mines Ian Dillon and backbencher Jack Christie, who were both recovering from heart attacks.

The bells summoning members were rung and the lawmakers were asked to step to the right of the central bench to indicate a "yes" and to the left to signal a "no."

Of the 16 black members in the house, six voted for the bill, marking the first time Smith's white-minority government depended on them for passage of legislation. Ten blacks abstained.

Both the United States and Britain — the two countries most deeply involved in negotiations to end Rhodesia's growing racial conflict — have rejected concept of an internal solution.

$50 ALLOWANCE BOOST

Gov't Gives Way On Handicapped

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Allowances for handicapped people in B.C. will increase about $50 a month effective July 1, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm announced today.

The about 10,000 single handicapped people will receive a new shelter allowance up to a maximum of $57 per month. The basic rate of $265 a month for single recipients does not change.

The between 500 and 700 families receiving handicapped allowances will get an extra $50 on the basic rates which are tied to the number of people in the family.

For example, a handicapped person with two dependents will receive a basic rate of $585 a month, up from $535.

Vander Zalm also announced the formation of a homemaker program for handicapped families, designed to encourage the spouse of a handicapped person to work.

The new program also places handicapped people in a separate category under the Guaranteed Available Income for Need legislation so future consideration can be given to handicapped rates independent of other income assistance programs.

The shelter allowance for single handicapped people is the biggest change in the new program, Vander Zalm said.

Under the new program, the ministry of human resources will pick up 75 per cent of rental costs above $75 per month up to a maximum of $57.

Initial reaction to Vander Zalm's announcement was that the increases are not enough.

Jean Swanson of the Downtown Eastside Residents Association in Vancouver, one of the groups lobbying for changes in assistance rates, said the shelter allowance for single handicapped people is "totally inadequate."

She said the average price of an apartment in Vancouver is now $192 per month and the $57 won't help much.

Vander Zalm's announcement completely ignores other recipients of income assistance, she said.

The residents' association and other low income and handicapped groups, in a brief to the government earlier this week asked that the basic allowance for a single handicapped recipient be increased to $284 and that the ministry of human resources pick up the full cost of rent.

Vander Zalm said the shelter allowance program will benefit only about half of the 10,000 single handicapped recipients.

People living with relatives or in government subsidized housing are not faced with the financial burden of those trying to live independently, Vander Zalm said, so the increase in the shelter allowance is geared to help those trying to live alone.

Vander Zalm said homemaker policies for handicapped people have in the past acted as a deterrent towards the spouses of handicapped persons working.

The homemaker service was tied to the family's income from outside work and people often found they were better off not to work because the cost of homemaker service ate up their entire income.

The new homemaker service, also effective July 1, is not tied to family income.

The cost of the programs announced by Vander Zalm totals $6.3 million of which the province will pay $4.5 million with the federal government paying the rest.

The increase in handicapped rates will be shared on a 50-50 basis with the federal government, but the provincial government must pay the total cost of the homemaker service program.

Medium Smith and King's crystal

King Psyched Out

OTTAWA (CP) — An "interview" with the late prime minister Mackenzie King came to an abrupt end Wednesday night because of the "disruptive psychic energy" emanating from an uninvited reporter at the seance.

Spiritualist Geraldine Smith, who claimed to have made contact with King—he died in 1949—said he only wanted to be questioned by representatives of the CBC, which had paid her travel expenses from Brampton, Ont.

The proceedings, recorded in the shadowy, oak-panelled library of Laurier House, King's former residence, will be broadcast in CBC's Sunday Morning program.

It was produced by Angus McClellan who put most of the questions to King through the 24-year-old spiritualist, who said she summoned the ghost of King after entering a trance.

King, said to have staged seances in the old mansion himself, wasn't terribly forthcoming in the abbreviated interview.

He spoke vaguely—through Miss Smith—about his own writing, about the late prime minister Lester Pearson and about the problems of Quebec separation.

The spiritualist said that if the proceedings had not been disrupted by the presence of the unwanted reporter she would have gone into a second stage of the trance, in which she would assume King's facial characteristics and his voice mannerisms.

A number of reporters and photographers were invited to the seance but when others left, Brian Gory of the Ottawa Journal said he hid behind a sofa.

A commotion developed when he was discovered and he finally left, he said, but Miss Smith complained that by that time King's spirit had also departed.

Extra Guards for Hockey

Times News Services

Eight uniformed city police officers and four security guards have been hired by the Moose Jaw Canucks for the hockey team's game tonight with the Melville Millionaires in Moose Jaw.

Civic Centre manager Jim Chadwick said today they have been hired to maintain order at the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League game following a Thursday night fight in Melville between rival fans.

Maureen Mayer, 20, of Moose Jaw, was taken to hospital after being kicked in the back Thursday night but she was later released.

A police spokesman said charges were not laid following the Thursday night scuffles. He said he thought both teams' fans were equally to blame for the trouble.

In Lethbridge, meanwhile, Doug Lecuyer, 18, of the Calgary Centennials, has been charged with common assault following a brawl during a Western Canada Hockey League game with the Lethbridge Broncos last week, city police said today.

Fast Talk Keeps B.C. Firms Corralled

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

The attractive business development climate of Washington State has caught the eye of many B.C. businessmen, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Thursday.

Only some fast-talking by the B.C. Development Corp. (BCDC) has kept the firms from roaming Phillips said.

The minister was commenting on ads placed recently in Vancouver newspapers touting the advantages of establishing a business in Whatcom County which lies along the border in northwestern Washington.

The ads are placed by the Whatcom County Development Council and offer free research information on such things as sites, regulations, assistance programs, and financing to companies wishing to relocate or develop new businesses in the county.

Roy Gillespie, the executive director of the development council, said the ads are designed to lure Canadian businessmen to the U.S.

He said Canadian businessmen no longer have confidence in the government because of all the problems in the country and because labor is dictating government policy.

Phillips said his ministry has been aware of similar-type ads for almost a year.

"And they're certainly having an effect up here," he said.

"There have been many businesses in B.C. I know have looked into the State of Washington with a view to relocating their business there or putting in a new business."

Either the ministry of economic development or the B.C. Development Corp. the Crown corporation set up to encourage development of B.C. industries, has heard about some of the roving businessmen and "talked them out of it," the minister said.

But it's been close a couple of times.

Phillips said a major new B.C. industry was "almost lost" to the lures of Washington State.

He did not want to identify the industry.

The problem, says Phillips, is red tape and lots of it.

"I'm not attacking any of the groups involved, but there is too much red tape in B.C.

Holdup No. 24

A greedy bandit got $585 Thursday night in Greater Victoria's 24th armed holdup of the year.

"Is that all?" the bandit asked Shell service station attendant Lori Kenney, 17, after being handed the cash.

Assured it was, the bandit, who wore a dark blue ski mask and carried a handgun, fled north on Foul Bay Road from the station at Fort and Foul Bay.

Police said the bandit walked in to the station about 9:30 p.m. and asked Miss Kenney: "How much you got?"

She then handed him all the money in the till.

Police describe the suspect as about five feet 10 inches tall, with dark brown collar-length hair. He was wearing beige cord pants and possibly a dark leather jacket.

The robbery was the second this week. On Wednesday night a lone robber held up Ron's Chevron station, 2200 Quadra, and escaped with $70.

Boeing Inquiry Launched

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau is now working through U.S. diplomatic channels, and is prepared to use "whatever means necessary" to determine if any Canadians accepted improper payments from the Boeing Aircraft Co.

At his weekly news conference Thursday, Trudeau said he has asked the U.S. ambassador to Ottawa Thomas Enders to obtain through diplomatic channels information not available from the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

It is more difficult to get information from the SEC than it was from the congressional committee which investigated international bribery by Lockheed Aircraft Corp. several years ago, Trudeau said.

"There is no hard evidence any Canadians either inside or outside government have received anything, so for the time being the benefit of the doubt still lies with innocence," he said.

He also said Canadian ambassador to Washington Jake Warren had also been asked "to find out more about it from the U.S. and Justice

ESKIMO FINDS FROZEN SUB

OTTAWA (CP) — RCMP are investigating a report today that a submarine has been found frozen in the sea ice off the Arctic Coast near the tiny settlement of Coppermine, N.W.T.

An RCMP spokesman asid the force's headquarters in the Northwest Territories have been asked to provide more information on the report.

Burns!

For Scarred Victims, The Super Treatment

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Everyone enlisted in battle on infection

The burns unit at Victoria General Hospital is an antiseptic two-bed hideaway for people up and down Vancouver Island who have suffered among the most painful and lingering of wounds.

Built almost six years ago from money contributed by organized labor, the city of Victoria and businessmen, it was named in memory of the late Victoria mayor A. W. Toone.

Since then all sorts of people have come to lie naked there, sometimes victims of their own stupidity, sometimes the end products of what sound like comic accidents but aren't.

In her 4½ years as head nurse, Mrs. Bea Sinclair has seen them all.

Among the more common are people who have fallen asleep, perhaps after too much to drink, and had cigarettes set their mattresses or chesterfields or clothes alight.

There have been men burned by caustic soda at pulp mills, the so-called black liquor used to cook wood, and hydro men seared by hot wires. One of them lost both legs and an arm a few years ago but is up and around today.

Caustic soda just keeps on burning you until it is neutralize. Bea recalls one of the men had it in his boots, eating away at his feet, until nurses could get him into their big stainless steel tub called a Hubbard.

Old people sometimes burn themselves with water too hot in the bathtub, she says. Then there was the young man who burned his face and hands when a fondue caught fire and he tried to carry it outside.

Two accidents she recalls involved boiling hot tar and in both cases the victims ended up in the water for relief. One was a carpenter who had the bad luck to be standing below when a tar pot spilled. He jumped into the Gorge waterway.

A roofer was burned in the other case and his quick-thinking friends threw him into a nearby swimming pool.

There have been children burned by pots overturned on stoves and a waitress hurt when brandy poured on a sizzling steak exploded.

More than once men have been burned when they used gasoline to clean machine parts and one older man died when burned by an exploding propane tank in his trailer.

One man whose pajamas somehow caught fire when he opened an oven spent 142 days in the burns unit. An 11-year-old boy from up-island was there 193 days after a house fire. A woman whose cigarette started a bed fire holds the current record, 252 days.

It's skin which is destroyed by burns and your skin being your first line of defence against infection, the burns unit and nurses concentrate on keeping their patients super-clean.

First job facing the nurses and a burn victim goes under the name debriding, cleaning up the burns, sometines picking the charred clothing out, scraping the dead tissue away. It can hurt. The victim lies in the big stainless steel tub, where warm water can be delivered through a gentle spray.

He may be sedated first. Then there is the mask for more help if he needs it. It delivers a little anaesthetic, nitrous oxide. The more pain, the harder he breathes, the harder he breathes, the more anaesthetic. Self regulating.

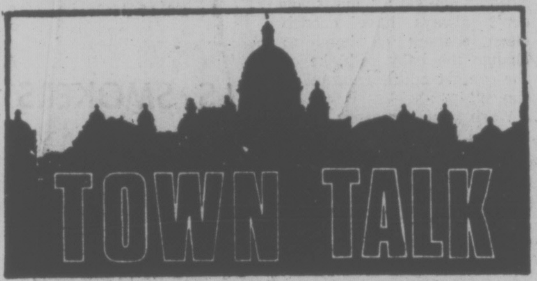
How do you get rid of tar? Slowly and carefully, Bea says. Day by day the nurses snip awa at the edges of it in the patient's daily, sometimes twice daily baths.

Saline compresses and anti biotic creams are the usual dressings for burns. Often patients cannot be covered so heaters above the bed keep them warm.

Air conditioning in the burns unit keeps patients surrounded by sterile air. Sterile linen is used. Special attention is paid to diet and fluid levels.

Plastic surgeons care for burned people and often skin grafts, sometimes many of them, are needed. These tissue-paper layers of skin simply lie unattached atop the area where they are to take root. They're vulnerable, will move if disturbed. Bea says nurses watch over them like any fanatic gardener guarding a pet plot.

"It's real nursing," she says of work in the burns unit. "It's nursing care which pulls people through."



TOWN TALK

Tory leader Scott Wallace Thursday entered the contest to name the provincial government's new Burrard Inlet crossing ferry system.

Wallace asked Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, minister responsible for the two-ferry pedestrian crossing system, whether the advertisements and the $300 prize for the contest were justified in this time of government restraint.

After Curtis replied that the Socred government's advertising budget was less than that of the NDP, Wallace offered his suggestion, and perhaps his evaluation of Curtis' answer.

The new ferry system should be named Curtis' Regional Aid to Pedestrians, Wallace said, or, in its acronym form, CRAP.

Rescue Centre Studied

The centre will be studied in April by Major Bill Leslie of Ottawa, the defence department's representative on the permanent interdepartment committee on search and rescue, appointed by the federal government in January.

Major Lou Villeneuve said Thursday Leslie's recommendations are almost certain to result in improvements.

He said they probably would include microfilming and other means to allow his staff to co-ordinate their efforts faster. Such equipment is used by the United States' Coast Guard centre in Seattle.

Villeneuve said the Victoria centre will be used as a pattern for the three other rescue centres, based in Edmonton, Trenton and Halifax.

"They (the committee) will be visiting the various regions and deciding how to operate on a standard pattern, based on what's happening here," he said.

The centre moved from Vancouver to CGB Esquimalt in 1970 and "is the most modern and the most efficient of the four," Villeneuve said.

The committee was established by the federal government to correlate all search and rescue policy recommendations, Villeneuve said. Prior to January, the defence, ministry of transport, environment and fisheries departments had all been making separate reports.

He started operating on Douglas, next door to his present store, on June 6, 1930, moving to the present premises four years later.

He daren't hazard a guess as to the number of boots and shoes he's repaired since then.

Greater Victoria roofers will miss him even more than his other customers. For them, the quiet spoken Simpson developed a leather strip, which attached to the left side of their crepe-soled boots, protected them from long hours of squatting on that side of the boot.

Simpson is looking forward to taking it easy, a luxury rarely known in 50 years of six-day weeks. He also plans to fish, garden and tackle some of the household chores he's had to neglect.

Students Step Up Fee Fight

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

University of Victoria students are talking about organizing a mass demonstration March 21 in an effort to head off a proposed 25 per cent tuition fee hike.

Student leaders said today they have been encouraged by the Senate's 18 to 14 vote earlier this week to oppose the increase. The Senate will recommend the Board of Governors hold the fees at the present term's $426.

But UVic president Dr. Howard Petch is almost certain to recommend the governors increase fees — a move he said is necessary to prevent staff lay-offs.

The governors meet March 21, but before that time, student leaders will step up their lobby.

Alma Mater Society vice-president Joe Barrett will introduce a motion at Sunday's meeting of the Representative Assembly calling for a general meeting of students.

If that passes, the meeting will probably be held March 9.

The student body at large will be asked to support a mass demonstration March 21.

"We were really surprised. And of course delighted," student senator Rosemary Gray said about the Senate vote.

She said no one expected the motion to pass, "but now we're really hopeful" the decision will influence the governors.

She said student senators argued for more than an hour citing reason after reason why fees shouldn't be increased.

"We changed some minds," she said. "I think some of the faculty (Senators) felt guilty. If they didn't vote for the motion, it would appear their salaries are more important than fees."

Gray said a tuition fee increase is putting the cart before the horse. Fees shouldn't increase until there is enough financial aid for students to be able to pay them, she said.

Petch said earlier that the government grants to the university for general expenditures amoung to only about five per cent more than last year.

Metric Help Refusal 'Unfair'

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Ottawa's refusal to help defray the municipal costs of metric conversion is inequitable and unfair, Saanich Ald. Ian Cass said today.

He said the metric conversion program was ordered by Ottawa but costs are being shifted to the provincial and municipal governments who have other financial burdens to bear.

"We are hard-pressed to find enough funds to pay for sidewalks and other things without having this burden added to our shoulders."

Cass was commenting on a statement Thursday by Clare Bolger, federal Metric Commission chairman, who said no federal funds will be available to meet a Saanich request for assistance with metric conversion costs. He made the comment at a news conference at the conclusion of the commission's first meeting in Victoria. Bolger said some provincial governments might be willing to provide financial assistance with conversion but there is no provision for federal grants.

Cass said today he will raise the issue with Esquimalt-Saanich Conservative MP Don Munro although he is not optimistic that Saanich can win its case.

"Quite frankly we cannot afford to get into a David and Goliath confrontation with Ottawa on this issue because it would be an expensive battle.

"We are going to have to save our money and energies for the bigger battles with Ottawa over things like public transportation and energy conservation.

"Ottawa's decision on metric conversion costs, however, is obviously inequitable and unfair."

At the urging of Cass, Saanich council has passed a resolution asking for federal funding.

Saanich has already spent $10,000 on the program and council last week agreed to advance another $3,500 to prepare speed limit signs in kilometres.

The new signs, 50 kmh in the city and 80 on the highway, will be used on all B.C. highways by September. They will carry small signs down below giving the equivalent in miles per hour.

The small signs will be removed within six months time.

Travelling 50 kmh is just a fratction faster than the present speed limit in the city but the 80 kmh is identical to the present Vancouver Island highway speed limit.

New UVic Vote Set for Tuesday

A second election for the presidency of the Alma Matter Society at the University of Victoria will be held Tuesday.

The first on Feb. 16 was declared invalid this week by the student Representative Assembly after it received a report that a number of students may have been deprived of their right to vote.

AMS general manager David Clode told the assembly two of the five polling stations ran out of ballots just before polls closed. He said it could have affected the outcome by five to 10 votes.

The assembly also invalidated the results of the election for treasurer where Dale McClanaghan defeated Douglas Moore by 28 votes.

But Moore withdrew from a second campaign and McClanaghan was declared AMS treasurer by acclamation. All other executive positions were filled by acclamation before the Feb. 16 election.

MYSTERY MAN WINS MILLION

A Victoria wage-earner has become an instant millionaire through the Provincial Lottery which was drawn Feb. 28, the Times learned today.

The man, about 40, instantly quit his job and left Victoria to plan his future.

A spokesman for The Provincial in Toronto said a Victoria lawyer is acting as an intermediary for the millionaire to preserve his anonymity.

The Times has learned the man was earning only a moderate income and immediately decided never to work another day in his life, following confirmation that he has won one of the five $1 million prizes.

Lottery officials say the man indicated he plans to invest most of the money but will spend a large portion living in a grand manner.

"He was so excited about the win that he said he just had to leave Victoria for at least two weeks to think things over and plan for his new future," the official said.

He said he believed the man to be about 38 or 40, a family man and a wage earner.

The Victoria win means two of the five $1 million prizes have come to B.C.

PM Orders CBC Probe

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau asked the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission today to conduct an inquiry into allegations of separatist bias within the CBC.

In a letter to CRTC chairman Harry Boyle, Trudeau asked the federal broadcasting regulatory body to investigate whether the publicly-owned CBC is fulfilling its mandate to protect and promote national unity.

Officials in Trudeau's office indicated that both the CRTC and CBC top management are ready to go along with the inquiry,

The officials said Trudeau discused the proposal with Boyle on Thursday and again early today and has also discussed it with CBC presdient A. W. Johnson.

Both Boyle and Johnson were in meetings with their senior staff to discuss the Trudeau request and were not immediately available for comment.

Trudeau's letter asked Boyle to present a report by July 1 "given the profound significance of this situation."

"Doubts have been expressed as to whether the English and French television networks of the corporation generally, and in particular their public affairs, information and news programming, are fulfilling the mandate of the corporation," the letter said.

These doubts merited examination by the CRTC because the agency has the ability "to make as objective a determination as possible concerning them."

Trudeau and several senior cabinet members have criticized Radio-Canada, the French-language arm of the CBC, and have said that the majority of Radio-Canada employees are separatists

Trudeau told a news conference Thursday that he favored a CRTC investigation of whether Radio-Canada employees have allowed their separatist views to influence their work. He said the CRTC was better suited to conduct such an inquiry than a parliamentary committee.

Smith Wins Vote Aided by Blacks

SALISBURY (UPI) — With the help of black legislators and two whites summoned from sickbeds, Prime Minister Ian Smith today rammed through Parliament a bill drastically reducing the extent of all-white land in this predominantly black country.

The victory, with not a vote to spare, gave the government the "vital element" it requested in its bid to achieve an "internal" majority rule settlement excluding the left-leaning, recognized black nationalist leaders.

The bill passed the 66-member House of Assembly with exactly the two-thirds majority it required. It was the first time Smith has depended on black votes for a parliamentary victory.

The bill now goes to the 23-member Senate, where its approval is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

The government summoned two supporters from their sickbeds for the vote — Minister of Mines Ian Dillon and backbencher Jack Christie, who were both recovering from heart attacks.

The bells summoning members were rung and the lawmakers were asked to step to the right of the central bench to indicate a "yes" and to the left to signal a "no."

Of the 16 black members in the house, six voted for the bill, marking the first time Smith's white-minority government depended on them for passage of legislation. Ten blacks abstained.

Both the United States and Britain — the two countries most deeply involved in negotiations to end Rhodesia's growing racial conflict — have rejected concept of an internal solution.

Bennett Would Benefit

A company in which Premier Bill Bennett owns shares would stand to benefit if an attempt to remove property from the farmland freeze is successful, opposition MLA Gary Lauk said Thursday.

Lauk, former NDP economic development minister, raised the issue in the legislature during debate on the spending estimates of Environment Minister Jim Neilsen.

He told reporters he is making no charge of conflict or wrongdoing on Bennett's part, but said the public "has the right to know."

The premier, who was not in the House when the comments were made, said later he had made a full disclosure of his interests when he first became an MLA. He said Lauk's remarks were "typical."

During debate, Lauk said the Lieuwan farm near Houston in the Bulkley Valley lies close to a subdivision containing a shopping centre owned by Okanagan Holdings, a company in which Bennett owns shares.

Lauk claimed Okanagan Holdings stands to gain if the land-freeze exemption application succeeds, but did not enlarge on that statement.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips has said the B.C. Development Corporation is trying to purchase the Lieuwan property for use as a sawmill to provide badly-needed jobs in the area.

House records indicate that Bennett listed common shares in Okanagan Holdings when he filed his official statement of financial interests Jan. 17 this year.

On Wednesday, Liberal leader Gordon Gibson had told the House that Houston municipal council last year recommended the release of 300 acres of the Lieuwan farm from the agricultural freeze.

$50 ALLOWANCE BOOST

Gov't Gives Way On Handicapped

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Allowances for handicapped people in B.C. will increase about $50 a month effective July 1, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm announced today.

The about 10,000 single handicapped people will receive a new shelter allowance up to a maximum of $57 per month. The basic rate of $265 a month for single recipients does not change.

The between 500 and 700 families receiving handicapped allowances will get an extra $50 on the basic rates which are tied to the number of people in the family.

For example, a handicapped person with two dependents will receive a basic rate of $585 a month, up from $535.

Vander Zalm also announced the formation of a homemaker program for handicapped families, designed to encourage the spouse of a handicapped person to work.

The new program also places handicapped people in a separate category under the Guaranteed Available Income for Need legislation so future consideration can be given to handicapped rates independent of other income assistance programs.

The shelter allowance for single handicapped people is the biggest change in the new program, Vander Zalm said.

Under the new program, the ministry of human resources will pick up 75 per cent of rental costs above $75 per month up to a maximum of $57.

Initial reaction to Vander Zalm's announcement was that the increases are not enough.

Jean Swanson of the Downtown Eastside Residents Association in Vancouver, one of the groups lobbying for changes in assistance rates, said the shelter allowance for single handicapped people is "totally inadequate."

She said the average price of an apartment in Vancouver is now $192 per month and the $57 won't help much.

Vander Zalm's announcement completely ignores other recipients of income assistance, she said.

The residents' association and other low income and handicapped groups, in a brief to the government earlier this week asked that the basic allowance for a single handicapped recipient be increased to $284 and that the ministry of human resources pick up the full cost of rent.

Vander Zalm said the shelter allowance program will benefit only about half of the 10,000 single handicapped recipients.

People living with relatives or in government subsidized housing are not faced with the financial burden of those trying to live independently, Vander Zalm said, so the increase in the shelter allowance is geared to help those trying to live alone.

Vander Zalm said homemaker policies for handicapped people have in the past acted as a deterrent towards the spouses of handicapped persons working.

The homemaker service was tied to the family's income from outside work and people often found they were better off not to work because the cost of homemaker service ate up their entire income.

The new homemaker service, also effective July 1, is not tied to family income.

The cost of the programs announced by Vander Zalm totals $6.3 million of which the province will pay $4.5 million with the federal government paying the rest.

The increase in handicapped rates will be shared on a 50-50 basis with the federal government, but the provincial government must pay the total cost of the homemaker service program.

Medium Smith and King's crystal

King Psyched Out

OTTAWA (CP) — An "interview" with the late prime minister Mackenzie King came to an abrupt end Wednesday night because of the "disruptive psychic energy" emanating from an uninvited reporter at the seance.

Spiritualist Geraldine Smith, who claimed to have made contact with King—he died in 1949—said he only wanted to be questioned by representatives of the CBC, which had paid her travel expenses from Brampton, Ont.

The proceedings, recorded in the shadowy, oak-panelled library of Laurier House, King's former residence, will be broadcast in CBC's Sunday Morning program.

It was produced by Angus McClellan who put most of the questions to King through the 24-year-old spiritualist, who said she summoned the ghost of King after entering a trance.

King, said to have staged seances in the old mansion himself, wasn't terribly forthcoming in the abbreviated interview.

He spoke vaguely—through Miss Smith—about his own writing, about the late prime minister Lester Pearson and about the problems of Quebec separation.

The spiritualist said that if the proceedings had not been disrupted by the presence of the unwanted reporter she would have gone into a second stage of the trance, in which she would assume King's facial characteristics and his voice mannerisms.

A number of reporters and photographers were invited to the seance but when others left, Brian Gory of the Ottawa Journal said he hid behind a sofa.

A commotion developed when he was discovered and he finally left, he said, but Miss Smith complained that by that time King's spirit had also departed.

Extra Guards for Hockey

Times News Services

Eight uniformed city police officers and four security guards have been hired by the Moose Jaw Canucks for the hockey team's game tonight with the Melville Millionaires in Moose Jaw.

Civic Centre manager Jim Chadwick said today they have been hired to maintain order at the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League game following a Thursday night fight in Melville between rival fans.

Maureen Mayer, 20, of Moose Jaw, was taken to hospital after being kicked in the back Thursday night but she was later released.

A police spokesman said charges were not laid following the Thursday night scuffles. He said he thought both teams' fans were equally to blame for the trouble.

In Lethbridge, meanwhile, Doug Lecuyer, 18, of the Calgary Centennials, has been charged with common assault following a brawl during a Western Canada Hockey League game with the Lethbridge Broncos last week, city police said today.

Fast Talk Keeps B.C. Firms Corralled

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

The attractive business development climate of Washington State has caught the eye of many B.C. businessmen, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Thursday.

Only some fast-talking by the B.C. Development Corp. (BCDC) has kept the firms from roaming Phillips said.

The minister was commenting on ads placed recently in Vancouver newspapers touting the advantages of extablishing a business in Whatcom County which lies along the border in northwestern Washington.

The ads are placed by the Whatcom County Development Council and offer free research information on such things as sites, regulations, assistance programs, and financing to companies wishing to relocate or develop new businesses in the county.

Roy Gillespie, the executive director of the development council, said the ads are designed to lure Canadian businessmen to the U.S.

He said Canadian businessmen no longer have confidence in the government because of all the problems in the country and because labor is dictating government policy.

Phillips said his ministry has been aware of similar-type ads for almost a year.

"And they're certainly having an effect up here," he said.

"There have been many businesses in B.C. I know have looked into the State of Washington with a view to relocating their business there or putting in a new business."

Either the ministry of economic development or the B.C. Development Corp., the Crown corporation set up to encourage the development of B.C. industries, has heard about some of the roving businessmen and "talked them out of it," the minister said.

But it's been close a couple of times.

Phillips said a major new B.C. industry was "almost lost" to the lures of Washington State.

He did not want to identify the industry.

The problem, says Phillips, is red tape and lots of it.

"I'm not attacking any of the groups involved, but there is too much red tape in B.C.

Holdup No. 24

"Is that all?" the bandit asked Shell service station attendant Lori Kenney, 17, after being handed the cash.

Assured it was, the bandit, who wore a dark blue ski mask and carried a handgun, fled north on Foul Bay Road from the station at Fort and Foul Bay.

Police said the bandit walked in to the station about 9:30 p.m. and asked Miss Kenney: "How much you got?"

She then handed him all the money in the till.

Police describe the suspect as about five feet 10 inches tall, with dark brown collar-length hair. He was wearing beige cord pants and possibly a dark leather jacket.

The robbery was the second this week. On Wednesday night a lone robber held up Ron's Chevron station, [illegible] Quadra, and escaped with $70.

Boeing Inquiry Launched

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau is now working through U.S. diplomatic channels, and is prepared to use "whatever means necessary" to determine if any Canadians accepted improper payments from the Boeing Aircraft Co.

At his weekly news conference Thursday, Trudeau said he has asked the U.S. ambassador to Ottawa, Thomas Enders to obtain through diplomatic channels information not available from the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

It is more difficult to get information from the SEC than it was from the congressional committee which investigated international bribery by Lockheed Aircraft Corp. several years ago, Trudeau said.

"There is no hard evidence any Canadians either inside or outside government have received anything, so for the time being the benefit of the doubt still lies with innocence," he said.

He also said Canadian ambassador to Washington Jake Warren had also been asked "to find out more about it from the U.S. and Justice

BIG QUAKE IN ROMANIA

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A major earthquake struck Romania today and might have caused "great damage" since it apparently occurred in a populated area, the U.S. National Earthquake Centre reported. Experts at the centre in Golden, Colo., said the quake recorded 7.2 on the open-ended Richter scale and appeared to have been centred just north of Bucharest, the Romanian capital.

Toronto Prices Still Jumping

TORONTO (CP) — Prices rose moderately in active mid-afternoon trading on the Toronto stock market today.

The Toronto Stock Exchange says a total of 506,837 Westinghouse Canada Ltd. shares have been tendered in a bid from the parent firm, United States-based Westinghouse Electric Corp. for the remainder of the Canadian subsidiary's shares.

Westinghouse Electric, which previously held a 75 per cent interest, is offering $26 a share.

The TSE says the tender brings to 94 per cent Westinghouse Electric's interest in Westinghouse Canada which last traded at $25.75 a share. A one-day halt is in effect to allow for the acquisition.

Among other industrials, General Motors rose 1 to $75, Husky Oil ⅞ to $26¼, Texasgulf Inc. ¾ to $32½, Falconbridge Nickel ½ to $36 and Interpoll Ltd. ½ to $16½.

Mercantile Bank was down 1 to $13¼, Canadian Cablesystems ¾ to $13, Canadian Imperial Bank ½ to $24⅜, Canadian Tire A ¼ to $38 and Canadian Curtiss-Wright three cents to 43 cents.

Rio Algom gained ¾ to $27½, Dome Mines ½ to $32¾. Kerr Addison A fell ⅛ to $14¼ and Mattagami Lake Mines A ⅛ to $14⅛.

Numac Oil and Gas was down ⅞ to $13⅞, Ranger Oil Canada ¾ to $22⅝ and Voyager Petroleums ⅝ to $8¾. Ocelot Industries A dropped ⅜ to $8 and Bridger Petroleum ⅛ to $8¼.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took the news of February's higher unemployment in stride and quietly advanced Friday.

The market has been confronted recently with negative economic news, including a drop in January's index of leading economic indicators, a decline in the number of factory orders, and increased unemployment in February, but the market has managed to hold its own.

However, analysts were wary of the rally because of the light trading.

"The problem is the rallies don't seem to develop any volume," said Saul Smerling of Standard and Poor's. "You like to see it rally with some conviction."

Generally analysts agreed the market had dealt with the effects of the cold weather snap and was looking to an improving economy.

A Federal Reserve weekly report showed the money supply fell one billion dollars, easing investor worries that the Board would pull back on its monetary policies.

International Systems, which jumped 3⅛ Thursday, was up 1⅞ to $29⅝. The company said it did not see any commercial or business reason for the rise.

Deere Co. in heavy trading was up ⅜ to $28¾, leading the most active list.

Westinghouse was next, down ¼ to $18.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were a shade higher in moderately active trading today on the Montreal Stock Exchange. Celanese Canada was up 20 cents at $3.70, Husky Oil ⅞ at $26⅛, Dofasco A ¼ at $26 and IAC Ltd. ⅛ at $16⅛. Mercantile Bank of Canada was off ½ at $13⅝, Canada Trust Mortgage A ¼ at $24 and Interprovincial Pipe Line A ⅛ at $13.

Pension Protection Pays Off

VANCOUVER (CP) — The $181 million invested to protect Canada Pension Plan benefits from inflation has been returned almost five-fold in additional earnings, a treasury board official says.

W. A. Kelm, director of pensions and benefits for the board, told a conference on pensions that other changes in the pension plan have generated $854 million, more than enough to offset the amount invested to shelter the plan from inflation.

Since 1969, pension payments have been indexed, or tied to the rate of inflation, to ensure that benefits will have enough purchasing power to help pensioners through retirement.

Kelm said the plan's additional income has come from three main sources: about $590 million in interest was earned as a result of the government's decision to loft the former four-per-cent limit in interest credited to the pension account; an additional $78 million came from employer contributions increased by indexing, and $186 million came from increased employer contributions to the plan.

Direct government contributions account for about 22 per cent of the additional earnings, he said.

HOT DOG! WIENERS HAVE MERITS

Nutrition Buyline

QUESTION: Are wieners good for children?

ANSWER: Wieners are included in the meat and meat alternates group. They contain nutrients similar to other members of the meat group at lower levels. One and a half vieners, or a three-ounce serving, is equivalent to two ounces of lean meat, fish or poultry. A young child may have difficulty eating the larger portion. Wieners are lower in iron than most other meats. They can be offered occasionally but a wide variety of meats should be included in a child's diet.

QUESTION: Instead of three meals a day, 'I am skipping lunch. Will this help me lose weight?

ANSWER: Meal skipping is a poor way to lose weight. It actually may increase appetite for the next meal or for between-meal snacks which results in increased food intake. Skipping of meals is likely to lead to the choice of unbalanced diets. Actually, several small and regular meals each day may provide greater satisfaction to the person on a reducing diet than the normal three-meal pattern.

QUESTION: What is calcium propionate and why is it used in bakery food?

ANSWER: This is a calcium salt of propionic acid, found widely in natural and processed foods, including the yeast leavened foods—bread and cheese. Calcium propionate inhibits mould growth which would otherwise develop in bread within about three days. It has no effect on staling.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Just What Is Tapioca?

By DR. JEAN MAYER and
Dr. JOHANNA DWYER

Q. What exactly is tapioca? Is it grown naturally or is it a manufactured product?

A. Tapioca is a manufactured product. It is made from the starchy root of a shrub called manioc, or cassava, which is extensively grown in central and South America, as well as in Africa. (Cassava root, incidentally, is the principal food of many people in the tropics. Because of its very low protein content, however, protein malnutrition is common in communities that depend heavily on it.)

To produce "pearl" tapioca, the starch is extracted from the cassava root and formed into a dough. The dough is then forced through a sieve to form the pellets or pearls, which are dried at high temperatures. "Minute" tapioca, which is more popular now, is made by baking the dough in thin sheets and then pulverizing it to a granular consistency.

Tapioca itself provides little nutrition except some calories from the starch .When made with milk, a half-cup serving of tapiocal pudding contains about 160 calories with all the nutrients in the milk. It's a good dessert for children and those of us who can afford the calories.

Q. I'd be interested to know the difference between apple juice and unfermented apple cider.

A. There really is very little nutritional difference. Both contain about 120 calories per cup and supply small amounts of calcium, iron and B vitamins. The chief difference between apple juice and apple cider is in the type of apples selected. Apples with a high acid astringency-to-sugar ratio are preferred in cider production.

Both apple juice and apple cider sold in supermarkets are filtered and pasteurized. And as I'm sure you know, much of the cider sold at roadside stands is not cider at all.

Q. I know that salad dressing does not cost as much as mayonnaise, but both seem to look and taste quite similar. What is the difference?

A. Mayonnaise contains about twice as much fat as salad dressing, which gives it a somewhat richer taste. According to government standards, mayonnaise must be made of vegetable oil and egg emulsified to a semi-solid form and seasoned with acidifying ingredients and spices. It must contain at least 65 per cent oil by weight. Salad dressing also contains oil (30 per cent by weight), egg and seasonings, but it is thickened with a cooked starch, such as tapioca flour, wheat flour or rye.

As you might expect, because salad dressing is lower in fact, it is also lower in calories. A tablespoon of mayonnaise contains about 100 calories; the same amount of salad dressing provides about 60, making it a somewhat better choice for weight-conscious consumers.

Day-Care Centre Bill $168M

OTTAWA (CP) — Day-care services have improved in Canada but the standards vary from province to province, parents still pay most of the cost and much remains to be done, says the Canadian Council on Social Development.

A report on Canadian day-care standards, recently made public by the council estimates the cost of day-care services at publicly-regulated centres in 1976 at $168 million.

Of the amount, the federal government contributed $21 million, with a matching amount from provincial and municipal governments. Parents paid the remaining $126 million.

H. Philip Hepworth, program director and author of the report, said in an interview that about 80,000 children are placed at subsidized, publicly-regulated day-care centres. Most working parents cannot afford the cost of day-care centres and have to make informal arrangements, such as using babysitters or asking relatives, friends and neighbors for help.

There were about 600,000 children under the age of six in Canada at last count, Hepworth said.

The report says day-care legislation and standards have improved substantially in the last five years, but notes variance of standards not only among provinces but between urban and rural areas.

In children-per-staff requirements, the council recommends a maximum of nine children between the ages of three and four for each staff member, but the number permitted under provincial legislation varies from five to 20.

Another variance is in the minimum space required for each child, from a low of 25 square feet to a high of 60 square feet.

The report also adds that day-care centre staff salaries are "lower than they should be."

U.S. City Media Must Be Split

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals has ruled that the same company cannot own a newspaper and a television or radio station in the same city unless the joint operation is in the public interest. The ruling, which overturns an order of the Federal Communicaiotns Commission, FCC, might affect 79 joint newspaper-television ownerships or an unspecified number of newspaper-radio ownerships across the U.S.

Mixed Marriage Upsets Blacks

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is in her senior year at college. She is a beautiful girl who has won many honors and beauty contests, but she never let it go to her head. She was always very popular with both boys and girls, and she never gave us any trouble.

She wrote to tell us that she plans to get married after she graduates in June. The man (from what she says about him) is a fine person. He is her college professor.

My husband is heartbroken and says if she marries him she can't set foot in our house again. You see, he is of a different color. I also feel that she would be better off marrying her own kind, but I could never turn her away from our door.

How can I get my husband to change his mind and accept our daughter's husband even if he is white? We are black. — MICHIGAN MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Remind your husband that for a people who have suffered from racial discrimination for centuries to insist on "reverse discrimination" in choosing a mate makes no sense. He'll lose his daughter and gain nothing for his race.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 40-year-old divorced woman who came to visit Chicago from a foreign country last October. Without going into detail, I find myself now in a most distressing circumstance.

I am confirmed to be pregnant. The man has left me, and I am without friends, without funds and no source of income.

I will not submit to an abortion as it is against my religious principles. Where can I get help? I feel my obligation to give life to this child, but I cannot see my way clear to be a proper mother and raise a child.

Please, please help me. — stranded

DEAR STRANDED: Call BIRTHRIGHT — 312-233-0353. A courteous, understanding woman will answer all your questions and offer suggestions that are alternatives to abortion. At no cost to you you will be offered medical care for yourself, and arrangements for the adoption of your child. Counseling is available free, too. I urge you to call them at once. Good luck and God bless. Please let me know how you make out. I care.

Woman Promoted

OTTAWA (CP) — Livia Marie Thur, 48, since 1975 the senior assistant secretary in the science ministry, has been appointed associate vice-chairman of the National Energy Board, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said. The appointment fills a longstanding vacancy on the board and increases the number of members to nine.

Cinnamon Rolls Corrected

Owing to a typographical error, two ingredients were ommitted from this recipe when it appeared in The Times on Wednesday. Here is the complete recipe:

¼ teaspoon soda
¼ cup white sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 packet dry yeast
2½ cups flour, about
1 cup buttermilk
3 tablespoons salad oil
2 tablespoons water
¼ cup melted butter
½ cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup finely chopped nuts

Mix together soda, white sugar, salt, yeast and 1 cup of the flour. Heat buttermilk and salad oil until just below boiling or until small bubbles gather around edge of pan. Add milk to flour mixture and beat well. Stir in the rest of flour and knead dough until smooth and elastic, using more flour it needed. Butter 12 muffin cups or tins. Mix the water with half the melted butter and half of the brown sugar, dividing mixture in muffin tins. Roll dough out to a rectangle, 12 by 15 inches. Spread dough with remaining butter and brown sugar sprinkling with cinnamon and nuts if desired. Roll dough into a round and cut into 12 slices, placing in muffin tins. Set to rise in warm place for about 1 hour, or until doubled. Bake at 350 degrees about 25 minutes. Turn rolls out of warm pans.

Lesser Charge In Hijacking

NEW YORK (AP) — One of five Croatian nationalists accused of murder during the hijacking of a Trans World Airlines jet pleaded guilty to a lesser charge Wednesday, escaping the threat of the death penalty. "I acted in the cause of freedom for the Croatian people and all other people" declared Mark Vlasik, 29, of Stamford, Conn., one of four Croatian-born defendants demanding Croatia's independence from Communist Yugoslavia.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel: During my husband's stay in the hospital recently he received several potted plants of chrysanthemums which I would love to save for transplanting outdoors later. Should I keep them indoors this winter and wait until spring for the transplanting? Even if the blooms fade and the leaves become withered will they survive from the roots if held indoors during the freezing weather? Any suggestions you offer will be appreciated.—V.R.

Dear V.R.: First, here's hoping your husband has a speedy recovery. As for his mums, their recovery will not be quite so fast. The best way to insure a profusion of outdoor blooms this spring is to cut them all back down to about two inches from the soil when the flowers die and the leaves become withered. Keep them in the sunniest spot in your home (out of sight of company, if possible, since a potful of stems is not the most decorative sight in the world), water only when they are very dry, and then, come spring, plant them in a nice sunny spot in your garden.

They should come back to full bloom within three of four weeks, and then, for the next several years, you should be able to cut them back and leave them outside and expect new blooms every year.

Program Arranged

PARIS (Reuter) — The Canadian and Venezuelan co-chairmen of the North-South conference of rich and poor countries will meet in Caracas on Monday to fix a program leading to a final ministerial meeting, senior officials said Wednesday. The 19 developing countries involved in the conference which began here in December, 1975, have called for a resumption of their stalled talks with industrial countries.

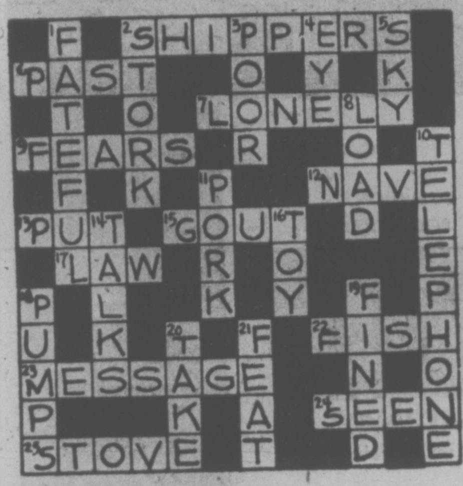
PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS:

2. SHIPPERS no shoppers. The idea of "handling goods" smacks of business rather than shopping.
6. PAST not fast. "Speeding" in the clue duplicates "fast" which makes PAST favored.
9. FEARS not years. A situation that lasts for years hardly links up with opportunism — which means taking one's chances as and when they occur (possibly when FEARS arise).
13. PUT not cut. The clue suggests something done only infrequently. PUT is more apt, since you may cut flowers regularly or almost daily.
15. GOUT not bout or rout. The disease of GOUT often comes on quite suddenly. Since, normally, there would be some resistance, a rout does not often commence with the initial attack. A boxing "bout" normally starts with each opponent cautiously feeling out the other.
17. LAW not lab. In LAW, yes; but, rather, in lab work, since the lab itself imposes no technicalities.
23. MESSAGE not massage. MESSAGE is the more practical answer. A man's attitude towards a massage may be quite leisurely and relaxed.
24. SEEN not been. Strictly speaking, SEEN is more directly apt, in that a man may wish to forget the "something" he's SEEN (i.e., the spectable or event in question). On the other hand, it's more a question of his wishing to forget having been the unworthy thing he has been. "SEEN" is the more natural answer anyway.
25. STOVE not stole. An "ideal" product is one that fulfils one's conception of what is required (i.e., in a STOVE). A stole is more the sort of thing that simply appeals, rather than is considered ideal.

CLUES DOWN:

1. FATEFUL not hateful. FATEFUL, certainly; but not hateful as far as a person is concerned who sees the job as a necessary public service.
3. POOR not pool. He is not expected to play a POOR game, but there is no reason why he shouldn't play pool.
10. TELEPHONE not telephony. The TELEPHONE is that which "provides" communication. Telephony is the art or practice of so communicating.
11. PORK not work. Workers, in excess, can tend to hamper each other.
14. TALKS not tasks. Though lively and interesting TALKS are the more effective, "even dull and monotonous ones serve a purpose." Many useful tasks are inevitably and quite propertly dull.
16. TOY not try. Since resourcefulness must be involved before one can be proud of it, TOY is more necessarily apt. A successful try may be sheer luck.
18. PUMPS not jumps. The clue's reference to "an up and down movement" suggests a definite form of action — especially something functional or repetitive, as when working a PUMP. When one jumps, the coming down is simply the inevitable consequence of going up; there is no understood "up and down movement."
20. TAKE not make. Due to makeup and characterization, he may TAKE an entirely different appearance from usual. In the case of make, it is pointless to specify "entirely different," since an appearance in a new role must be quite separate anyway. Also, the clue's reference to the actor's familiair "face" invites one to think of "appearance" as physical aspect (the sense for TAKE).

Salmon Smell Way Home

Scientists at the University of Wisconsin Department of Zoology believe they have solved the mystery of how adult salmon in their spawning migration unerringly return to the same stream in which they were hatched.

Evidence has been found of unique chemical odors from the original stream that are imprinted in the brains of the fish which lure them home.

Stephane Grappelli's Hot Violin

By MARRILL SHINDLER

Grappelli: Just the Man Django Wanted

SAN FRANCISCO — The photographer wants Stephane Grappelli to pose with his violin by his Canterbury Hotel room window with the San Francisco skyline behind him. So Grappelli, ever accommodating, opens his violin case and . . . voila!

Nestled in the case is a 1742 Gagliano. "Not as good as a Strad," says Grappelli,' "but I am used to a small car." It's wrapped in a red silk herchief imprinted with a few bars of sheet music. "It is the 'Movement Perpetual' of Paganini," he explains. "A gift from Django's wife."

The 68-year-old violinist who appeared recently in Victoria, closes his eyes and runs off a series of trills and crescendos on his instrument while the photographer's Nikon clicks a counterpoint. A half-smile crosses Grappelli's lips, a smile that increases when he opens his eyes and spies a painting of a gypsy caravan on a wall of his room.

He begins to tell of the gypsy Django Reinhardt, a brilliant guitarist who, with Stephane, nominally co-founded and co-led the Quintet of the Hot Club of France in 1934. Grappelli's voice, always wistful, sounds more and more like the fatherly Maurice Chevalier of "Gigi." And, as his recollections of Django drift further into reyerie, a presence begins to be felt — the ghost of Django Reinhardt, and no matter how hard Grappelli tries he can't shake the legend of his partner who died some 23 years ago.

Grappelli first met Reinhardt in 1931, in a cafe in Paris where Grappelli was playing mostly piano, but also a smattering of saxophone and violin. As Stephane tells the story, one night "a big, dark, funny-looking man comes in and says, 'Hey, I'm looking for a violinist to play hot.' "

That, of course, was Django. But it was to be another two years before the violinist and the guitarist played together, during a chance meeting in a Champs Elysee hotel where they played in different bands. By 1934, the two were playing together regularly, along with guitarists Roger Chaput and Joseph Reinhardt (Django's brother) and Louis Vola on bass, taking their name from a club formed by a French critic, Hughes Panassie. It was to be a tempestuous 20 years for Grapelli and Reinhardt.

"Django was a gypsy by temperament," says Grappell, "as well as birth. He was always late and often forgot to appear at all. He was a child, illiterate and spoke only a bad French. One time, we were invited by a high person to play at the Elysee Palace after dinner. But Django does not appear, so I say than I will go to find him, that I know where he is. I do not, but I got to Django's flat in Montmartre.

I ask his wife where he is and she says he is at the 'Academie' playing billiards. I go there and when he sees me, his face turns red. He is afraid of me — I am older and I can read. So we go back to his flat and shave him and change his clothes, and off we go to the Elysee.

For many years there is tension between us — always his latenes, his vanishing, his wildness and moods. We go off in different directions, Django forms another quintet, he goes to America with Duke Ellington.

Then, in 1953, I am going to put the quintet back together again and, poor Django, his brains explode, and that ends us for good.".

Reinhardt died of a burst blood vessel in his brain when he was playing billiards.

In the past few years, Stephane (who also eventually played with Duke Ellington) has tried other alliances, playing with Yehudi Menuhin, Paul Simon, vibraphonist Gary Burton, Jean-Luc Ponty, even with Manfred Mann on a version of "Peter and the Wolf." He always plays for a single album, since he does not trust record companies and, according to his manager, Vince Ryan, only signs single-album contracts.

"One thing I would like to do again," says Grappelli, "is play with Paul Simon. I run into him in Paris and we do a number called 'Hobo's Blues' (from the "Paul Simon" album). It was just he and I in the studio. I have done work with a lot of rock people, but I liked him the best. He is a genius. Gary Burton is a genius, also, nobody can play like him. There are more jazz violinilsts than you think — Snuff Smith, Joe Venuti, Jean-Luc Ponty — Jean-Luc is like my family."

Declaring the interview over because he wants to go to the waterfront and eat crab, Grappelli combs his wispy hair and pulls on a turtleneck sweater. Next to a Sony tape recorder are two tapes; Jefferson Starship's "Spitfire' and a recent Stanley Clarke album. Not a Hot Club tape in sight.

And that night, before an SRO audience at the Great American Music Hall, Grappelli opens with Robert Flack's "Killing Me Softly" and closes with "California, Here I come." For a man haunted by his past, he sounds well-exorcised.

CONTEST RULES

1. Solve the Prevue Payoff Puzzle by filling in the missing letters to make the words that you think best fit the clues. To do this read each clue carefully for you must think them out and give every word its true meaning.

2. Check the word list. It has all the correct answers plus some you will have to eliminate.

3. You need not be a subscriber to this newspaper in order to enter. You may submit as many entries as you wish on the entry blank printed in this newspaper or exact-sized, clear, hand-drawn facsimiles of the printed entry blank. NO MECHANICALLY PRODUCED, PRINTED, MIMEOGRAPHED, etc. copies of the entry blank will be accepted. Each entry must contain the contestant's name, address and phone number or it will not be accepted.

4. Anyone is eligible to enter this contest except employees (and members of their families) of Victoria Press Ltd.

5. All entries MUST be mailed and bear a postmark. The paper is not responsible for entries lost or delayed in the mail. Entries for each week's contest not received for judging by 12 noon the following Wednesday are not eligible.

6. To qualify you must write your answer to one of the clues on the outside of the envelope. See coupon for instructions.

7. Prevue will award the current prize to the contestant who sends in an all correct solution. If more than one all correct solution is received the prize money will be shared equally. If no all correct solution is received, $50 will be added to the following week's prize.

8. There is only one correct solution to each puzzle and only the correct answer can win. The decision of the judges is final and all contestants agree to abide by the judges decision. All entries become the property of Prevue. Only one prize will be awarded to a family unit.

9. Everyone has the same opportunity to win for EVERY QUALIFIED ENTRY WILL BE CHECKED and the winner announced. No claiming is necessary.

10. Entries must be mailed to Prevue-Payoff Puzzle, Victoria Press Ltd., Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4. One entry per envelope.

On Her Majesty's Secret Service, (xxx), on 6 at 8 p.m. George Lazenby replaces Sean Connery as Agent 007 James Bond, in this film with some great scenes shot on location in Switzerland. The plot concerns the bad guys' plan to conquer England using virus germs. (1969).

Goldfinger (xxx), on 8 at 8:30 p.m. This was the third in the James Bond super-adventures. It stars Sean Connery, Gert Frobe and Honor Blackman. The plot revolves around a spectacular heist of the gold deposits at Fort Knox. (1964).

The Shape of Things to Come (xxx), on 2 at 9 p.m. An interesting, old English version of the novel by H. G. Wells about a civilization in the year 2036. Raymond Massey and Ralph Richardson. (1936).

The Wrath of God (xx), on 5 at 9 p.m. Adventure movie about three foreigners' involvement in the 1920s Central American rebellion. Robert Mitchum, Frank Langella and Rita Hayworth. (1972).

The Lavendar Hill Mob (xxxx), on 9 at 9 p.m. Comedy starring Alec Guiness and Stanley Holloway. The story is about a bank employee who thinks he has a fool-roof plan to get away with an armored-car gold shipment. (1952).

Today's Highlights

World Figure Skating Championship Special, on 8 at 7 p.m. Taped coverage of the final two days of competition in Japan. Tonight: the dance finals.

Future Cop — Crime Drama Debut, on 4 at 8 p.m. An aggressive veteran cop (Ernest Borgnine) is assigned to break in a rookie — an android programmed to be the perfect policeman.

Dog and Cat — Crime Drama Debut, on 4 at 10 p.m. A female college grad and a 14-year police veteran work together as a police team. In this episode, both are puzzled by a rapist who only attacks prominent women.

Music Hall America, on 11 at 10 p.m. Host Freddy Fender with guests Don Gibson, Flash Cadillac and Dottie West.

Spotlight on Movies

The Guns of Navarone (xxxx), on 12 at 9 p.m. A great cast bolsters this tension-filled tale about a group of soldiers and green guerrilla fighters who must destroy one of the most heavily guarded German fortresses in the Aegean. Excellent scenes shot on location in the Greece Isles. Anthony Quinn; David Niven, Gregory Peck, Irene Papas and Anthony Quayle. (1961.)

The Lady Killers (xxxx), on 9 at 10:20 p.m. English-made comedy starring Alec Guiness and Peter Sellers. The story is about a strange crew of bank robbers whose plans are thwarted by a nice old lady. (1956).

The Horsemen (xx), on 7 at 11 p.m. Drama starring Omar Shariff and Jack Palance. Beautiful location shots in Afghanistan and Spain. The story is a mixture of action, adventure and romance, with Shariff in still another death-defying desert role. (1971).

Black Christmas, on 13 at 11 p.m. Canadian-made thriller about a campus killer who "courts" his victims with obscene phone calls. Olivia Hussey. (1974).

Goldfinger, on 6 at 11:20 p.m. For details see today's listing on Channel 8 at 8 p.m.

Drums (xxx), on 2 at 11:45 p.m. English-made adventure movie, a colorful spectacle of political intrigue and conflict in India's northwest tribal frontier. Sabu and Raymond Massey. (1938).

The Emigrants (xxxx), on 8 at 12:10 a.m. Touching story about a Swedish peasant family who came to America's Midwest in the middle of the 19th century. Max von Sydow and Liv Ullmann. (1970).

Blue Denim (xx), on 5 at 1 a.m. Another one about misunderstood youth and the consequences of premature love. Well acted by Carol Lynley and Brandon de Wilde. (1959.)

Alvarez Kelly (xxx), on 7 at 1:05 a.m. Western starring William Holden, Richard Widmark and Janice Rule. Colorful setting of the U.S. Civil War. (1966).

The Tingler (xxx), on 2 at 1:35 a.m. A gimmicked horror film that works, starring Vincent Price and Judith Evelyn. (1959).

Dynasty, on 6 at 1:50 a.m. For details see Sunday's listing on Channel 8 at 12:10 a.m.

Until They Sail (xxx), on 8 at 3:10 a.m. Soap opera made palatable by a good all-star cast — Paul Newman, Jean Simmons and Joan Fontaine. The plot revolves around the events in the lives of four sisters living in New Zealand during the Second World War. (1957).

Tennis Champs Meet Saturday

Two of sports' most controversial superstars will clash when Jimmy Connors defends his $250,000 "Heavyweight Championship of Tennis" title against Romania's Ilie Nastase, Saturday, March 5 at 1:30 p.m. on Channels 7 and 12.

Connors, currently rated number one in world tennis, and Nastase, ranked number three behind Bjorn Borg, are both notorious for their on-court flareups. And, while Connors has defeated Borg seven times in a row, he was one and four last year against Nastase, who holds a 15 and four lifetime edge over the U.S. Open champion.

Between the two players — Connors, who won more than a half-million dollars on the courts last year, and Nastase, whose 1976 tennis earnings topped $430,000 — they have captured just about every major tournament in tennis.

Connors, Wimbledon champion in 1974, won 10 of 15 major international tournaments last year, including the Australian Open, the United States National Clay Court championships, the American Airlines and Alan King Classics, and has not lost before the quarter finals of any tournament in the past two years.

Nastase, the only player in the world with a commanding lead over Connors, was twice a Wimbledon finalist, won the U.S. Open in 1972, defeating Arthur Ashe in five sets; won the Grand Prix Masters tournament three years in a row; and last year won the World Championship Tennis Challenge Cup by whipping Borg in a $100,000 winner-take-all final. He also won the French, Italian, and professional indoor championships.

This match will mark Connors, fourth "Heavyweight Championship of Tennis" appearance. He won first by defeating Rod Laver, in January 1975, defended successfully against John Newcombe in April of that year, and last year whipped Manuel Orantes to retain the title.

FESTIVAL '77: Solid gold in the form of Eiffel tower. That's the creation Alec Guinness displays to Stanley Baker in the Lavender Hill Mob, Saturday, at 9 p.m. on Channel 9. For more information on Festival '77 (airing Sunday, March 6 through March 20) see story on page 7.

Lions' Telethon Goal $60,000

No less than $60,000 is the target for this year's Lions' Telethon to roll over the screen on Cable 10 from 6 p.m. Saturday to 4 p.m. Sunday.

Victoria's Own Lions' Telethon, or VOLT for short is the title and the motto is "get a charge out of giving,"

For 22 hours, musicians and entertainers of every description will appear as guests and hosts in the McPherson Playhouse from where the Telethon will be broadcast live.

It's the third time, Victoria will have its own annual Telethon. In 1975, more than $22,000 were raised during seven hours of broadcasting.

Last year, a 10-hour show raised $45,000. Telethon officials are confident that $60,000 is a realistic target for this year's program.

For the first time also, viewers in Sidney and the western communitities of Langford, Colwood, Metchosin and Sooke will be able to tune in on the Telethon. They, too, will be able to watch the program on Cable 10.

Money pleged during the program and raised at a number of community activities preceding the show, will help finance the maintenance of 17 buses used to transport handicapped children and adults every day.

Tri-Country Meet Ready

Canadian, Soviet Union and American track and field stars will join in a tri-country meet, hosted by Canada, in a spectacular event that will mark the first time U.S. and Soviet teams contest in an internationally acclaimed track meet outside of their countries, and CTV's "Wide World Of Sports," telecasting Saturday, March 5, at 4 p.m., will provide the exclusive Canadian coverage of the two-day indoor meet.

'Quit Smoking' Clinic on TV

Starting on Saturday, March 5th, at 7 p.m. KOVS-TV, Channel 12, will begin the first of a six-part series "So You Want to Quit Smoking", a television clinic for smokers.

The series features Dr. Allan Best of the University of British Columbia who, for the past four years, has been successfully conducting a smoking clinic which is funded as part of a research project by the non-medical use of drugs, Health and Welfare Canada.

"So You Want To Quit Smoking" is a six-part series designed to help people who actually want to quit smoking and who are already motivated. It does not tell you to stop — no moralizing, no sermons and no scare tactics will be used. The first programs will help you, the viewer, analyse your own particular problems, why and when you smoke. Following this first stage, Dr. Best will then show how to develop an alternative pattern for you, the inidvidual. Short filmed dramatizations will also be used to point up typical situations.

After the first two programs, viewers will be asked to call in if interested in further information, and after the third program, the phones will again be opened to callers and trained counsellors along with Dr. Best who will answer questions directly.

"So You Want To Quit Smoking" will continue from Saturday, March 5th at 7-7:30 p.m. weekly through April 9th, and will be repeated each following Sunday afternoon.

STORAGE

How long will your films last? The prime factors affecting color negatives or transparencies are light, heat and moisture. The first is easy, keep your films in dark containers. Second, store films away from heat, below 70° for most film. Preferably below 50° F for long-term storage of color films, especially Kodachrome. The most important is moisture. High relative humidity is more dangerous than high temperatures. Store films between 25% and 50% humidity. Avoid humidity under 25% especially with movie film, as this may cause excessive brittleness.
For more information on the best containers for film storage come in and see the Certified Photographic Counsellors at Jus-Rite Photos.

Television Mailbag

By RICK ROBERTS

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. Could you please repeat the biography on Randolph Mantooth from the show, "Emergency." I know you wrote it a few years ago, but would appreciate if you could repeat it. — J. H., Belmont, Man.

A. After nearly five years in the series, Mantooth has mixed feelings on the fame he has achieved.

Traveling to get away from it all is not a new experience for him. As a youngster, he lived in 46 states because of his father's job in pipeline construction work.

He says he never made many friends until high school when he started acting.

While studying at the Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York City, he was spotted by an executive from Universal Studios.

Before being cast in "Emergency," Mantooth appeared in several television shows including "The Senator," "Marcus Welby" and "Adam-12."

Q. I think Robert Wagner is the best actor on television. Could you please give me some information on his career and where I can write to him? — J. H. S., Oakland, N.J.

A. Wagner, who appears as Pete Ryan in the show, "Switch," has been acting since the age of 19. Before making his first film, "Halls of Montezuma," he had made 50 screen tests.

A native of Detroit, Mich., his family moved to Los Angeles when he was 7 years old. While still in high school, he decided he wanted to become an actor.

Since his first movie, Wagner has appeared in more than 30 films as well as made-for-television movies and was star of the series, "It Takes a Thief."

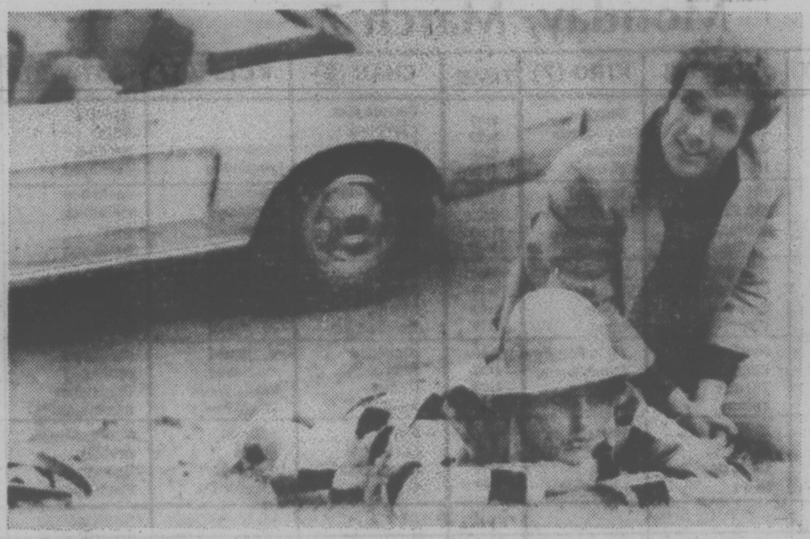
Wagner is married to actress Natalie Wood. They live in Beverly Hills.

You can write to him in care of CBS Television City, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif.

Q. Regarding a question in a recent column on the names used by David Soul and Paul Michael Glaser in the show "Starsky and Hutch," you said David Soul was called Jim Hutchinson. I thought he was known as Ken Hutchinson. — G.M., Millbrae, Calif.

A. It is Ken.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Rick Roberts, TV Mailbag, in care of Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4.



LAUREN HUTTON and James Caan share one peaceful moment before he returns to the gambling tables where the stakes could be his life in "The Gambler," a television premiere on the ABC Television Network's "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" Sunday, March 6 at 9 p.m. on Channel 4.

Festival '77 Features Many Special Programs

Festival '77, public television's third annual nationally co-ordinated fund raising and public awareness campaign, is scheduled for Sunday, March 6 through Sunday, March 20. During the 15 day celebration, Public TV 9 will supplement its regular schedule with music and comedy specials, news documentaries, and television plays produced in the United Stated and abroad.

Some of these programs were acquired by the Public Broadcasting Service specially for the Festival. Others were acquired by Channel 9 from independent producers. Both Channel 9 and PBS want to insure that the Festival is a treat for old members, and an incentive for new ones to join.

The Festival promises to have something for every taste. Music lovers should enjoy The Vienna Philharmonic (March 7, 9 p.m.), All-Star Swing Festival (March 12, 9:30 p.m.), The Ragtime Years (March 12, 10:35 p.m. , Rock Follies (March 14-18-, La Boheme (March 15, 8 p.m.) and The Mikado (March 20, 1:30 p.m.).

A clearer look at the past is afforded by The Epic That Never Was (March 7, 10:15 p.m.), The Andersonville Trial (March 11, 9:10 p.m.) and The Glory of Their Times (March 14, 7:30 p.m.) While a significant look at the present is provided by Scenes from a Marriage (March 9, 10:00 p.m.), Asmat — The Cannibal Craftsmen of New Guinea (March 9, 10:00 p.m.), I Am a Woman (March 14, 9:30 p.m., March 19, 11:10 p.m.) and The Rise and Fall of the C.I.A. (March 18 and 19).

And for fun there are Blithe Spirit (March 10, 9:30 p.m.), Laurel and Hardy films, short works by Academy Award-winner Robin Lehman, and German soccer matches.

The monetary goal targeted for Festival '77 nationwide is $10 million from new members, and a total of $13.5 million from other sources.

To remain on target for this fiscal year's fund raising, Channel 9 itself must raise $200,000 from membership sources in March. And the chief source of that income must be Festival '77.

Gerussi in Moscow On CBC Special

The annual Russian Winter Arts Festival is a time for fun and games and letting off steam, Russian style. It's also a way to make the long winter bearable and an answer to the western world's Christmas season. And it is celebrated in just about every city in Russia.

Sunday, March 6, at 8 p.m. CBC-TV will telecast the Superspecial — Gerussi In Moscow, providing Canadian viewers with a look behind the Iron Curtain and its Winter Festival. It is rare to be invited by the U.S.S.R. as the official "Honored Guest" of the Winter Arts Festival. Few western world celebrities get such an invitiation. This year, Canada's Bruno Gerussi, star of the The Beachcombers and Celebrity Cooks, received just such an invite from the large U.S.S.R. agency InTourist and the State Committee for TV and Radio. A few years back, so did Bob Hope. And Mary Tyler Moore.

Gerussi In Moscow will take Canadians to some of the hundreds of festival activities, as seen through the eyes of Bruno. And it's a city of contrasts, from those wedding cake buildings that make up the Kremlin rimming Red Square, to the ulta-modern, super-efficient subway system and the modern grey blocks that service 7.5 million Moscovites daily. Filming days stretched from 7 in the morning until beyond 11 at night in an effort to present the whole picture.

The Canadians were allowed to film and visit parts of the country and festivities never before shown in the western world. Exciting sequences include highlights of the world-famous Moscow Circus, and a visit to the grand Bolshoi Ballet, performing Swan Lake. A truly stunning visual encounter is the trip inside the Hermitage Museum, which contains one thousand rooms of great master paintings. Ironically, as Clare Walker states, "It was a cultural shock to simply walk into that museum. The art is superb, but pales by comparison to the architectural majesty of the Hermitage building itself!".

There are many examples of the varied styles of Soviet artistry, including the Don Cossacks, the Armenian Folk Dance Ensemble, and an interview with actor Misha Kozakov, probably the most respected actor in Russia and known as "... the Richard Burton of the Soviet Union . .

Play and Opera In Double Bill

Two productions of Salome — Oscar Wilde's sensuous half-hour play and Richard Straus' vivid 90-minute opera with Maureen Forrester and other internationally - acclaimed singers in leading roles, will be presented on CBC Radio's Special Occasion.

This unusual double bill about a passionate clash between the flesh and the spirit, and the brief triumph and final self-destruction of a purely materialistic attitude, will be heard on CBC-FM Thursday, March 10, at 9 p.m., and on CBC-AM Sunday, March 13, at 7:05 p.m.

Both productions will originate in Edmonton. Oscar Wilde's play, focusing on the heartless teenage stepdaughter of lascivious King Herod, who agrees to do the erotic Dance of the seven Veils for him in return for the severed head of John the Baptist, for whom she lusts, was written while Wilde was holidaying in Paris in 1891. He began work on it in the afternoon, finished the play about 11 that night, then hurried round to the Grand Cafe, where he persuaded the orchestra conductor to play something in harmony with his thoughts, which were centred "on a woman dancing with her bare feet in the blood of a man she has craved for and slain." When the censors got wind of what the new play was about, they were apoplectic. The London Daily Chronicle called the work "a tale spawned from the leprous literature of the French Decadents, a poisonous book, the atmosphere of which is heavy with the mephitic odors of moral and spiritual putrefaction." A year after Wilde's death Max Reinhardt staged Salome in Berlin with enormous success.

Terry Campbell will produce and direct the adaptation by Marian Waldman for Special Occasion. In the cast are Judith Mabey as Salone, the seductive body without a soul, Mark Shoenberg as Herod, Susan Andre as Herodias, mother of Salome, Fletcher T. Williamson as Jokanaan (John the Baptist), whom Salome wants to conquer — as a man, not as a prophet, Richard Gishler as Narroboth, who loves Salome and kills himself when she spurns him, and Brian Taylor as the Page.

The play in English will set the scene for the opera in German, which was taped at the Jubilee Auditorium with production for the CBC by R. Thearn. Strauss based his Salome almost word for word on a German translation of Wilde's play. It was his first stage hit, premiered in Dresden, where the censors were known to be lenient, in late 1905, when he was 41. The Metropolitan Opera first presented it in 1907, but it was withdrawn after opening night because of its daring theme, and was replaced by Hansel and Gretel! Salome was banned from the Met for 27 years, but is now in its regular repertoire —was presented again ths month (February).

Pierre Hetu conducts the augmented Edmonton Symphony Orchestra in the Special Occasion performance. American soprano Louise Pearl will sing the arduous title role. Toronto tenor Alan Crofoot will be heard as Herod, contralto Maureen Forrester as Herodias (her first performance in this role), Windsor baritone Victoria Braun as Jokanaan, the Greco-American tenor Chris Lachonas as Narraboth. Others in the cast are Janet Stubbs of Toronto, Claude Corbeil of Montreal, Ray Nurse of Vancouver, Ernest Atkinson of Calgary, and Lothar Rachmann, Dieter Rohn, Lary Benson, Wolfgang Oeste, Paul Lorieau, and Roy Glover, all of Edmonton. Direction for the Edmonton Opera Association is by Irving Guttman.

Louise Pearl has appeared at the Met and with opera companies in Graz, Austria (in an exciting interpretation of Salome), Vienna, Zurich, Hamburg, Dusseldorf, New Orleans, and many other music centres. One of her most successful roles has been as a seductive Carmen.

The Edmonton Oera Association faced the biggest challenge in its 14 years of producing grand opera when it scheduled Strauss' Salome — one of the most difficult operas to present, visually and musically. Its vocal line, which taxes most singers, follows speech inflection in idealized form, and its vocal ensembles are often referred to as a singer's nightmare. The score is a continuous texture of complex, sometimes weird and dissonant harmonic structures with widely varied orchestral colors and recurring motives both petulant and searing.

Salome is the third opera presented this season on Special Occasion. The others were Wagner's Die Walkure and Thomas' Mignon.

DIMINUTIVE ENZO (Frank Delfino) and Ample Margo (Joan Shawlee) are a strange pair, but both play important supporting roles in "The Feather and Father Gang", beginning March 6th at 9 p.m. on CKVU-TV, Cable 13.

Violence Scenes to Go From Starsky and Hutch

By TOM SHALES

HOLLYWOOD — Starsky and Hutch, one of the 20 most popular shows on network TV and, according to a recent study, the most violent show on network TV as well; is about to get an overhaul. Aaron Spelling, one of the executive producers of the series, says that as a result of the escalating campaign against TV violence, Starsky and Hutch are going to clean up their act.

"We are going to take the violence? That sounds like Hutch, said Spelling. "I promise. We're going to stop it. Period. And if the rating slips two points, then the rating slips two points."

Starsky and Hutch without voilence? That sounds like Lawrence Welk without shmaltz. Starsky is the series about two bullying buddy cops that began the season with an episode called Stranglers in Paradise and had a later installment advertised on ABC with the come-on, "Saturday — Starsky and Hutch face a bloodbath at the hands of a deadly cult!"

But things are changing in television. Hollywood and the networks are running scared. After a 25-year war on TV violence that has remained a virtual stalemate, the antiviolence forces are making dramatic inroads. They are wrestling promises from producers, networks and sponsors to cut down on the televised mayhem that many experts believe contributes to actual violence in American society and distorts the world view of youngsters who will have seen an estimated 13,000 televised murders by the time they are 15 years old.

Congressional studies on TV violence go as far back as 1954 and have continued like clockwork, largely without effect. The surgeon general's office issued a landmark report on the topic in 1972, but if anything, prime-time television grew subsequently more violent, not less.

This year, pressure groups have taken aim at the broadcasters' most vulnerable spot — their money belts. The National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting (NCCB) published a list of the "most violent" shows and the sponsors who advertised on them, totalling up violent acts and defining them as "aggressive personal incidents of violence which clearly and intentionally threatened personal injury in a serious way." The five shows found most violent: The $6 Million Man, Hawaii Five-O, Baa Baa Black Sheep, Baretta and Starsky and Hutch.

Then the American Medical Association, which supported the NCCB survey with a $25,000 grant, urged sponsors to drop out of shows that rated high on the violence scale. Other groups joined the bandwagon. The National Parent-Teacher Association has held another of its regional TV violence conferences in Los Angeles. Groups as diverse as the Southern Baptist Convention and the Screen Actors Guild joined in the antiviolence clamor.

The means of assault aren't limited to rhetoric. The Church of the Bretheren not only opposses TV violence, it owns stock in one of TV's largest advertisers, Proctor and Gamble, and is trying to influence the company's ad buys from the inside.

Opposition to TV violence, and a willingness to fight it at the supermarket level, aren't limited to do-gooder groups, either. In a Gallup Poll to be released this week, a majority of parents questioned said they believe there is a direct link between televised violence and rising crime in the streets.

While the majority said they wouldn't favor a boycott of sponsors whose commercials appear on violent shows, one-third of those polled said they would support such a boycott. The word "boycott" may not exactly strike terror into Madison Avenue, but it is good for a couple of extra Alka-Seltzers after lunch.

NCBB president Nicholas Johnson, a former FCC commissioner, hasn't advocated boycotts yet. "We've been very careful about that," says Johnson. "We haven't urged people to boycott but then, in all candor, when you publish the names of the most violent sponsors, you don't need to."

29 Charmers in Pageant

Twenty-nine of Canada's most charming teenagers will be vying for the honored title of Miss Teen Canada 1977 in CTV's live coverage of the 9th "Miss Teen Canada Pageant," telecasting coast-to-coast Monday, March 7, 7:30 p.m. on Channel 8.

Hosts for the evening's festivities are Grant Smith, who is also the featured entertainer, and Miss Blair Lancaster, Miss Canada 1974. Also on hand during the evening and the week's activities leading to the crowning of the new Miss Teen Canada will be last year's winner Miss Shelley Lynn Homick, a 17-year-old Windsor student.

Chosen on the basis of scholastic achievement, awareness, poise and appearance, the young woman who wins the coveted title of Miss Teen Canada "becomes representative of the best of her generation. At all times she serves as a spokeswoman for Canada's teenagers while emphasizing the highest ideals and standards of conduct and integrity."

Although all finalists will be vying for the title of Miss Teen Canada, there will be opportunities to win individual honors and a share of the Regal Merchandising Awards.

Cousteau Probes Pollution

In recent years, the earth's ozone layer has deteriorated; air and noise pollution have taken over the cities; and degenerative diseases such as cancer increasingly have been linked to an industrialized lifestyle.

On Cousteaus Oasis in Space, airing Thursday, March 10 at 7:35 p.m., on Public TV 9, host Philippe takes an in-depth look at three cases of industrial pollution.

The emotional photos of W. Eugene and Aileen M. Smith retell the tragedy of Minimata, a Japanese fishing village where bodies rotted and minds went mad — the result of mercury poisoning. Philippe also flies abroad the amphibious plane "Calypso" to an Indian reserve in southwestern Ontario. There, a paper plant has been dumping mercury into the waterways; some Indians, whose lives and livelihood depend on the fish, already are showing signs of "minimata disease."

In Silver Bay, Minnesota, a taconite processing plant dumps 67,000 tons of asbestos-laden tailings into Lake Superior each day.

Frightening Information About Dioxin on TV 9

The true nature of the man-made chemical Dioxin is examined on Nine's Journal, Tuesday, March 8 at 7:30 p.m. on Public TV 9. The World in Action documentary will be hosted by Public Affairs manager Mike Kirk.

Dioxin made the news recently when an explosion at a chemical plant near the Italian town of Seveso deposited a fine layer of Dioxin dust over a wide area of homes and farmland. Now the area is uninhabitable: the population of the town suffers from a disfiguring skin disease while the pregnant women must decide whether to terminate their pregnancies in the face of the high risk of deformation in their unborn children.

Although it attracted attention in Italy, Dioxin is not unknown in the United States. A component of many weed killing products Dioxin has been transported throught the Northwest under less-than safe conditions.

Two leading toxicologists with frightening information about Dioxin also live in the United States. According to thse experts, Dioxin is one thousand times more damaging to pregnant mothers than the drug Thalidomide. In fact, its level of toxicity is so acute that it exposes human beings to risks beyond the understanding of the human imagination.

Geographic Crew Films The Volga

It is often said that the Volga flows in the heart of every Russian. The river is rich in Russian history, and in Russian blood. The Soviet government gave the National Geographic Society rare permission to film this season's fourth National Geographic Special along this essential waterway. The Volga airs Tuesday, March 8 at 8 p.m. on Publc TV 9 (rebroadcast Sunday, March 13 at 6:30 p.m.).

Accompanied everywhere by officials from Novosti, the Soviet News agency, Geographic cameras travelled aboard the Lenin, flagship of the Volga cruise fleet, to film a documentary of life along the mighty river. Although Novosti was ever-present, no film was censored: it all left the Soviet Union in sealed cans to be developed in the United States.

The Volga is 2,300 miles long, the longest river in Europe. One must imagine the Mississippi, the Hudson, and the Ohio Rivers all combined to get an idea of the Volga's role in Russian history, culture and industrialization.

In Volgograd, 52-year old Ivan Musatov, a laborer from a village near Moscow, shows his 15-year old son around the streets he defended as a soldier in the Soviet Army. Volgograd was rebuilt out of the former Stalingrad, which was totally destroyed in a costly but decisive battle during the Second World War, when the Russians halted the invading Nazis.

From the Astrakhan region near the mouth of the Volga, the Geographic team films the Russians as they reap an exotic and expensive delicacy — caviar — from various types of sturgeon, the large, sluggish botton-feeding fish that live in the Caspian Sea and swim up the Volga to spawn. The fish are processed on the spot by huge floating factories. Most of the caviar is for export: in the U.S. it sells for about $100 a pound.

'I Am an Inuk . . .'

A vast Arctic expanse defined only by a solitary igloo and banks of dense clouds drifting toward the horizen is the opening scene of Ukaliq, a special film to be telecast on CBC-TV on Friday, March 11 at 4:30 p.m.

A man's voice punctuates the stillness: "I am Ukaliq, an Inuk, son of Unaaq and Putuliq. We are people of the north. It is known among my people that a man's story belongs to him, and only he may tell that story. So hear it now. The story of Ukaliq. The time of childhood was as magic."

Magical is the word for this half-hour superbly animated film and there's magic also because the film is true to the folklore of Canada's Inuit (Eskimo) people.

PYGMIES FEATURED IN FESTIVAL FILM

Tribes fighting for their survival in Africa and leading a Stone Age existence in the jungles of Indonesian New Guinea, are explored on two Festival '77 specials.

The Pygmies, airing Wednesday, March 9 at 8 p.m. and Saturday, March 12 at 3 p.m., looks at a misunderstood culture. Categorized among the dwarf people of the world because of their small stature, the Pygmies inhabit the African rain forests (ranging from Eastern Zaire to the Cameroon).

The film traces the daily routine of the Bajaka tribe, as the 12 men, 18 women and 33 children set up a new village.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Beau Kayzer's In the Top Ten

By STEVEN H. SCHEUER

NEW YORK — Beau Kayzer of The Young and the Restless (CBS) can be found in the top 10 on any soap opera popularity poll, but you're lucky to catch his character Brock Reynolds on the show these days.

Beau's father, a specialty steel salesman in Toronto, Canada, has to make long distance calls to find out how his youngest boy in a family of seven, is doing, because he never sees Beau on the tube.

With the law closing in on Restless over the agonizing death of Bill Foster after his wife Liz pulled the plug on her ill, tormented husband, Beau's saintly Brock, the owner of the Allegro Restaurant, is left out in the cold. Brock's job at present consists of comforting his mother Kay, who has taken in Joanne Curtzynski for company. A character who helps ohters, Brock verges on the stuffy side, something 25-year-old, 6'4" Beau Kayzer is not. If writers inserted a shot of Beau into Brock more often, it could only be a plus.

A handsome kid who had never considered acting, Beau and his electric guitar didn't drive away listeners in Toronto coffee houses. Told he belonged in Hollywood, the kid dutifully checked in on Sunset Boulevard at age 16, and spent the next four years pounding pavements, peddling songs.

But acting and not singing opened the doors for him. It turned out that David janssen's mother, Bernice, an agent, listened to Beau read and said, "You are a natural."

Having succeeded with her son David, Bernice knew the ropes. She kept encouraging Beau by saying, "You will be a star, you will be a star." Two years ago, a steady job came his way, the role of Brock on The Young and Restless. With that base, Beau can sing occasionally on the show at the Allegro. At the moment, he's out hustling his first album, Touch That Feeling which contains a few songs he did on the soap opera.

Jill's Jam: While Brock Reynolds awaits his turn in The Young and the Restless plotting, Brenda Dickson's blue-eyed, auburn-haired Jill Foster is smack in the middle of the tragedy surrounding her father Bill's death. Jill knows her mother Liz pulled the plug on her father. That means actress Brenda Dickson must play a semi-controlled young lady under deep tension.

Between the police investigation, her frightened mother, and stalwart brother Snapper about to be sacrified, Jill must hold together somehow. To carry things further, according to the actress, Jill will meet and be fascinated by David Mallory (Robert Gibson), a blind young man who has been given her father Bill's eyes in compliance with Bill's wishes . . . but Jill will be in the dark about the eye transfer.

So pretty Brenda, recently married in real life to dentist Robert Rifkin, is having a big emotional splash on the show. A native Californian, Brenda slipped into showbix relatively early, entering the World Beauty Pageant at 17 as Miss California USA. In 1971, she sang and danced on Bob Hope's Christmas tour, before moving on to guest shots on TV. A role in the movie, Taxi Driver, moved Brenda up a notch with local producers. Brenda can be seen almost daily on the soap opera and the Dickson version of a taut Jill ready to explode shouldn't go unnoticed by Hollywood insiders.

CHANNEL CHATTER: Christopher Reeve, who was Ben Harper up to a year ago in Love of Life (CBS), has won the coveted title role in the multi-million dollar movie, Superman, which co-stars Marlon Brando and Gene Hackman. Reeve tested for the part but didn't know he had it until a friend called him and told him a gossip columnist had announced him as Superman. An hour later, his agent called and made the casting official . . . Frank Latimore has joined the cast of Guiding Light (CBS) as Dr. Emmett Scott. Late show movie fans can see a much younger Frank Latimore by tuning in such film favorites of the '40s as The Dolly Sisters, The Razor's Edge, Black Magic, and 13 Rue Madeleine . . . David Carlton Stambaugh, who plays Hank Latimore in Love of Life, is in Hollywood playing Toby, the tow-headed Little Leaguer, in the sequel to Bad News Bears. David's been out of soap opera for a month and will return when his role in the movie is finished.

PLOT PORTENTS: Trish may be out and around, living in a new apartment with Brooke on Days of Our Lives (NBC), but no one is coming close to solving her problems, or dealing with her personality changes. Meanwhile, Linda is drawn into the confused picture as Mickey prepares his defence of Mike. So it's a churning time for Salem characters.

On Ryan's Hope (ABC) Jill Coleridge starts the week off with an unexpected turn of events while at the family beach house with Dr. Seneca Beaulac.

Dr. Snapper is arrested on The Young and the Restless for the death of Bill, protecting his mother, of course. An agonized Liz, unable to unveil the truth about Bill's death to the authorities, is having aberrations, believing Bill is still alive.

On Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman last week, we left our heroine in the middle of a plant explosion, and find the lady trapped in the plant . . . but not for long. The undaunted Mary is also spreading the news to one and all that Martha is indeed a kleptomaniac.

LEON REDBONE
. . . rock's great enigma

Leon Redbone: "Double Time" (Warner Bros. Bs 2971.
★★★★

Those familiar with Redbone's appearances on NBC's "Saturday Night" will know why I think he's rock's greatest enigma. The problem isn't musical—Redbone's interpretations of blues classics, vaudeville tunes and light jazz are as fine as anyone's singing, and Joel Dorn's production is marvelously sympathetic. Listen to "Mississippi River Blues," "Sheik of Araby," "Diddy Wa Diddie" or even the crazy "Shine On Harvest Moon." But Redbone treats these songs like gimmicks rather than cultural resources or simply songs he loves to sing — it is this lack of empathy which separates him from the greatest interpreters (Ry Cooder, for example). Still, for a guy who's only kidding around, Redbone's got a lot on the ball, and if you haven't heard him, you ought to.

PINK FLOYD: "Animals" (Columbia JC 34474). ★★

Most everything these space-rock pioneers do is so tedious and self-consciously "important" that it is hard to listen to them with any pleasure. But lately, David Gilmour has begun to come up with some really pretty acoustic guitar lines (on the "Pig" songs here), and Rober Waters' singing sounds less forced, I almost mistook excerpts from their last album for Dylan, when I heard it on the radio; the problem is that this time I knew who it was, and I also anticipated the interminable synthesizer freakouts which fill the spaces between moments of good stuff.

DERRINGER: "Sweet Evil" (Blue Sky PZ 34470). ★★

On the basis of their first album, Derringer seemed like the best teen-oriented hard rock around. This time, though the band still plays well, the material is a let-down — perhaps the trouble is that frontman Rick Derringer can pull off the sweetness easily but that evil is largely beyond him. But you might still listen to the Derringer-Cynthia Weil anthem, "I Didn't Ask to Be Born," for a kick.

JANIS IAN: "Miracle Row" (Columbia PC 34440). ★★★

On the whole, this seems to me the most admirable album Ian has made. She has traded in her adolescent angst for a more mature, and perhaps fashionable, style of melancholy -- she sounds like Carole King auditioning for cabaret, on some songs, and on others reminds of the pre- "Blue" Joni Mitchell. Perhaps because she produces herself, the music also has a warmer sense. If Ian could write a successful cheerful song someday, she might become one of the most attractive performers we have. (The one attempt here, "Slow Dance Romance," is totally artificial.)

MARTHA REEVES: "The Rest of My Life" (Arista AL 4105). ★★

Once one of the greatest rock singers of the age, Reeves' last two albums have been catastrophic. First Richard Perry's expensive production extravaganza, and now this hodgepodge of styles. What rescues the album is a pair of tracks, including the title song, produced by General Johnson. These at least have some of the feeling that Martha and the Vandellas rode the top of the charts with. Get a new copy of "Heatwave" instead.

Collectibles

By JOHN HEARN

Enjoyable letter from Elizabeth van der Minne of Kleena Kleene, B.C., who owns a chatelaine on which hangs "a set of scissors, a thimble, a fan that holds pins, a little notebook and a tiny flask in which, I presume, the lady would carry her smelling salts." She goes on to describe the design which is predominantly floral and concludes that it might have belonged to a lady who loved gardening.

First let's identify a chatelaine. Originally the word referred to the mistress of a stately home but it came to be used for the set of keys which she carried on long chains — usually finely wrought and elegant. The chatelaine became very popular during the Victorian era as a piece of costume jewelry. They were often made in precious metals and ornate designs. There were chatelaines for different purposes and this one clearly belonged to a high class dressmaker. The tiny flask did indeed hold smelling salts, not for the owner but for clients who fainted when they were squeezed into tight bodices.

Chatelaines are not easily come by these days. They are much sought after collector's items ranging in price from about $25 to $250 according to material and condition. Oddly enough, those made of steel or electroplate are among the most valuable. That is because they are subject to rust and therefore those surviving in good condition are much more rare than those in sterling.

Comic book fan Jim Gerrard of London, Ont., asks if Classic Comics are on their way up.

My guess is that they are — in a big way. My own price guide lists No. 1 as The Three Musketeers, at $30 in mint condition, a price which I suspect is already badly out of date. Classics are bound to be highly collectible. They have all the qualifications — immense quantities printed, immense quantities lost, a common theme — and an identifiable set to challenge the collector.

Started in 1941 and finally discontinued in 1970, the set runs to 169 titles providing a complete literary education for the non-reader. Within reason they are also very identifiable in that most issues list all the others on the back — up to date. In other words, if you have No. 16, Gulliver's Travels, and the list on the back cover shows up to No. 99, Hamlet, then you can be pretty sure the yours is a reprint. If the back cover list stops at No. 16 then yours is probably the first edition. The series changed its name after No. 35 to Classics Illustrated.

John Hearn will be pleased to hear your comments on collectibles. Mail can be sent to Box 4090, Station A Toronto M5W 1M9.

The Stars of Yesterday

Where Are They Today?

THE GREAT ONE AS 'SMOKEY'

LAS VEGAS — Jackie Gleason and his beautiful blonde wife Marilyn were celebrating their first wedding anniversary while engaging in a minor argument.

By way of celebration they were enjoying a multicourse dinner with the finest wines and topped off by a cake with a candle at Caesar's Palace here.

By way of argument, they were discussing whether or not Jackie's 13-year-old stepson (Marilyn's son) was going to be allowed to see Gleason's newest picture, "Smokey and the Bandit," which in its present form includes some rough-to-raunchy language.

"Oh, of course he'll see the picture," Marilyn said of her son. "Now I personally don't use the kind of language the script called for, and I don't like to hear it used.

"But we are in the 20th Century — almost the 21st. And children are going to hear that kind of talk.

"It's part of life today.

"I remember when Jackie found out our son had gone to see that Robert Mitchum picture — 'The Friends of Eddie Coyle,' wasn't it? — he almost had a fit.

"He said, 'You didn't really let him go to see a picture like that, did you?'

"He was shocked.

"I explained to him that whether we like it or not the world has changed in the last several years, and we'll simply have to adjust to the fact.

"And besides there's almost no way you can keep a boy from seeing a picture if he's determined to see it.

"Of course I want my son to know — and he does know — that some of the language he hears on the screen isn't the language we used or the language he shoud use.

"But I don't think we can protect him from it."

Gleason finally grudgingly conceded that his bride was probably right — up to a point. That it's next to impossible to keep an adolescent youngster from seeing a movie he's determined to see.

However, he wouldn't give an inch on the question of whether or not their boy should see "Smokey and the Bandit."

"No, sir," the Great One declared, "I'm not going to let him see that picture.

"If he were to ask, 'Can I see that, daddy?' I'd be very reluctant to say yes.

"I think it ought to have an R rating in the first place.

"So why did I make a picture like that?

"Well," Gleason was thoughtful for a moment, "when I found out the kind of language I'd have to use, I decided I could do it and make it appetizing. Funny, you know."

But Jackie didn't know that.

"On the other hand, though, how are you going to protect them from the stuff that's being made today?

"I do think, though," Gleason said, taking yet another point of view, "audiences are getting a little more discriminating. And more and more they're wanting entertainment that will take them away from themselves, because they don't want to think about what's happening to them now or what may happen in the future."

Hollywood Hotline

HOLLYWOOD — Raymond Burr is going to play an investigative reporter (aren't all reporters supposed to investigate?) on NBC-TV this season, because he'd like another shot at playing the Pope.

The Emmy-winning actor candidly says that he'll star in a new series "Kingston: Confidential," in hopes of socking away enough to finance a movie about the late Pope John XXIII whom he played in a movie-for-television.

"I want a lot more money than I have," Burr announced during a recent breakfast in Los Angeles, "because I have a project I want to control. I want to be able to put up all the money."

The church has approved his plan to make a picture about Pope John, and he has "a commitment with (Carlo) Ponti," Burr said. So others are involved.

But when the film he has in mind goes into production, he's determined to be the boss.

To suggest the scale of the picture he's planning, he estimated it would require four years of preproduction work.

On the subject of "Kingston," its star thinks it can succeed even though every other newspaper-oriented television series has flopped.

"City rooms, presses, the mechanics of putting out a paper became the stars of those earlier shows," Burr claimed. "People will be the stars of 'Kingston.' . . . I believe in communications. I've always wanted to see a newspaper story successfully done."

Burr has more than normal interest in communications, because he owns a major share of The Fiji Sun, a seven-day-a-week paper in the Fiji Islands.

Its competition is 104 years old, but Burr already has the larger circulation.

The star trusts that "Kingston" will get off to a better start than "Perry Mason" and "Ironside" did, since, in his opinion, "The first seven 'Ironsides' were disasters."

RAYMOND BURR
. . . wants control

Asked what he thought went wrong with the second "Perry Mason" series, a Monte Markham vehicle, Burr declared, "I never saw the second 'Perry Mason.'

"I didn't even see the 'Perry Mason' I was in.

"The first half season of 'Perry Mason,'" he went on, "was tied into a very tight format so that Perry Mason was less than human.

"He had no relatives, no love affair. He'd never been in a war. Eating potato chips at the desk in his office with Della Street was as sexy as he got."

"Kingston," by contrast, has a background and is fairly complex, Burr said, enlarging:

"He had background in sports. Then he became an investigative reporter; then a foreign correspondent; then a columnist."

The show, intended for an April unveiling, will have San Francisco as its principal location.

Commenting on televison in general, Burr said he sees a lot of it.

"But it bothers me to watch anything I'm in. If I had to watch myself, I'd be in another business."

Tatum O'Neal, like Frank Sinatra, has come back out of retirement — again.

PLAN Nº. 75-2180

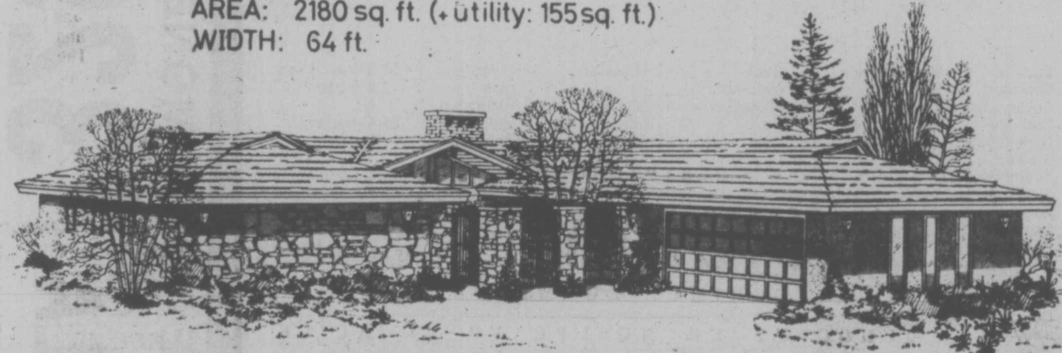
WIDTH: 64 ft.



Garden Court Entry

An attractive garden court entry sets the luxury pattern for this imaginative family home. Designed for casual living and gracious entertaining. An interesting contrast of textures is achieved by the use of field-stone on the frontal areas and standard stucco on the balance of the walls.

On entering one is immediately aware of an expansive view across the sunken living room, through the glass window walls that rise to the top of the valuted ceiling. A glass sliding door opens to the large covered patio, where in good weather, indoor-outdoor entertaining is made easy. The over-sized, see through fireplace dominates the living/family rooms.

A most unique, cosy conversational pit, in the family room is indeed the focal point of the entire house. Forming a horseshoe around the fireplace, it could easily prove to be the most popular area for visitors and owners alike. There is still plenty of room left in the family room for game tables and recreational equipment. A glass wall slides open to the rear view patio.

An informal and well designed kitchen combines with the nook. There is handy service access from the kitchen to the dining, nook, and sunken family room.

The entrance to the double garage could be relocated at the front of the building if necessitated by the lot. In the garage there is a large storage locker, an outside exit and a door to the utility.

The utility — cum — mud room or storage has a convenient outside door, and a pocket door to the kitchen. A wash-up, powder room in this area is most practical and is sure to receive frequent use.

Practical and luxurious, yet extremely large, the master bedroom has ceiling-to-floor rear view windows, which open to the patio and garden. The three-piece ensuite bath and huge walk-in wardrobe complete the comfort and convenience of the master bedroom suite.

Off the inner hall is a full bath that serves the other bedrooms and could easily be made into a twin vanity for a more practical use.

Plans for design No. 75-2180 may be obtained at a cost of $70 for the first set and $9 for each additional set, plus $3.50 for postage and handling. B.C. residents please include 7% sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs Series No. 33 featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas plus more than 300 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.25 ($1.75 plus 50 cents postage and handling.)

To order these items please send cheque or money order payable to Home of the Week. Address your orders to Home of the Week, c/o Victoria Press Ltd. 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C. V5Y 1R2.

FOR THE FIRST TIME in their careers Ethel Merman (left) and Marty Martin will co-star on a Broadway stage. They will be the entire cast — Cyril Ritchard will narrate — in a once-only show May 15 devoted to songs from shows they have done. The show will be a benefit for the Friends of the Theatre in New York.

No Shortage of Energy in '80s

Barring unforeseen circumstances like another Mideast war, no major world energy shortage is expected in the 1980s, according to the Economic Research Institute for the Middle East.

The nonprofit organization said the world's daily demand would increase from 118.2 million barrels in 1975 to 184.2 million in 1985, but that demand would be met and there will be no serious energy shortage, at least in the first half of the decade.

Readers who recall Edith Fowke's much admired Sally Go Round the Sun will welcome her latest offering, Ring Around the Moon. The book is intended for children between the ages of six and eleven, but it may also appeal to nostalgic adults.

Ring Around the Moon contains riddles, rounds, tongue twisters, charms, verses about love and marriage and several varieties of songs. Each page includes one or more graceful sketches by Judith Gwyn Brown, which make the book as easy to look at as it is tempting to read (and sing) aloud.

Edith Fowke's material comes from our Anglo-Saxon tradition, plus other items which "drifted up from the United States" or originated in Canada. The majority of the items in Ring Around the Moon can be described as quaint or old-fashioned. Judging by the repertoire my daughter brought home from summer camp last year, I'd say that either a revised edition or a second volume should soon be in order.

Edith Fowke teaches folklore at York University and her activity in her chosen field has been prodigious. Last fall saw the publication of her 350-page Folklore of Canada, a collection of what she terms "genuine folklore" as "used by the folk." This is not at all the same as "fakelore," which is produced by writers who bowdlerize and romanticize the real thing. (Ms. Fowke classifies many of the Canadian children's books which are based on Indian legends as "fakelore," for instance, and points out that "most genuine Indian tales are not considered suitable for children.")

Folklore of Canada is organized along ethnic lines. First come examples of Indian and Eskimo tales, followed by songs and stories of the "Canadiens"; next in line are what may at first seem a disproportionate number of stories, riddles, yarns and whathaveyou from the "Anglo-Canadian" sector of our society, and the book concludes with a representative group from the "Canadian mosaic." (German, Ukrainian, Icelandic and Jewish material was chosen.) Throughout, Ms. Fowke's criteria have been based on "the size of the (ethnic) group and the length of time it has been established in Canada. Our aim is to emphasize the traditions that have been preserved, adapted or created in this country."

All this may sound discouragingly scholarly or too specialized to be of interest to the general reader. But, in fact, Folklore of Canada is a wonderfully rich and varied plum pudding of a book, packed throughout with delicious surprises. It promises to be endlessly re-readable, too, which should make it an enduring pleasure to own. Here are a few excerpts which caught my eye:

An eyewitness to "The Last Sun Dance" (held at Fort Edmonton in the late 1870's) reports that after their agonizing ordeal the young men had their wounds staunched with "the fine brown powder taken from dried toadstools, which to my own knowledge, will stop bleeding . . ."

(A riddle) "I haven't got it and I don't want it, but if I had it, I wouldn't sell it for a thousand pounds." (Answer: A bald head.)

"Did you hear about the Newfie who went ice-fishing and caught 150 pounds of ice?"

German-Canadian preventative for freckles: "To keep a child from getting freckles, rub a live gosling over its face."

Well, obviously I can't go on quoting from this marvellous book all day. I hope you'll decide to explore its riches for yourself.

Finally, as if to demonstrate that Canadian literature has grown capable of almost anything, along comes an extraordinary little volume titled Sandman's Land. Its author, Dr. Keith Floyd, is a clinical psychologist at Ponoka's Alberta Hospital. His book is based on "principles of progressive relaxation." It's a bedtime story which actually puts children to sleep, and has been successfully used to stimulate creativity. Dr. Floyd believes Sandman's Land is also potentially useful in the treatment of the mentally retarded and emotionally disturbed, and an appendix describes his discoveries to date.

He prefaces his book with these words from Ralph Waldo Emerson: "There never was a child so lovely but his mother was glad to get him asleep." Frazzled parents may find Sandman's Land a worthwhile investment.

HAYDEN . . . ham at sea

Sterling Hayden's Voyage is the sort of book some critic is certain to call a "blockbuster,'; but I believe that this particular block has already been busted beyond repair. "Epic" novels of the sea are generally foul weather in fiction, and Voyage is not responsive to the helm. I always liked Hayden as an understated actor, but as a writer he is a terrible ham.

This is a book with a cast of thousands. They come at you so thick and fast that it is a mnemonic feat simply to remember them. Some appear for a few pages only to disappear forever into the enormous bulk of the book. It seems to me that there are several key characters who are 6 feet 5 inches, and the bulk of the male cast are sexually either monstrously over- or underendowed. To my way of thinking, a quantitative approach to the subject of sexuality is almost infallibly the sign of a bad book.

Voyage opens with a rather amateurish synopsis-like introduction to its people. The "robber baron" who owns the ships strides up and down in expensively furnished rooms, gesticulating with a cigar, and saying vapid things. The sailors who are his "slaves" seem to be bent, almost to a man, on securing some unsavory form of sexual satisfaction. No one is doing anything normal or ordinary — one more negative sign, in my experience.

"Rabelaisian" is another adjective that will be invoked to praise Voyage and here I would like to set the record straight. Rabelais was one of the intellectual giants of his time and a mysogynist besides. Women are used in his books only for satirical or rhetorical purposes. His language was not "rollicking," whatever that word may mean as it is most often employed, but learned and peppered with neologisms. In short, Hayden's novel is no more Rabelaisian than it is epic.

Voyage is a rudderless ship whose scuppers are awash with sociological sloshings, with brave seamen, cruel, cowardly officers and insatiable owners. Hayden is writing a "protest" novel among other things, and when Neptune's Car — the ship making this voyage — lies becalmed off South America, it is because the winds of progress are not blowing. True to the cinematic stereotype, the men philosophize in the forecastle and are denied a hearing on the bridge.

Hayden knows something about ships and has a decent eye for description. He can write a graceful sentence now and then, but his dialogue could only be spoken by character actors of the 30s and 40s. There is a delicate fellow named MacLeod whose lines could not be made acceptable even by the young Leslie Howard. Among the crew, we have a one-legged poet, an elderly voyeur, a Douglas Fairbanks Sr. daredevil and a horde of anonymous extras.

Voyage tells the story of the firt iron windjammer to sail out of Monhegan. In an attempt at counterpoint that is heavier than Neptune's Car itself, Hayden drops another ship into the water — the luxurious yacht Atalanta — where we find the shipowner's daughter and her party. Like the captain of Neptune's Car, she writes letters home, chronicling the pregnant differences between the two passages.

Violence is Hayden's idea of vivid writing. A gouged-out eye lying on the deck, a man's spine cracking as the brutal mate forces him to carry an anvil. There is enough drinking in Voyage to sink both windjammer and yacht, and many a coy reflection on Victoria sexual inhibition by one of the beautiful young women aboard the Atalanta. When she is not sizing up men, she is measuring mores.

Voyage is exactly 700 pages, just about the length of The Magic Mountain or Crime and Punishment, but, unlike them, it seems interminable because its structure does not organize or support the material. While the other two have the unified complexity of great cathedrals, Voyage resembles a rabbit warren of incident piled upon incident, a surfeit of violence and pseudo-intensity tossed together like a salad. The very thickness of the book will nevertheless be regarded as a virtue. In such novels, length is seen as a function of the author's potency, his "imaginative breadth," his "inexhaustible invention," his "passion," his "panoramic eye." If he cannot win over the reader by craft he will wear him down by attrition. Like the rapacious shipowners he describes, Hayden grossly overloads his vessel.

But with all its faults, many readers will love Voyage still. The ocean is so rich in connotation, don't you find? And a ship, so fragile, you know, like a human being afloat on "the destructive element." Why, those very Yale boys who called Moby Dick one of the "10 most boring books" will run out and buy Voyage the very day it is published.

Slow Journeys on Pacific

PETHICK . . . detailed care

In an age of satellite communication, we tend to think that the northwest coast took an awfully long time being discovered. We forget, of course, or more correctly can scarcely conceive of how slow and perilous ocean-going was in the days of sail; that it took months or even years for word of a new resource region to filter to the power centres of decision-making, and that once there the same bureaucratic ineptitude and delays that we complain about today in government often inhibited the translation of the word into action.

In the case of the northwest coast, the incentive for exploration was a strong one — the prospect of highly-prized furs — but the number of nations engaged in the trade, and the diplomatic manoeuvres in capitals far removed from the northwest coast made it an extra-slow, complicated business.

First Approaches to the Northwest Coast spans the 50-year period from the first searches eastward by Bering and Chirikov in the ships St. Peter and St. Paul, to the signing of the Nootka Convention by Spain and Britain in 1790. Even at that time, as the author points out, it was still not realized that Nootka was on an island.

Despite the vastness of the northwest coast, the visiting foreigners at times fell over each other in their pursuit of sea-otter pelts, and the centre of it all was Nootka Sound. Other writers have covered the ground but none in such detail as the author of First Approaches. Pethick has treated the subject with the same care that he gave to James Douglas: Servant of Two Empires.

The publication of this book is especially timely as the 200th anniversary of Cook's landing approaches.

Victorian Scandals

Remember when the Jeremiahs said radio would spell the death of newspapers, and when the same prophets of doom saw television as the death knell of the written word? Certainly, things were tricky for a while, but as the novelty of the new media wore off the varied forms of communication became interdependent, each medium reinforcing the others and the oldest — the written word — still pre-eminent because of its permanence.

The current interest in events of the 19th century provides an excellent example of this. John Galsworthy's The Forsyte Saga was out of print when the BBC adapted it as a brilliant television series. Following this, the books were re-printed and more copies were sold than the combined total of the original editions.

Other television series followed, notably Upstairs-Downstairs, and their continuing popularity has happily caused writers of all descriptions to examine the wealth of untapped material that the 19th century has to offer.

During the past week or so I have reviewed new biographies of Lord Melbourne and King Edward VII, but this kind of work would have appeared anyway, without the spur of television. What interests me particulary is how writers are now zeroing in on events and aspects of the last century that have never before been dealt with in depth.

So far nothing of consequence has been published, at least not that I know about. Meanwhile, as the major writers prepare their quills and ruminate, others are away and running.

In his elegant biography of Melbourne, Philip Zeigler infuriated me by his narrowness of vision. Even major events of far-reaching consequence received only cursory mention. The sin of omission applied even to Melbourne's immediate family.

A notable instance is the briefest of references to Anthony Ashley, the future seventh Earl of Shaftesbury who, in 1830, four years before Melbourne became prime minister for the first time, married Melbourne's niece, Emily.

In terms of things accomplished Shaftesbury is a far more important figure than Melbourne. Shaftesbury used parliament, first the House of Commons, and later the House of Lords, as a forum for his efforts to ameliorate the plight of the suffering working class. As the upstart Melbourne held the poor in contempt, Zeigler, almost in deference to his subject, also ignores them.

To the best of my knowledge no life on Shaftesbury has appeared since the J.L. and Barbara Hammond work was published some 55 years ago. He has been so completely forgotten that few people know that the famous statue of Eros in London's Piccadilly Circus is in fact the Shaftesbury Memorial.

A new major biography of Shaftesbury the reformer is long overdue, but for the moment we must be content with a dramatized biography (The Seventh Earl), the unlikely author of which is a retired Canadian teacher.

Grace Irwin's effort makes painful reading, partly because it reads like a religious tract, but chiefly because she has fallen into the common trap of the amateur, that of unconsciously adopting the language of the period ("sustenance of private potations" — "the persiflage of reception-line exchanges.")

Still, if you're prepared to grapple with the archaic language, the prim approach, and a text that could have been written by a pedantic Victorian curate, with additions supplied by a romantic Victorian spinster, you'll end up with a fairly clear idea of the enormous contribution made to the welfare of the masses by this rare, self-sacrificing, humanitarian aristocrat.

At a period when marital fidelity was considered the least of the virtues (either Lord Cowper or Lord Palmerston could have fathered Shaftesbury's wife, and no one could even guess who his mother-in-law's father was). Shaftesbury was considered to be an idealistic fool, both for revelling in a happy marriage and for squandering his fortune in efforts to better the lot of factory workers, climbing chimney-boys, the insane, and for fighting for reform in parliamentary representation.

A study of Shaftesbury's work shows the ugly side of the Victorian Age. While his contemporaries, Marx and Engels, were writing their works, including their Manifesto and Das Kapital, Shaftesbury was embarrassing parliament by publicly revealing the scandalous conditions that had motivated them.

Grace Irwin's tortured prose covers the details of Shaftesbury's work, but the most interesting section of her book is the lengthy chronological table which lists the events of his life along with contemporary events in British and world history.

* * *

In line with the telephoto lens approach now being used to focus on little known events of the 19th century, the Sunday Times team of Colin Simpson, Lewis Chester and David Leitch has written a racy, blow-by-blow account of a scandal that rocked London's high society and further damaged the already tarnished image of the royal family.

The normally never referred to scandal (in Christopher Hibbert's new biography of Edward VII it receives ten words) was the revelation that post office boys earned money in their spare time by selling their services in a male brothel at 19 Cleveland Street whose patrons were MPs, army officers, member of the aristocracy and, allegedly, Lord Arthur Somerset, equerry to the Prince of Wales, and intimates of the Prince of Wales' son, Prince Albert Victor.

It's an unsavory story and it's questionable whether it warranted the attention of such talented authors. Its chief interest lies in the fact that highly placed individuals (among them the prime minister and the Prince of Wales) succeeded in perverting justice and keeping the facts from public knowledge — facts that have only just been released by London's Public Records Office, 75 years after the event.

* * *

The suppression of the facts concerning the Cleveland Street Affair was in line with the prevailing hypocrisy which saw to it that any attempt to challenge the established order of respectability was effectively smothered.

This is made clear in yet another book on the period, Public Purity, Private Shame, in which author Ronald Pearsall exposes Victorian sexual hypocrisy.

Despite its lascivious content, the book is rather dull to read, presumably because the author opted for a turgid style to escape the label of sensationalist. He has allowed the facts to speak for themselves and heaven knows, they're hair-raising enough.

In the mid-Victorian period, we learn, behind the surface appearance of virtue lay the disquieting reality of repressed emotion and violence. Pornography was widely read, London alone had an army of 80,000 prostitutes, and children were commonly sexually exploited.

Much of the trouble was due to the non-recognition of marital breakdown and the banning of birth control literature, but the clergymen, doctors and journalists who expounded ideals ignored the social realities of rampant vice and hideous cruelty.

Next week, I hope to end what has become a series on the 19th century, by discussing a book that deals with the Industrial Revolution — the root cause of the horrors that disgraced Britain at a time when the nation was prosperous, an exploited empire was expanded, Britannia ruled the waves, Victoria the Good sat on her throne, God was in His heaven, and Lord Salisbury and his friends considered that all was right with the world.

The Case for Astrology

By JULIAN REID

For all the current interest in astrology, there is little solid evidence to support the astrologers' claims. Until now, the most extensive studies have been those of the French statistician Michel Gauquelin — but his conclusions were decidedly ambiguous. On the one hand, he found extensive evidence that human life is indeed profoundly influenced by cosmic rhythms; on the other, he was unable to verify a single astrological claim regarding the specific nature of that influence.

But now, in Astrogenetics, science writer Edmund Van Duesen offers the most impressive substantiation of astrological beliefs to date. He also demonstrates that the phenomena involved are in no way "occult," but can easily be explained in conventional scientific terms.

Van Deusen concentrates on the simplest and most basic of all astrological tenets — that there is a significant relationship between one's personality and the particular "sun-sign" under which one was born. Most of his book is devoted to statistical conclusions drawn from the hundreds of thousands of birth-dates he has tabulated and analysed in relation to the subsequent careers of the individuals involved.

Van Deusen's researches, as he puts it, "provide convincing proof that season of birth does have a direct influence on personality — at least to the extent that personality contributes to our choice of profession." For example, disproportionately many composers and U.S. congressmen were born under Capricorn, a sign which also produces disproportionately few librarians and labor-leaders. Van Deusen relates these statistics to the traditional qualities associated with this sign, which include both innate conservatism and inordinate love of prestige.

Similarly, traditionally "practical-minded" Virgo gives birth to disproportionately many bankers and disproportionately few musicians. And so it goes.

The cause of these correlations, Van Deusen believes, lies in our annual biorhythms. These produce seasonal fluctuations in a mother's biochemistry, which in turn affect the prenatal development of her infant. "Time of conception and birth determines the chemical environment the embryo will encounter in the mother's womb. Babies born during the same season have shared a common prenatal experience — different from all other babies.'" And this common experience has a common effect on the growth of their brains and bodies.

But birth-date, Van Deusen reminds us, is only one of several factors affecting personality-development. Others, every bit as important, include "our genetic inheritance, home environment, and social conditioning" — and it is their complex interplay, rather than any single one of them, that shapes us into the persons that we are.

ASTROGENETICS: How Your Parents' Genes and Your Season of Birth Can Influence Your Life, by Edmund Van Deusen. Doubleday. $8.95.

Costly Pictures

The Immortals is billed as "a brief introduction to mythology." Its authors, Derek and Julia Parker, scored a previous resounding success in the coffee-table-book trade with The Compleat Astrologer, which boasted a fairly substantial text along with its many pictures. In this new effort, however, the be-all and the end-all is obviously the illustrations.

The text, such as it is, is a pleasantly forgettable once-over-lightly of the subject. The pictures — 186 of them, including 16 pages in glossy color — are an interesting but sometimes over-familiar assortment, well-reproduced in a layout that doesn't always how them off to full advantage.

Offhand, I can think of a half-dozen other books on the same topic which offer more pictures and a better text for a significantly lower price. — J.R.

Laughter, Wisdom In the Letters Of a Special Man

—Novelist Wilfrid Sheed

By JACK SCOTT

Moments of Great Perception are awesome, even to the humble book reviewer. Thus the sudden revelation of what gives E. B. White his true greatness comes as a realization to be cherished.

We've long known that White was a masterful writer, originator of the so-called New Yorker style (and a dam'd fine style it remains) and one of the most perceptive observers of life's passing scene. What has not been so apparent until the publishing of these letters, spanning the years between 1908 (when he was nine) and 1976, is that E. B. Whilte was and is among nature's noblemen.

Almost without exception these letters are the letters of a beautiful man — a wise, restrained, gentle, modest, courageous, warm, funny and, above all, intelligent human being who just happened to have the knack of putting it all down, perfectly, on paper.

Radiates Optimism

The exceptions — a single letter which establishes the astounding fact that White at one time had a psychiatrist (why in the world such an apparently well-adjusted, if finely-strung, man would seek medical help may never be known) and some ill-tempered, churlish remarks about Ernest Hemingway that are best forgotten — can be easily dismissed since this is, first and last, a book that will provide sustained pleasure. For what it's worth, this reviewer was genuinely sorry that it should ever come to an end.

It is not just that White is among the most sensitive and unpretentious writers who ever faced the frozen wastes of a blank page, but that he should remain, at 78, such a pillar of common sense. For that reason alone this collection of letters radiates optimism. The reader will find himself concluding that so long as a single man can think like E. B. White there's hope still left for the human race.

That may suggest that this is a serious book. It can hardly be called that. Just as comedy is the essential ingredient that permeates White's novels, essays, short stories and poems, so the reward of laughter shines through in those letters he wrote to his relatives, friends and, indeed, almost anyone who wrote him.

In one of his letters he gives an introspective self-description that may explain the impact he has had on readers and writers alike. "I discovered a long time ago," he notes, "that writing of the small things of the day, the trivial matters of the heart, the inconsequential but near things of this living, was the only kind of creative work which I could accomplish with any sincerity or grace."

Sincerity and grace. Above all, those qualities are the answer to any of the frequent protests of inadequacy that White makes of his own abilities. That, of course, is almost a New Yorker kind of professionalism — the comic, throw-away device of being helpless in a society that clearly has it out for you. White has that "studied informaltiy", as someone has called it, and does not avoid the humor to be found in doing a thing badly. His essays on country life, for instance, always seem to have him as a victim. Yet there is a genuineness about his losing battle with life that takes them beyond mere technique.

It is unclear whether White ever intended that these letters should see the light of print, though they are almost suspiciously printable. But certainly letter-writing has been a substitute for conversation for White for purely natural geographic reasons. In 1938 he and his wife, Katharine — she, by the way, was herself an influential editor with the New Yorker and co-editor with her husband of "A Subtreasury of American Humor" — moved to Maine to the sumptuous, 200-year-old farm he once called "my private zoo." Though they commuted regularly and continued to write for the New Yorker, letters became a part of their lives.

White, himself, it should be noted, has worried (needlessly) about the effect of prose intended for private eyes. "It never occured to me, when I got into this thing," he wrote a friend, "that it was an entirely different kind of exposure from the ones I had been used to as a writer of prose pieces. A man who publishes his letters becomes a nudist — nothing shields him from the world's gaze except his bare skin."

Idealism Evident

It can be said — as it was recently of the second collection of Virginia Woolf's letters — that posterity is the winner and that, like Virginia, White remains a prodigious writer in any medium.

At least four of these letters are indicative of the idealism (or is it it merely naivete?) that has motivated White's writing. Though they are not in character with the book they deserve to be quoted.

When Alexander Woollcott agreed, astonishingly, to lend his name to a testimonial advertisement (for Seagram's whisky) White wrote him, in part: "I don't give much of a damn whether Mrs. Vanderbilt endorses or not, because I am not particularly engrossed in Mrs. Vanderbilt, what she does, wears, smokes or drinks. I do, however, give a damn where your interests lie, and what your ties are; it seems important to me; it seems to have a bearing on many other things which are close to my life and love. I have read you for years. When I heard you plead for civil liberty on the air, I was excited and moved by so eloquent and honest a shot fired toward what I know to be the enemy . . . The harm to me (in Woollcott's endorsement) is that the next time I come across you, in the mail, in print, I feel I must be on my guard, must see what the catch is, may have to read half way through before I can determine whether this is an affiliated utterance or an unaffiliated utterance . . . When a signature is bought for its own sake, the matter above it becomes suspect."

A Losing Crusade

When the New York Herald Tribune editorialized, in 1947, in support of the blacklist of the so-called "Hollywood Ten," White wrote: "I think security in critical times takes care of itself if the people and the institutions take care of themselves. First in line is the press. Security, for me, took a tumble not when I read that there were Communists in Hollywood but when I read your editorial in praise of loyalty testing and thought control. If a man is in health, he doesn't need to take anybody else's temperature to know where he is going. If a newspaper or a motion picture company is in health, it can get rid of Communists and spies simply by reading proof and by watching previews."

When, in 1964, a correspondent quesitoned White's concept of a world federal government, long one of his losing crusades, White wrote: "As for the United Nations developing or evolving into a government, I see no chance of it short of a complete overhaul of the Charter — virtually a total rewriting of it. The Charter affirms and extends national sovereignty in almost every clause. However, the total effect of the UN is often quite good, in that its very existence suggests the theme of universal government and the rule of law. It suggests our goal, though it fails to provide the machinery for reaching that goal. Curiously enough, the biggest strides toward unity have been taken in the field of economics, with the common market in Europe showing good health. This is encouraging. It may be that our political structure will take shape from our economic structure — but there will have to be a few great statesmen to lead the world along this road."

When, only last year, the Xerox Corporation tried, briefly, to subsidize magazine stories. White wrote: "Sponsorship in the press is an invitation to corruption and abuse. The temptations are great, and there is an opportunity behind every bush. A funded article is a tempting morsel for any publication — particularly for one that is having a hard time making ends meet. A funded assignment is a tempting dish for a writer, who may pocket a much larger fee than he is accustomed to getting. And sponsorship is attractive to the sponsor himself, who, for one reason or another, feels an urge to penetrate the editorial columns after being so long pent up in the advertising pages. These temptations are real, and if the barriers were to be let down I believe corruption and abuse would soon follow . . . I don't want IBM or the National Rifle Association providing me with a funded spectacular when I open my paper. I want to read what the editor and the publisher have managed to dig up on their own —and paid for out of the till."

The reader is exposed to the more serious side of White, too, in letters relating to "The Elements of Style" by William Strunk, Jr. White knew and admired Strunk at Cornell and, in 1959, revised and modernized the book, still a model for every would-be writer, though White has admitted that there are some people who will never write a good declarative sentence.

Some letters deal, too, with the beautiful children's books that have come from White's typewriter, notably Charlotte's Web, surely his masterpiece. It is doubtful if any adult ever wrote more directly, without the slightest hint of talking down, to a child. Characteristically he once sent some children who had shared their essays with him a wonderful gift — a blown-out egg laid by his goose, Felicity. They could keep it forever, he wrote, to remind them of craftsmanship and beauty.

Unlike so many successful writers, White's entire life seems to have been idyllic, but he would have us think that what seems a happy childhood life was, in fact, beset with worry.

"I was uneasy," he writes, "about practically everything: the uncertainty of the future, the dark of the attic, the panoply and discipline of school, the transitoriness of life, the mystery of the church and of God, the frailty of the body, the sadness of afternoon, the shadow of sex, the distant challenge of love and marriage, the far-off problem of a livelihood."

Building a Wall

Much of this anxiety (which perhaps explains the psychiatrist) disappeared when he moved to Maine. From there he wrote to a friend, "I am building a stone wall, I understand that all literary people, at one time or another, build a stone wall. It's because it is easier than writing."

There is hardly a page of this thick book that does not offer a reward — usually a chuckle — so that the reviewer is hard put to give examples. Still:

In a wartime letter to his brother Stanley: "The New Yorker is a worse mad-house than ever now, on account of the departure of everybody for the wars, leaving only the senile, the psychoneurotic, the maimed, the halt, and the goofy to get out the magazine. There is hardly a hormone left in the place."

To a woman friend: "When I was young and full of beans I used to keep a diary, only I called it a 'journal' to make it sound more impressive. I wrote in it so steadily and over so many years that it is eight inches thick and contains probably the world's finest collection of callow and insipid remarks."

To Harold Ross, his editor: "Could you put a little notice on the bulletin board asking people not to use the stapling machine on newsbreaks? I have to unstaple them with my fingernails. I bleed quite freely, and it all runs into time, too." (White still writes the lines that follow 'newsbreaks', those cockeyed errors that so often appear in the daily press.)

To a complimentary reader: "I suppose readers who feel friendly toward someone whose work they like seldom realize that they are drawn more toward a set of aspirations than toward a human being."

And to another: "My wife is helpful to me in my writing, but she does not write. She is an editor. An editor is a person who knows more about writing than writers do, but who has escaped the terrible desire to write. I have been writing since 1906 and it is high time I got over it. A writer, however, writes as long as he lives. It is the same as breathing except that it is bad for one's health. Some of my writings have won prizes but awards of that sort are not very much fun or satisfaction and I would rather have a nice drink of ginger ale, usually."

Dorothy Guth, who did the actual collection of the letters (though White himself writes the biographical bridges) is the daughter of White's close friend and colleague. Her own introduction may say it all when she observes: "To E. B. White everyday life has always been fully as absorbing as the world of letters, and his delight in bringing off a successful hatch of goose eggs is as real as his satisfaction at bringing off a good sentence or a good book."
